Missile Firing Success

Gleaming Atlas Zooms Southeast On Seventh Test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. UP — The Air Force successfully fired the nation's biggest missile - the mighy Atlas - hundreds of miles over the Atlantic Saturday in a spectacular seventh test flight.

The gleaming black and silver missile soared some 600 miles to an "impact area" in the ocean southeast of here, sweeping through the sky 70 or 80 miles above the ground at the peak of its trajectory, it was reported.

The Air Force announced shortly after the launching at noon e.s.t. that the "limited range test of several hundred miles appeared normal throughout the entire flight."

Two Blew Up

This indicated the trouble with the control system which caused the last two Atlases launched to blow up before completion of their flights had been solved. Convair builds the 5,500 - mile - range missiles.

Watching from the central control building not far from the launching pad as the 100-ton sky giant thundered up into a layer of clouds was Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff. He saw a good show.

The 10-hour countdown leading up to firing reached zero evidently without a hitch. But the Atlas did not budge from its launching stand at first. It took about 17 seconds for enough pressure to build up inside the 70-foot missile. Then the fuel and liquid oxygen oxidizer streamed into the combustion chamber at the bottom of the missile.

Spray Of Smoke

The two 135,000 - pound thrust engines which powered the Atlas ignited in a great spray of flame and smoke. Within a few more seconds they built up the necessary thrust to heave the heavy missile skyward.

The Atlas has flown six times previously. Its first successful flight was on Dec. 17, when it flew about the same distance as Saturday. Before that it had blown up a few thousand feet off the ground in the first two launchings.

On Feb. 7 and Feb. 20 on its fifth and sixth tests, the Atlas blew up in the sky after about two minutes of flight.

The Day of Triumph—He is not here; He has risen.

New Ideas Prompted In State

Would Provide Way To By-Pass More Tax Needs

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The national recession is stirring up new fiscal ideas for the 1958, Legislature, including tapping a few jealously guarded reserves as means of bypassing any immediate need for new taxes.

While Gov. Earl Long's budget leaders have not said so publicly, current thinking points to a new possibility of expanding the present "wait and see" attitude, waiting for the recession dust to settle.

State fiscal experts said no matter what plans were devised, some budgets will have to be chopped.

Expansion Increases

The ever increasing expansion of many budgets faces an abrupt halt. The Governor's Budget Committee a week and a half ago sounded a warning it was getting sore about some frills and luxuries.

Many economists have been talking about the possibility the national slump will start fading in July. Louisiana must prepare its government budget before then. The Legislature opens in May.

Only vague hints exist now, but it is always possible the Legislature may consider holding the line until the recession trend, up or down, is certain.

Rep. T. T. Fields, backed by Rep. Horace Lynn Jones, recently voiced a desire to tap the 14 million dollars taxpayers now contribute to teachers retirement, diverting the money to help sustain the teacher pay raise in the upcoming fiscal year. Teachers would continue their own retirement payments.

Similar Ideas

There has been criticism in the past, and again recently, that the state is contributing more than necessary. Similar ideas can be expected from other lawmakers.

The threat of new taxes still overshadows everything in sight for the 60-day Legislature. If a business upturn could be sighted, it would mean rosier legislative planning.

In the "Louisiana Business Outlook," Dr. Stephen L. McDonald, head of Louisiana State University's department of finance in the college of commerce, emphasized

Accidents Cut After Safety Plans Adapted

CHICAGO (AP) — America's cities and states loosed a salvo of new ideas and experiments in the fight against traffic accidents in 1957. Their efforts paid off.

A survey showed Saturday that officials in states and cities scoring improved safety records tore into the traffic accident problem with nearly every device offering a glimmer of success.

The nation's traffic death toll was cut 3 per cent last year, totaling 38,500. Thirty states and 24 cities of more than 200,000 population figured in the decline.

Factors Credited

The officials directly involved credited these factors for the drop:

Stepped up police activities, public education, cooperation of public media, public acceptance of safety drives, activity of safety organizations, court activities and traffic engineering.

But each city and state tried its own method for getting results.

Here are some highlights of their reports made to the National Safety Council:

Train Officers

Fort Worth, Tex., which scored a 37 per cent drop in traffic fatalities, switched its police radio patrol division from primarily criminal investigation to traffic enforcement as well. Plans now call for training all general duty officers in traffic work.

Mayor Frank P. Ziedler of Milwaukee—43 per cent decrease—said:

"Reduction was achieved through excellent and far-reaching programming by the Milwaukee Safety Commission, including several pedestrian educational campaigns which led to strict enforcement of the jaywalking ordinance of 1957; extensive ele-

Right To Work Chances Look Good In State

BATON ROUGE, April 6 (UP)—A poll of Louisiana lawmakers is underway and so far results indicate "right to work" advocates have a much better chance to score in the 1958 Legislature than they thought several weeks ago, it was learned today.

State Sen. Jackson B. Davis of Shreveport said recently he will try to re-enact a right to work law which would ban compulsory union membership.

Backers of such a law generally concede that there is little chance of passing another right to work bill this year. But they are setting up for an all out offensive to shove through adoption of a constitutional amendment, and it appears they have a good chance to do just that.

A Poll Underway

United Press learned that the Louisiana Free Enterprise Association, the successor of the old Right To Work Council in 1953, is conducting the poll as well as an intensive membership campaign—stating the following as its immediate objectives:

—Restore the right to work law in Louisiana and preserve the law through the adoption of a constitutional amendment.

—Preserve the federal Taft - Hartley act.

—Maintain proper and equitable unemployment and workmen's compensation laws in Louisiana.

—Work toward the prevention of excessive taxation.

Talking To Legislators

Louis P. Niklaus, managing director of the Free Enterprise Association, confirmed that association members are button-holeing individual senators and representatives in a discreet poll to see how much of a chance the organization has for a favorable vote on a constitutional amendment. It is

MESSAGE OF HOPE

Christians Today Celebrate Easter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christians around the world celebrated in song and sermon once more the joyous age-old story of the risen Christ, with its eternal message of hope for mankind.

As Easter morning dawned, it found millions gathered for inspirational services — from small country churches to vast outdoor amphi-theaters, from the frigid polar wastes to the balmy tropics.

They asked divine guidance in conquering the problems of a nuclear age and man's own shortcomings.

Jubilant

In jubilant hymn they lifted their voices to commemorate the glad tidings of nearly 2,000 years ago—the resurrection of Christ after his crucifixion, with a promise of salvation.

Easter betokened many other things also: the advent of another spring, happy family reunions, Easter parades, and Easter egg hunts for the children.

Clouding the occasion was the tension between the East and West, the conflict in Indonesia, and the threat of battle in Cuba.

Prayers, Messages

But from the Christian world went prayers and messages beseeching a peaceful solution for these problems in the spirit of Jesus.

Powerful transmitters of the Radio Free Europe beamed words of faith and hope from American clergymen. In one of these, Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York said:

'Fight-Or-Ditch' Struggle Is Won By Stratocruiser

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UP)—An Air Force Stratocruiser with 58 persons aboard landed safely here Saturday after winning a "fight-or-ditch" struggle with a flaming engine midway to Hawaii.

Maj. Charley T. McGugan set the big double - decked transport down here at 8:38 a.m. PST after a 1,200 mile flight on three engines. The C - 97 was escorted by a Coast Guard P4Y and an Air Force SA16, which intercepted the crippled plane en route back.

McGugan said the right inboard engine burst into flames as the Boeing transport passed the midway point in the 2,200 miles flight from Travis to Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii

"We felt a slight jar and the fire warning in the cockpit lit up," the 37 - year - old Dunn, N. C., pilot said. "There was a glow in the right inboard engine, then flames."

Not Much Effect

McGugan said the fire fighting equipment in the engine "at first didn't have much effect."

"Then the No. 2 (left inboard) engine started acting up," he said. "It was running rough and looked like it was ready to go, too.

"The situation got pretty precarious for a while," the veteran airman said.

The plane was only a few minutes flying time past "Ocean Station November," the Coast Guard weather ship Minnetonka when the fire occurred. McGugan returned to the ship and made ready to ditch in the event the flames broke out of control."

Broad Federal Aid To Science Education Seen

WASHINGTON (UP) — Rep. Carl Elliott said Saturday "chances are good" the House Education Committee will approve soon a broad federal aid program to strengthen science education.

The Alabama Democrat said "the case definitely has been made" for such a program in eight weeks of hearings which his education subcommittee completed Thursday.

Elliott said the hearings produced "convincing" evidence of a need for federal scholarships, loans and work study programs for college students, aid for advanced teacher training, and grants for scientific equipment in high schools.

He said subcommittee testimony showed that some 100,000 "very bright" high school graduates each year do not go to college, primarily because they cannot afford it.

The subcommittee heard 200 witnesses, including opponents of any federal aid. It will start April 15 to work on a bill aimed at meeting Russia's challenge in training scientists and engineers.

Elliott told the United Press that "chances are good" the full Education Committee will approve a bill along the lines of the $3,600,000,000 program he has proposed. He made no prediction on

ORANGE FLAMES, SMOKE

Rocket Fired Here By Amateur Group

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Monroe's first rocket was launched at 5:08 p.m. yesterday, in a blast of orange flames and smoke. It stayed in the air 13.4 seconds, and soared 750 feet high before plunging back to earth.

Fifteen members of the Monroe Amateur Rocket Society, composed of Neville High School science students, fired the rocket on the Fred Huenefeld farm, east of here off Highway 80. About 100 people witnessed the launching.

A faulty nozzle turned the flight from what might have been a new amateur altitude record into one of the many experimental tests.

The nozzle in the six foot, 9¼ inch rocket, was too narrow. It fitted in the bottom of the rocket, and was designed to hold, and keep the fuel from spurting out improperly.

Instead, it was blown out of the rocket by the force of the launching, and the huge orange blast was created. One of the three steel fins on the slender steel rocket was bent at a 45 degree angle by the blast.

Combination

The combination of mishaps meant: 1. The fuel was not concentrated and most was lost in an explosion outside the rocket. 2. The bent tail fin kept the rocket from gaining the speed which it could have achieved.

Maximum hoped-for altitude and speed were not achieved, but MARS members gained vital information which will help them on their next experimental launching.

Winds at the time of launching were clocked by CAA at 25 miles per hour.

The rocket weighed 14 pounds,

The Alabama Democrat said "the case definitely has been made" for such a program in eight weeks of hearings which his education subcommittee completed Thursday.

Elliott said the hearings produced "convincing" evidence of a need for federal scholarships, loans and work study programs for college students, aid for advanced teacher training, and grants for scientific equipment in high schools.

He said subcommittee testimony showed that some 100,000 "very bright" high school graduates each year do not go to college, primarily because they cannot afford it.

The subcommittee heard 200 witnesses, including opponents of any federal aid. It will start April 15 to work on a bill aimed at meeting Russia's challenge in training scientists and engineers.

Elliott told the United Press that "chances are good" the full Education Committee will approve a bill along the lines of the $3,600,000,000 program he has proposed. He made no prediction on

ORANGE FLAMES, SMOKE

Rocket Fired Here By Amateur Group

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

Monroe's first rocket was launched at 5:08 p.m. yesterday, in a blast of orange flames and smoke. It stayed in the air 13.4 seconds, and soared 750 feet high before plunging back to earth.

Fifteen members of the Monroe Amateur Rocket Society, composed of Neville High School science students, fired the rocket on the Fred Huenefeld farm, east of here off Highway 80. About 100 people witnessed the launching.

A faulty nozzle turned the flight from what might have been a new amateur altitude record into one of the many experimental tests.

The nozzle in the six foot, 9¼ inch rocket, was too narrow. It fitted in the bottom of the rocket, and was designed to hold, and keep the fuel from spurting out improperly.

Instead, it was blown out of the rocket by the force of the launching, and the huge orange blast was created. One of the three steel fins on the slender steel rocket was bent at a 45 degree angle by the blast.

Combination

The combination of mishaps meant: 1. The fuel was not concentrated and most was lost in an explosion outside the rocket. 2. The bent tail fin kept the rocket from gaining the speed which it could have achieved.

Maximum hoped-for altitude and speed were not achieved, but MARS members gained vital information which will help them on their next experimental launching.

Winds at the time of launching were clocked by CAA at 25 miles per hour.

The rocket weighed 14 pounds,

Dr. Bendel was president of Monroe Little League, Inc., when he died February 10, and the stadium is to be a memorial to his memory and the work he did with youth of the area for over 30 years.

New Ideas Prompted In State

Would Provide Way To By-Pass More Tax Needs

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The national recession is stirring up new fiscal ideas for the 1958, Legislature, including tapping a few jealously guarded reserves as means of bypassing any immediate need for new taxes.

While Gov. Earl Long's budget leaders have not said so publicly, current thinking points to a new possibility of expanding the present "wait and see" attitude, waiting for the recession dust to settle.

State fiscal experts said no matter what plans were devised, some budgets will have to be chopped.

Expansion Increases

The ever increasing expansion of many budgets faces an abrupt halt. The Governor's Budget Committee a week and a half ago sounded a warning it was getting sore about some frills and luxuries.

Many economists have been talking about the possibility the national slump will start fading in July. Louisiana must prepare its government budget before then. The Legislature opens in May.

Only vague hints exist now, but it is always possible the Legislature may consider holding the line until the recession trend, up or down, is certain.

Rep. T. T. Fields, backed by Rep. Horace Lynn Jones, recently voiced a desire to tap the 14 million dollars taxpayers now contribute to teachers retirement, diverting the money to help sustain the teacher pay raise in the upcoming fiscal year. Teachers would continue their own retirement payments.

Similar Ideas

There has been criticism in the past, and again recently, that the state is contributing more than necessary. Similar ideas can be expected from other lawmakers.

The threat of new taxes still overshadows everything in sight for the 60-day Legislature. If a business upturn could be sighted, it would mean rosier legislative planning.

In the "Louisiana Business Outlook," Dr. Stephen L. McDonald, head of Louisiana State University's department of finance in the college of commerce, emphasized

Ocean Menace Is Obliterated By Great Blast

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (AP) — Twin-domed Ripple Rock, a killer of men and ships, was obliterated as a maritime menace Saturday by history's greatest authenticated nonatomic explosion.

The underwater blast, packing a punch of 2¾ million pounds of the most powerful conventional explosive known, was touched off in Seymour Narrows at 9:31 a.m.

Four and a half hours later Howard Green, Canadian public works minister, announced officially at a news conference the demolition of the rock was "completely successful."

38 Feet Torn

Green said that soundings made by hydrographic boats indicated at least 38 feet had been torn off the two peaks of the massive submarine mountain of solid rock.

This would provide a safe channel 47 feet deep at mean low tide. The objective had been 40 feet.

Ripple Rock, on whose twin fangs at least 114 mariners and scores of ships have met death since 1875, lies in the middle of the narrowest pincer of the 850-mile Inside Passage between Puget Sound and the Gulf of Alaska.

Bottleneck

Seymour Narrows, nine miles north of this Vancouver island town of 3,000 and 220 miles north of Seattle, has been the bottleneck of the entire protected shipping lane, formed by a screen of islands off the coasts of British Columbia and Alaska.

MOTHER'S BOYFRIEND

Lana Turner's Daughter Is Held In Death Of Man

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Pale, tearful Cheryl Crane, 14-year - old daughter of film star Lana Turner was placed in the custody of juvenile authorities Saturday to await a decision on whether she must face a murder charge for the butcher knife slaying of her mother's gangland boy friend.

Dapper Johnny Stompanato, 32, friend and escort of glamorous stars, was stabbed to death at the actress' Beverly Hills home Friday night.

The tall, dark-haired girl said she stabbed Stompanato to "save mother."

While everything pointed to a love affair gone "sour," police revealed that an inscribed gold bracelet—professing Lana's love for the swarthy Adonis of wealthy women—was found on Stompanato's body.

"Daddy John, my sweet love this remembers a piece of my heart which will be with you always, and remember, Daddy, my life for you all time. Lana."

Stabbing Follows Quarrel

The stabbing had followed a quarrel between Miss Turner and Stompanato that took place in the actress' home.

Cheryl, daughter of Miss Turner and the star's former husband, Stephen Crane, was in a state of near shock at noon Saturday when transferred from the Beverly Hills police station to Juvenile Hall in downtown Los Angeles.

Her father, who promised he would "always be near," told reporters that the girl had gone to bed as soon as she was placed in her room in the Juvenile Hall.

"She's still in such shock she doesn't believe it happened," said Crane after he visited with her. "She's very shook up. The child was trying to save her mother."

The girl said she was "protecting" her mother when she stabbed Stompanato, an associate of ex-mobster Mickey Cohen.

Miss Turner spent most of the morning at the Beverly Hills police station, but reluctantly yielded to the pleas of friends that she not accompany the girl to Juvenile Hall. The star's attorneys and advisors insisted there was nothing she nor Crane could accomplish there.

Crane also had been told it would do no good to appear at Juvenile Hall.

Reports Girl 'Very Brave'

But Crane arrived at Juvenile Hall within minutes after his attractive daughter was driven there in a squad car. A woman police matron said that her charge was "very brave" and had stopped crying on the 12-mile ride to downtown Los Angeles.

Crane said that his daughter had asked for a rosary and Bible, which were supplied her by Juvenile Hall authorities. He told his daughter, "Don't worry. I'll always be near you."

Pending a medication hearing in Juvenile Court, the district attorney's office did not indicate what its next step would be. No charges has been filed and an attorney for Crane said an effort would be made to have the pre-detention hearing Monday instead of Tuesday—the usual day for such proceedings.

The usual procedure then is for the offender—in this case Cheryl—to be released in the custody of her parents without bail pending a second hearing in about 15 days.

Earlier the girl had told police she stabbed Stompanato, her mother's almost constant companion in recent months, because he had threatened to disfigure the film star.

Crane, a filmland restaurateur and first of the 33-year-old beauty's four husbands, immediately rushed to the aid of his daughter and Hollywood's noted criminal attorney Jerry Giesler stepped into the case.

Tells of Argument

The drama began unfolding late Friday night at Miss Turner's Beverly Hills home where the star's daughter was spending her Easter vacation from a fashionable girl's school at Ojai, Calif.

Stompanato, dark-haired and handsome, was present in his role of escort and boy friend of the star who started out as a filmdom sweater girl. An argument ensued, according to the story told by Police Chief Clinton Anderson as he reconstructed the slaying.

"I was in my room talking to mother when Johnny came in and began yelling at her," Cheryl told police. "She told him, 'I told you I don't want you to argue in front of the baby.'" Cheryl said that Stompanato and her mother went to Miss Turner's room and the argument continued.

"I went to the door to listen," the girl continued. "He kept saying over and over again to mother 'I'll have you cut and disfigured and I'll just sit back and watch it happen.'"

The girl told police, "I thought he was going to get her."

"I ran downstairs to the kitchen and grabbed the first big knife I could find and raced back upstairs."

As Cheryl got back outside the bedroom she said, Stompanato was storming out of the room and she confronted him with the eight inch knife in her hand.

Cheryl Calls Father

The girl said she plunged the knife into Stompanato's stomach "with all my might."

Stompanato, with a look of disbelief, staggered back into the bedroom. He gasped for breath and then collapsed on the floor, blood spurting from the fatal wound.

Cheryl ran into her own bedroom and called her father at his restaurant only a few blocks away.

Crane, as soon as he saw that Stompanato had been stabbed and heard that his daughter said that she did it, summoned police and Giesler.

Miss Turner, Crane and Giesler accompanied police as they took the girl to the Beverly Hills police station.

Giesler, who has represented virtually every prominent motion picture star in Hollywood involved in major criminal cases, immediately termed the case "justifiable homicide" and said that since the girl is only 14 years old, "there is no justification for a trial."

District Atty. William B. McKesson, however, said that the girl could be tried in Criminal Court but California law prohibited the death penalty for minors. California law requires that a Superior Court hearing be held to determine whether a juvenile shall be tried as an adult.

Hard to Believe

Cohen, with whom Stompanato had been linked, appeared at Beverly Hills police station several hours after the slaying to claim the body of his one-time associate. But by that time, it had been taken to the County Morgue in downtown Los Angeles.

The pudgy little gambler asked repeatedly, "Who did it, Who did it?"

When he was told that Miss Turner's daughter had stabbed Stompanato, Cohen shook his head in disbelief.

"I can't understand it. Miss Turner and us Cohen and Stompanato used to go horseback riding together. She seemed to like Johnny very much."

Stompanato came to Hollywood from Woodstock, Ill. and Cohen said the victim's mother still lived there. The good - looking Stompanato, known to police as Cohen's bodyguard after he came here 10 years ago, had only minor brushes with the law in California. He was arrested on two counts of vagrancy, was convicted on one count and then had the conviction reversed.

Stompanato was married briefly to actress Helen Gilbert and then became known as one of filmland's constant escorts for celebrities. Among the stars in whose company he was seen prior to becoming Miss Turner's companion was Ava Gardner.

Miss Turner told police that she had been trying to break off her romance with Stompanato since last Christmas because she was "terrified" of him and she said he had repeatedly threatened her and beaten her.

Once Ran Away

The romantic life of the blonde beauty has been a tempestuous one. She married Crane twice, divorcing him once and then remarrying him. She was married first to bandleader Artie Shaw. Her third husband was millionaire Bob Topping and her most recent actor Lex Barker.

Cheryl attracted public attention a year ago when she ran away from home and spent several days in the Los Angeles "Skid Row" section before police could locate her. Cheryl said she ran away because she was unhappy at the school she attended and she was sent to another school.

Miss Turner wept almost hysterically as she went to police headquarters with her daughter and even asked officers if she could spend the night in Cheryl's cell.

Cotton Prices Turn Easier; Futures Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton prices in the domestic market turned easier this week. At the close of trading yesterday active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were down 15 to 34 points from the previous Friday's close. The exchange was closed today, Good Friday.

Last week the market was up 27 to 44 points. A point is five cents.

Sustaining factors during the week included a greater than expected advance in the parity price as of mid-March, a further delay in field work in some areas as the result of unfavorable weather, moderate price fixing and covering on a scale down basis.

Meanwhile, offerings were furnished through profit taking and light hedge selling, liquidation influenced by the refusal by the USDA to extend the deadline for the exports of cotton purchased under the C.C.C. program and by consequent easiness in the Liverpool market.

President Eisenhower's comments accompanying his veto of the support price freeze bill had a mixed influence. His proposal on an export subsidy was seen as constructive while his proposal with respect to the 1959 cotton acreage allotment was viewed as bearish on prices.

Exports of the staple by this country during the week ending Monday were again smaller than those of the previous week and somewhat less than those of a year ago. The New York Cotton Exchange estimates that they approximated 105,000 bales vs. 129,000 and 139,000 respectively. For the current season through March 31 they have reached an estimated level of 4,007,000 bales vs 5,387,000 at about the same time last season.

During the week the CCC sold an additional 69,000 bales of upland cotton for unrestricted thus bringing the total for the season so far to approximately 1,673,000 bales.

Tax Cut Doubts Expressed

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont) said Saturday he thinks Congress will rush into tax cutting after Easter recess talks with the home folk.

Mansfield, the acting Democratic leader, said that while he personally favors a tax reduction to counter the economic recession, he thinks sentiment among both Democrats and Republicans for such a move has "cooled off."

"I think perhaps the views of Mr. Baruch and Secretary Anderson have had a lot to do with this," Mansfield said. "It seems to me there is a definite trend away from tax reductions, although I personally think the right kind would provide the momentum needed to give the economy the lift it needs."

Bernard M. Baruch, elder statesman and financier, told the Senate Finance Committee last Tuesday it would be folly to cut taxes now. Secretary of the Treasury Anderson is regarded in administration circles as having put the brakes on a tax cutting drive given off by Vice President Nixon.

Mansfield said he hopes the Senate will act quickly after its return on a pending bill to authorize a billion dollars in long term, low interest loans for local public works. Republicans forced a delay in consideration of the bill earlier this week.

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-NJ) criticized Congress in a separate interview for recessing without acting on extension of unemployment compensation benefits. He said this was "the most crucial of the anti-recession items."

"Congress has passed two measures—housing and highway bills—which unquestionably will be helpful as anti-recession measures," Case said.

Partial Defeat Handed Miss. In Suit Fight

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi suffered a partial defeat Saturday in its bid for more time to answer a federal court suit challenging the state's voter registration laws.

U.S. District Judge Sidney C. Mize gave Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson until May 15 to file his answer to the suit filed by the Rev. H. D. Darby, Negro of Prentiss. Patterson had asked that he be given until June 1.

Judge Mize set a May 1 deadline for any motions other than the state's answer. He said he doesn't expect the case to be heard on its merits until next fall.

Judge Mize, one of three federal judges who will hear the case, said a hearing probably will be held about the middle of June on a motion for a preliminary injunction to stop the state from enforcing its statutes on voting.

The Rev. Darby, who was not in court today, charges the registration laws are interpreted and administered so as to deprive Negroes of their voting rights.

R. J. Brown, a Negro lawyer from Vicksburg, represented Darby at the hearing. Patterson and Assistant attorney General Dugas Shands and John Price represented the state.

Besides Judge Mize, the federal judges in the state named to hear the case are Judge Claude Clayton of the northern district and Judge Ben Cameron of Meridian, a member of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Apeals.

Man In Hospital, Woman Is Jailed In Stabbing Case

City Police said yesterday a Negro woman had been jailed following the stabbing of an 18-year-old Negro man here early yesterday.

The victim was identified as Tommy Lee Young, 18, of 1015 DeSiard St. who was reported in "good" condition after he suffered a chest stab shortly after 1 a.m. yesterday. In city jail was Annie Lee Grandsberry, 20, of 303 S. 15th St., police said. According to officials the woman was charged with aggravated battery and use of a knife.

Young, according to officers reported that the woman stabbed him during an argument between the two. Officers said Young stated he slapped the Grandsberry woman before she stabbed him.

Cotton Prices Turn Easier; Futures Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton prices in the domestic market turned easier this week. At the close of trading yesterday active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were down 15 to 34 points from the previous Friday's close. The exchange was closed today, Good Friday.

Last week the market was up 27 to 44 points. A point is five cents.

Sustaining factors during the week included a greater than expected advance in the parity price as of mid-March, a further delay in field work in some areas as the result of unfavorable weather, moderate price fixing and covering on a scale down basis.

Meanwhile, offerings were furnished through profit taking and light hedge selling, liquidation influenced by the refusal by the USDA to extend the deadline for the exports of cotton purchased under the C.C.C. program and by consequent easiness in the Liverpool market.

President Eisenhower's comments accompanying his veto of the support price freeze bill had a mixed influence. His proposal on an export subsidy was seen as constructive while his proposal with respect to the 1959 cotton acreage allotment was viewed as bearish on prices.

Exports of the staple by this country during the week ending Monday were again smaller than those of the previous week and somewhat less than those of a year ago. The New York Cotton Exchange estimates that they approximated 105,000 bales vs. 129,000 and 139,000 respectively. For the current season through March 31 they have reached an estimated level of 4,007,000 bales vs 5,387,000 at about the same time last season.

During the week the CCC sold an additional 69,000 bales of upland cotton for unrestricted thus bringing the total for the season so far to approximately 1,673,000 bales.

Tax Cut Doubts Expressed

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont) said Saturday he doubts Congress will rush into tax cutting after Easter recess talks with the home folk.

Mansfield, the acting Democratic leader, said that while he personally favors a tax reduction to counter the economic recession, he thinks sentiment among both Democrats and Republicans for such a move has "cooled off."

"I think perhaps the views of Mr. Baruch and Secretary Anderson have had a lot to do with this," Mansfield said. "It seems to me there is a definite trend away from tax reductions, although I personally think the right kind would provide the momentum needed to give the economy the lift it needs."

Bernard M. Baruch, elder statesman and financier, told the Senate Finance Committee last Tuesday it would be folly to cut taxes now. Secretary of the Treasury Anderson is regarded in administration circles as having put the brakes on a tax cutting drive stepped off by Vice President Nixon.

Mansfield said he hopes the Senate will act quickly after its return on a pending bill to authorize a billion dollars in long term, low interest loans for local public works. Republicans forced a delay in consideration of the bill earlier this week.

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-NJ) criticized Congress in a separate interview for recessing without acting on extension of unemployment compensation benefits. He said this was "the most crucial of all anti-recession items."

"Congress has passed two measures—housing and highway bills—which unquestionably will be helpful as anti-recession measures," Case said.

Partial Defeat Handed Miss. In Suit Fight

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi suffered a partial defeat Saturday in its bid for more time to answer a federal court suit challenging the state's voter registration laws.

U.S. District Judge Sidney C. Mize gave Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson until May 15 to file his answer to the suit filed by the Rev. H. D. Darby, Negro of Prentiss. Patterson had asked that he be given until June 1.

Judge Mize set a May 1 deadline for any motions other than the state's answer. He said he doesn't expect the case to be heard on its merits until next fall.

Judge Mize, one of three federal judges who will hear the case, said a hearing probably will be held about the middle of June on a motion for a preliminary injunction to stop the state from enforcing its statutes on voting.

The Rev. Darby, who was not in court today, charges the registration laws are interpreted and administered so as to deprive Negroes of their voting rights.

R. J. Brown, a Negro lawyer from Vicksburg, represented Darby at the hearing. Patterson and Assistant attorney General Dugas Shands and John Price represented the state.

Besides Judge Mize, the federal judges in the state named to hear the case are Judge Claude Clayton of the northern district and Judge Ben Cameron of Meridian, a member of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Apeals.

The Branham Company, national advertising sales representatives for the Monroe Morning World and News-Star, is celebrating its 50th anniversary in 11 offices across the country.

Founded in 1908 by John M. Branham, who established offices in New York and Chicago as a newspaper advertising representative, the company entered the radio field in 1936 and television in 1947.

Greenberg, Foulon and Timlin operate out of the New York office.

Solon Urges Support For Cancer Drive

Urging "as generous support as possible" for the Louisiana "Cancer Crusade," in progress through the month of April, Congressman Otto E. Passman reminded here yesterday that the Cancer Society's comprehensive program is making an "invaluable contribution toward conquering the dread disease."

"As research progresses, as methods of treatment are improved, and as the people become informed," he said, "cancer is steadily and surely being defeated. Once regarded as a certain killer, cancer now can be cured, and hope continues to increase."

Congressman Passman said that in Louisiana approximately 90 per cent of the "Cancer Crusade" funds are retained within the state. This is a fact, he explained, largely because of grants for the intensive cancer research programs being conducted through the medical schools of Louisiana State University and Tulane, at New Orleans. Normally, he said, about 50 per cent of the total funds collected within a state are retained for use in the state.

The Society's program in the fight to conquer cancer also includes loan projects for needy patients, special services and drugs, transportation to and from treatment centers, and an expanding program of education.

Practically all of the Society's personnel in Louisiana serve on a volunteer basis, without financial compensation, Congressman Passman said.

Emphasis Being Put On Economy And Efficiency

HOUSTON (AP)—Oil executives, after surveying the industry's woes of 1957, are placing renewed emphasis on economy and efficiency.

Numerous annual reports credit economy drives with contributing to healthy financial results or preventing even sharper income declines last year.

Most reports warn that many 1957 problems will continue through most of 1958.

Sun Oil Co. reported a nine million dollar decline in net income and added:

"The true course of action in periods like the present is to strive to the utmost to improve the efficiency of all activities, increase productivity and restore to the American dollar a measure of its former value."

Phillips Petroleum Co. reported a million dollar increase in net and said:

"A supporting factor in 1957 results was our money-saving efforts aimed directly at the target of rising costs."

Gulf Oil Corp.'s net income increased from 282 to 354 million dollars but Gulf had concern over risks within the industry.

"Throughout the year the growth factor was kept in the forefront as a three-dimensional pattern of expansion in volumn, expansion in area, and development of new products," Gulf said. "Diversification was pressed not only as a contribution to growth but also as a means of minimizing the business risks of the oil industry."

The Day Of Triumph

Joseph of Arimathaea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked whether he had been any while dead.

And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the spulchre.

And Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Jesus beheld where he was laid.

And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of James and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre.

And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment: and they were affrighted.

And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

And they, when they heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them, they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

—From the Gospel according to St. Mark.

Russia Laughing Hyena?

Is Russia the laughing hyena of the present-day world—showing mirth and planning destruction?

Senator Humphrey (D-Minn) thinks this may be true. He thinks Russia may be scheming to destroy the United States in such a quiet way that this country will never realize it has been attacked. He believes this may take place while the faces of Russian Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev and Mikhail Menshikov, Soviet ambassador to the United States, are wreathed in smiles.

The hyena is a terrible creature. It laughs like a delirious woman, but is so cruel it can never be tamed nor respond to human kindness and is so restless that it is constantly moving.

There are many who believe that the officials of Russia are that way. They are convinced that those officials have the same insatiable desire for conquest that possessed Hitler and that drove him to the commission of atrocities and eventually to his own death. They think they are mad dogs, or mad hyenas, with whom no pact nor contract would be sacred. We have no reason to believe otherwise.

Senator Humphrey told the senate the Russians have been "testing" a warhead which, he said, "threatens the peace of the world and places every free nation in mortal jeopardy unless it can successfully be destroyed in flight."

The senator called upon the national administration to disclose what it knows of the tests, saying the government has kept as "a carefully guarded secret" detailed knowledge of "the scope, intensity, and dimensions of the Russian tests."

The lawmaker said they "spewed into the atmosphere at least twice and possibly three times more radioactive material than ever before."

He added: "Last week in San Francisco radioactivity in rainfall rose to 200 times the safe limit. It was 10 times the normal level in Colorado."

Senator Humphrey said the U. S. government, if it would only "speak out," could disclose that the Soviet Union's recent tests "have literally poisoned the world's atmosphere with radioactivity."

These statements by the senator seem to indicate he may think Russia is merely spewing radioactivity at random and that the world in general is affected.

There could be an even more sinister conclusion. That conclusion could be that Russia is deliberately pouring radioactive material into the United States and that there is no world-wide dissemination. There have been numerous rumors that Russian submarines have been prowling the oceans near the shores of the United States. It could be possible that the radioactivity is being spewed into the atmosphere of the United States from these boats.

It does not seem logical that Russia would endanger its own nation by setting off such huge quantities of radioactivity there that the radioactivity in San Francisco woud be 200 times the safe limit. It would be reasonable to surmise that if radioactivity is present in such huge quantities in San Francisco it may have been released near that vicinity.

At the time the United States was attacked by Japan at the beginning of World War II, when Pearl Harbor was raided in Hawaii, Japanese envoys were making friendly overtures in Washington.

Russia has been told repeatedly that if an attack were to be staged upon the United States, a return assault of tremendous destructive force could be started within two minutes. An insidious attack, conducted without the realization of the American people, might be carried on without retaliation.

It may be that Russia's present broad disarmament smile is nothing more than a move to lull this country into tranquility while that nation carries out its iniquitous plan. How Russia's charm plan is working is shown in the following paragraph from Vernon Louviere, one of the writers on the staff of Bascom Timmons, Washington correspondent for the Monroe News-Star and World:

"Charm is now the by-word at the Soviet embassy since Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov arrived here. No better man could have been picked by the Russians to sell their new sweetness-and-light policy. This was never more evident than when a group of 109 Ohio women paid a social call on the ambassador and his wife. They came away completely captivated. "He's a doll!" one of the women gushed. "I'm in love with Mike," raved another. "He's nice, sincere and really trying for peace." Rep. William Ayres (R-Ohio), who arranged the visit, had a tough time trying to dampen their enthusiasm. "What you were subjected to today is more important than the recession," he told them. "They really did a good job on you. They aren't about to make concessions to us. Remember they're trying to sell you an idea."

Ike, Some Congressmen In Armed Service Split

Not long after Congress returns from its Easter recess, the battle between the Eisenhower administration and influential members of Congress over future control of the armed services at the Washington level will get underway.

Though the new proposal of President Eisenhower is described by Congressional opponents, both Republican and Democratic, as not as "objectionable" as the one originally considered, they insist that the appropriate committees of the Senate and House will give the whole question long and careful study before reaching any conclusions.

In fact, top members of Congress concerned with military affairs seem determined to press for legislation which, in contrast to that proposed by President Eisenhower and the National Security Council, would strengthen the powers of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and lessen those of the Secretary of Defense.

Chairman Carl Vinson, Dem. of Ga., of the House Armed Services committee, along with Rep. Leslie Arends of Illinois, Republican whip of the House, and Rep. Paul Kilday, Dem. of Texas, are authors of the initial bill along these lines. An identical bill has been introduced in the Senate Republican Policy Committee by Policy Committee Chairman Bridges, of N. H., and Democratic whip Mike Mansfield of Montana.

The White House apparently is aware that top naval officers are working behind the scenes on behalf of this legislation, despite strong opposition to it by the President and Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy. Army leaders are also inclined toward the bill, while the Air Force seems to be supporting the White House.

This new fight, with the Navy again playing a heavy part, recalls to Major General Wilton B. Persons, deputy assistant to President Eisenhower, the battle waged by General George C. Marshall at the start of World War II to persuade Sir Winston Churchill that a combined staff controlling all branches of the services of both the United States and Great Britain was necessary to shorten the length of the war and save lives.

Two Naval traditionalists, General Persons reminisced, the late President Franklin Roosevelt, and Prime Minister Churchill, had stood between General Marshall and his proposal for a combined allied command staff.

Roosevelt had been an assistant Navy secretary in War I. Churchill First Lord of the British Admiralty. It is a British legend that the Royal Navy is not answerable even to the Prime Minister, but like Boston's Cabots and Lodges, speaks only to God.

Admiral Ernest King, the War II chief of American Naval operations, was boxed in by FDR's personal Chief of Staff, Admiral William Leahy, who ranked King, though both were four and finally five star admirals.

It was an exasperated General Marshal, who spoke bluntly for an immediate decision from Roosevelt on the combined staff command one night during a wartime visit of Churchill to the White House.

FDR protested that he had been unable to "sell" the Prime Minister on such central authority for directing the war. But he suggested that if General Marshall wished to "have a go" at Churchill, he had his permission to do so.

"The Prime Minister is up in the Lincoln Room in bed," Roosevelt said, "Go on up."

Marshall and Persons, the latter the Pentagon liaison with Congress went to the Lincoln chamber above.

They found Churchill propped up in bed, wearing a tasseled night cap and night shirt, a glass of brandy in one hand, a long black cigar in the other, pouring over a sheaf of dispatches.

General Marshall sailed into the Britisher for the single command to which the one time first sea Lord replied in his sonorous Oxford accent:

"I can't envision the Royal Navy, Sir, ever being commanded by any other than a Royal Navy officer."

An hour and many words later, Marshall had Churchill's go-ahead and the combined chiefs of staff was ready to be organized.

This was one of three victories the General scored over the Prime Minister, the other being Marshall's veto of Churchill's demand that the invasion of the continent go up through the not so "soft underbelly of Europe" and thus seal off the Empire's Mediterranean lifeline to the Middle and Far East.

When Churchill found Marshall obdurate, he went about convincing the late Secretary of War Stimson and FDR that only Marshall could command the allied invasion of Europe.

The General reasoned that the Prime Minister hoped to remove him as a policymaker from Washington, put him in the United Kingdom, where he would be subject to British authority as a field commander.

Marshall successfully held out against the blandishment — which meant the limelight of a war hero — and remained in the U. S. to direct the course of war. Instead of acceding to the Churchill call to command the allied victory in Europe that was to come, Marshall named Dwight D. Eisenhower to lead the combined Anglo-American forces.

Rich Woodcutter Is Happiest Kind

NEW YORK (AP)—Once upon a time there was a poor young woodcutter named Emil Q. Hardeman.

He was the son of a woodcutter, and the grandson of a woodcutter.

Emil was sturdy and strong and he worked hard. But he hated his work. He was so busy cutting down the trees he could not see the forest.

On his 21st birthday his father gave him a new ax for a present. It did not please the ambitious young man.

"There is more to life than woodcutting," said Emil, throwing the ax into a corner of the hut.

He left and went to the big city and got himself a job collecting for a small loan agency.

Thanks to his stern honesty and his sterner muscles, Emil at 25 owned the small loan agency

At 30 he owned a bigger loan agency.

At 35 he owned a small bank.

At 40 he owned a big bank.

At 50 he owned a chain of banks, hotels, shooting galleries, ship lines, oil fields, and diaper laundries.

At 60 he owned—well, if it wasn't nailed down, it belonged to Emil. He had a billion dollars, but all of a sudden he was desperately unhappy.

His hands shook. He no longer enjoyed chorus girls, caviar or yachts. He couldn't eat. He could not sleep. He even lost pleasure in counting his money—and it was perhaps this symptom that worried and puzzled his doctors the most.

Emil sailed the world seeking the best medical advice. He gulped tranquilizers by the dozen. Nothing helped. Finally he heard of a famous missionary doctor in an African jungle. He sent emissaries to fetch the doctor, but the doctor refused to come.

Finally, Emil went to the jungle to see him.

"I will build you a hospital if you will take me as a patient," he promised. The doctor agreed.

He did not give Emil any labatory tests. He merely felt his pulse, listened to his heart and asked him to stick out his tongue.

The he inquired: "When were you healthiest in your life?"

"When I was chopping wood," said Emil.

"Well," said the doctor, "Go back and chop some more wood."

"For this advice I should build you a hospital?" asked Emil.

"You should build two," said the doctor, turning to a native with a broken arm.

So Emil went back to the hut of his father and picked up the ax he had flung into the corner long ago. He began to chop wood.

This time he was in no hurry. He had time to look at the forest and tell it from the trees. He had time to listen to the birds sing and to pause and watch the chipmunks play.

That night he ate three plates of bread, bacon and canned beans. His muscles ached, but he slept as he had not slept since he was a boy.

Emil gave up the big city forever. He moved the headquarters of his vast enterprises into his father's hut. In the morning he would get up at dawn and go out and cut down a tree. In the afternoon he would confer with his secretaries and buy another big bank, big steel mill or a big chain of restaurants.

LAUDS WATER PROGRAM
New York, N. Y.

Editor, News-Star,

We note in your article in a recent issue of The News-Star, "Ellender Tired of Slur Against Water Program," that the senator "says he is becoming "a little sick" of hearing waterway improvements referred to as "pork barrel legislation." We hope that you will believe that the following facts will be interesting to your readers:

There is probably no legislation enacted in Washington that is less understood by the public than that for waterway improvements. It is astounding that so many people, many of them well informed, still believe that old cliche "pork barrel" applies to all waterway legislation. Such legislation is free from so - called "pork" by reason of the method of its adoption and enactment and has been for a generation. Moreover, almost all projects are initiated by local interests, not by politicians or by army engineers.

Approved projects are those that have been certified economically sound after public hearings and long study by the corps of engineers, U. S. army, made first by the district officer, reviewed by his superior, the division engineer, then by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, and finally by the chief of engineers. No part of the study is perfunctory. Having passed that test, they go to the public works committee of the house. If approved there, and later by the senate public works committee, they are incorporated in a river and harbor authorization bill which carries no money. After the bill becomes law, funds for those selected for prosecution are eventually made available by congress.

With over one - half of the projects investigated down through the years, the decisions by army engineers have been "the principal grounds upon which the adverse conclusions are based are that the benefits to be anticipated . . . are insufficient to warrant the expenditure of federal funds for the purpose."

There is no other federal expenditure subjected to closer scrutiny as to its worth. Labeling such legislation "pork barrel" impuives the integrity of the corps of engineers and its chief, committee members, and all others of the House and Senate.

It is rarely mentioned that piers, wharves, elevators, warehouses, trackage, and other necessary facilities are wholly the work of local authorities or private interests; the federal government improves only the waterways. The two, of course, are inseparable; one is utterly useless without the other. The waterway might have been derided as a "pork barrel" project; the land structures serving it commended as civic advances. Civic interests also often contribute to the cost of harbor and channel improvements with cash, rights - of - way and spoil areas for dredged material. The derisive term "pork barrel" is absurd. While not always deliberate, it is a disservice to the people.

The great strength of the nation today owes largely to harbor and channel development done in the past. The greater strength of the future will come largely from continuing development. Money spent for this purpose is an investment in the building of the nation.

EDITORIAL ANSWERED
Newellton, La.

Editor, Morning World,

This article is intended to be an answer to your editorial in the last Sunday issue of the Monroe Morning World.

You have implied in several editorials that Governor Long has used the teachers as he chooses to use them. You have also implied that the teachers do not have enough intelligence to know this.

We people of the teaching profession do not think your implications are justifiable. We, as teachers must stand up for what we think is right and just. Being voters, we have as much right as you to say where a tax should be levied, and the justification for such a tax.

It could never be brought out any clearer than it has already been, that if the teachers are to get a salary commensurate to the job they are doing, it will have to be through their own efforts.

Teachers, like all other professional people, are interested in their welfare. Since we are employed by the State of Louisiana, where else, but through taxation, can revenue be obtained to support a teacher-salary increase.

Since your paper has indicated the vast "Know How" in finding a solution to increased cost of operating a government without an increase in taxes, you should inform our state leaders of your findings and save all the ink you are using in condemning the teachers and the governor of our fine state.

We think that the majority of the teachers of this state, which number about 18,000, have looked at what they are supporting and have carefully weighed both sides. We have concluded that it is necessary for us as professional people to back legislation that will support public education. You have in every case, implied that we do not have the right to be a judge of educational needs and how they should be solved.

If you are sincere in your implications that teachers deserve a salary commensurate to their training, you should try to help us instead of trying to tear our profession down.

In this great democratic country, we believe in the majority rule and that a majority vote elects. Yet in our legislature that democratic procedure is not allowed to operate. Instead, a one-third minority can kill all efforts of progress attempted by a big majority of our legislators.

We, of the teaching profession do not have an inexhaustible source of money to be used to bring our side of the question before the public. Instead, we must let our deeds be our testimony. These are often over-shadowed by off-the-cuff statements made by a few individuals supposedly qualified to be judges of educational needs. Very often these people have not been in the classroom since they graduated from school themselves.

We teachers will gladly accept any criticism that we deserve, but we think your newspaper has been unfair to us teachers in offering criticism in your editorials that reflects greatly against the integrity of the teachers.

Sincerely yours,
Tensas Parish Public Relations, Committee.

Early Ambulation Prevents Clotting

A Traveling Blood Clot

Elaine had gone through a pelvic operation several days previously. She shifted herself to the edge of the hospital bed and reached into the top drawer of the night stand to get a coin for the daily paper. Her physician, who was standing in the room, said, "Your temperature is normal today. How about getting out of bed for 20 minutes this afternoon?

"You could have been up the day after the operation if fever had not developed. We don't like to keep our surgical patients in bed too long.

"I'll write the order on the chart and the nurse will be in to help you," he concluded.

When the nurse arrived, Elaine swung her legs out of bed and sat up. A big grin meant she was pleased with her progress. A moment later her face paled and beads of perspiration broke out over her forehead. She fell back unconscious across the bed; her hands were icy and the pulse weak and rapid.

The nurse called for help and the physician and intern were in the room in seconds. They agreed it was a blood clot and gave oxygen, a stimulant, and an antispasmodic. It was a close call but Elaine made it. This is a familiar story to most physicians.

Blood tends to stagnate in the veins when the person is inactive. Movements helps to prevent clotting, which is the rationale behind early ambulation. The surgical patient is encouraged to move around in bed or walk about the room.

Blood clots that form and break loose inside a vein usually float through bigger and bigger vessels until the heart is reached. The[y] slip through the auricles and ven[t]ricles with lightning speed an[d] are shot into the lungs where th[e] vessels get smaller and smal[l]er

The clot continues travelin[g] until it reaches a passageway where it sticks and the bloo[d] cannot flow from that point o[n] A nerve reflex is initiated tha[t] makes the other blood vesse[ls] clamp down in a state of spasm

The blood purifying system [of] the body is crippled within a fe[w] moments. No wonder Elaine we[nt] into shock with death hoverin[g] close. These accidents often ca[n] be warded off with anticoagula[nt] drugs such as heparin or Dicum[a]rol. But this would not be pra[c]tical because it is difficult [to] predict in whom clots are like[ly] to form.

The Day Of Triumph

Joseph of Arimathaea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked whether he had been any while dead.

And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the spulchre.

And Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Jesus beheld where he was laid.

And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of James and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre.

And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

And they, when they heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them, they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

Russia Laughing Hyena?

Is Russia the laughing hyena of the present-day world—showing mirth and planning destruction?

Senator Humphrey (D-Minn) thinks this may be true. He thinks Russia may be scheming to destroy the United States in such a quiet way that this country will never realize it has been attacked. He believes this may take place while the faces of Russian Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev and Mikhail Menshikov, Soviet ambassador to the United States, are wreathed in smiles.

The hyena is a terrible creature. It laughs like a delirious woman, but is so cruel it can never be tamed nor respond to human kindness and is so restless that it is constantly moving.

There are many who believe that the officials of Russia are that way. They are convinced that those officials have the same insatiable desire for conquest that possessed Hitler and that drove him to the commission of atrocities and eventually to his own death. They think they are mad dogs, or mad hyenas, with whom no pact nor contract would be sacred. We have no reason to believe otherwise.

Senator Humphrey told the senate the Russians have been "testing" a warhead which, he said, "threatens the peace of the world and places every free nation in mortal jeopardy unless it can successfully be destroyed in flight."

He left and went to the big city and got himself a job collecting for a small loan agency.

Thanks to his stern honesty and his sterner muscles, Emil at 25 owned the small loan agency.

At 30 he owned a bigger loan agency.

At 35 he owned a small bank.

At 40 he owned a big bank.

At 50 he owned a chain of banks, hotels, shooting galleries, ship lines, oil fields, and diaper laundries.

At 60 he owned—well, if it wasn't nailed down, it belonged to Emil. He had a billion dollars, but all of a sudden he was desperately unhappy.

His hands shook. He no longer enjoyed chorus girls, caviar or yachts. He couldn't eat. He could not sleep. He even lost pleasure in counting his money—and it was perhaps this symptom that worried and puzzled his doctors the most.

Emil sailed the world seeking the best medical advice. He gulped tranquilizers by the dozen. Nothing helped. Finally he heard of a famous missionary doctor in an African jungle. He sent emissaries to fetch the doctor, but the doctor refused to come.

Finally, Emil went to the jungle to see him.

"I will build you a hospital if you will take me as a patient," he promised. The doctor agreed.

He did not give Emil any labatory tests. He merely felt his pulse, listened to his heart and asked him to stick out his tongue.

The he inquired: "When were you healthiest in your life?"

"When I was chopping wood," said Emil.

"Well," said the doctor, "Go back and chop some more wood."

"For this advice I should build you a hospital?" asked Emil.

"You should build two," said the doctor, turning to a native with a broken arm.

So Emil went back to the hut of his father and picked up the ax he had flung into the corner long ago. He began to chop wood.

This time he was in no hurry. He had time to look at the forest and tell it from the trees. He had time to listen to the birds sing and to pause and watch the chipmunks play.

That night he ate three plates of bread, bacon and canned beans. His muscles ached, but he slept as he had not slept since he was a boy.

Emil gave up the big city forever. He moved the headquarters of his vast enterprises into his father's hut. In the morning he would get up at dawn and go out and cut down a tree. In the afternoon he would confer with his secretaries and buy another big bank, big steel mill or a big chain of restaurants.

LAUDS WATER PROGRAM

New York, N. Y.

Editor, News-Star,

We note in your article in a recent issue of The News-Star, "Ellender Tired of Slur Against Water Program," that the senator 'says he is becoming "a little sick" of hearing waterway improvements referred to as "pork barrel legislation." We hope that you will believe that the following facts will be interesting to your readers:

There is probably no legislation enacted in Washington that is less understood by the public than that for waterway improvements. It is astounding that so many people, many of them well informed, still believe that old cliche "pork barrel" applies to all waterway legislation. Such legislation is free from so - called "pork" by reason of the method of its adoption and enactment and has been for a generation. Moreover, almost all projects are initiated by local interests, not by politicians or by army engineers.

Approved projects are those that have been certified economically sound after public hearings and long study by the corps of engineers, U. S. army, made first by the district officer, reviewed by his superior, the division engineer, then by the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, and finally by the chief of engineers. No part of the study is perfunctory. Having passed that test, they go to the public works committee of the house. If approved there, and later by the senate public works committee, they are incorporated in a river and harbor authorization bill which carries no money. After the bill becomes law, funds for those selected for prosecution are eventually made available by congress.

With over one - half of the projects investigated down through the years, the decisions by army engineers have been "the principal grounds upon which the adverse conclusions are based are that the benefits to be anticipated . . . are insufficient to warrant the expenditure of federal funds for the purpose."

There is no other federal expenditure subjected to closer scrutiny as to its worth. Labeling such legislation "pork barrel" impuives the integrity of the corps of engineers and its chief, committee members, and all others of the House and Senate.

It is rarely mentioned that piers, wharves, elevators, warehouses, trackage and other necessary facilities are wholly the work of local authorities or private interests; the federal government improves only the waterways. The two, of course, are inseparable; one is utterly useless without the other. The waterway might have been derided as a "pork barrel" project; the land structures serving it commended as civic advances. Civic interests also often contribute to the cost of harbor and channel improvements with cash, rights - of - way and spoil areas for dredged material. The derisive term "pork barrel" is absurd. While not always deliberate, it is a disservice to the people.

The great strength of the nation today owes largely to harbor and channel development done in the past. The greater strength of the future will come largely from continuing development. Money spent for this purpose is an investment in the building of the nation.

EDITORIAL ANSWERED

Newellton, La.

Editor, Morning World,

This article is intended to be an answer to your editorial in the last Sunday issue of the Monroe Morning World.

You have implied in several editorials that Governor Long has used the teachers as he chooses to use them. You have also implied that the teachers do not have enough intelligence to know this.

We people of the teaching profession do not think your implications are justifiable. We, as teachers must stand up for what we think is right and just. Being voters, we have as much right as you to say where a tax should be levied, and the justification for such a tax.

It could never be brought out any clearer than it has already been, that if the teachers are to get a salary commensurate to the job they are doing, it will have to be through their own efforts.

Teachers, like all other professional people, are interested in their welfare. Since we are employed by the State of Louisiana, where else, but through taxation, can revenue be obtained to support a teacher-salary increase.

Since your paper has indicated the vast "Know How" in finding a solution to increased cost of operating a government without an increase in taxes, you should inform our state leaders of your findings and save all the ink you are using in condemning the teachers and the governor of our fine state.

We think that the majority of the teachers of this state, which number about 18,000, have looked at what they are supporting and have carefully weighed both sides. We have concluded that it is necessary for us as professional people to back legislation that will support public education. You have in every case, implied that we do not have the right to be a judge of educational needs and how they should be solved.

If you are sincere in your implications that teachers deserve a salary commensurate to their training, you should try to help us instead of trying to tear our profession down.

In this great democratic country, we believe in the majority rule and that a majority vote elects. Yet in our legislature that democratic procedure is not allowed to operate. Instead, a one-third minority can kill all efforts of progress attempted by a big majority of our legislators.

We, of the teaching profession do not have an inexhaustible source of money to be used to bring our side of the question before the public. Instead, we must let our deed be our testimony. These are often over-shadowed by off-the-cuff statements made by a few individuals supposedly qualified to be judges of educational needs. Very often these people have not been in the classroom since they graduated from school themselves.

We teachers will gladly accept any criticism that we deserve, but we think your newspaper has been unfair to us teachers in offering criticism in your editorials that reflects greatly against the integrity of the teachers.

Sincerely yours,
Tensas Parish Public Relations, Committee.

Early Ambulation Prevents Clotting

A Traveling Blood Clot

Elaine had gone through a pelvic operation several days previously. She shifted herself to the edge of the hospital bed and reached into the top drawer of the night stand to get a coin for the daily paper. Her physician, who was standing in the room, said, "Your temperature is normal today. How about getting out o bed for 20 minutes this afternoon?

"You could have been up the day after the operation if fever had not developed. We don't like to keep our surgical patients in bed too long.

"I'll write the order on the chart and the nurse will be in to help you," he concluded.

When the nurse arrived, Elaine swung her legs out of bed and sat up. A big grin meant she was pleased with her progress. A moment later her face paled and beads of perspiration broke out over her forehead. She fell back unconscious across the bed; her hands were icy and the pulse weak and rapid.

The nurse called for help and the physician and intern were in the room in seconds. They agreed it was a blood clot and gave oxygen, a stimulant, and an antispasmodic. It was a close call but Elaine made it. This is a familiar story to most physicians.

Blood tends to stagnate in the veins when the person is inactive. Movements helps to prevent clotting, which is the rationale behind early ambulation. The surgical patient is encouraged to move around in bed or walk about the room.

Blood clots that form and break loose inside a vein usually float through bigger and bigger vessels until the heart is reached. They slip through the auricles and ventricles with lightning speed and are shot into the lungs where the vessels get smaller and smaller.

The clot continues traveling until it reaches a passageway where it sticks and the blood cannot flow from that point on. A nerve reflex is initiated that makes the other blood vessels clamp down in a state of spasm.

The blood purifying system of the body is crippled within a few moments. No wonder Elaine went into shock with death hovering close. These accidents often can be warded off with anticoagulant drugs such as heparin or Dicumarol. But this would not be practical because it is difficult to predict in whom clots are likely to form.

Fear Expressed In Congress Of Foreign Refining

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fear was expressed in Congress this week that the United States may be hurt by growth of foreign refining unless imports of oil products are curtailed along with crude oil imports.

Rep. Ikard (D-Tex), member of the House Ways and Means Committee, pointed to this possibility in introducing a bill to limit oil imports, both crude and refined products, to the 1954 ratio of imports to domestic production.

Ikard said an oil import curtailment program cannot be completely effective unless it applies to oil products as well as crude. The present voluntary program applies only to crude oil.

Since 1954, Ikard said, refining capacity has climbed rapidly in Europe, the Near East, Cuba, Puerto Rico and Venezuela. He said there are indications of increasing imports of partially refined products for use in U.S. refineries.

"As these foreign areas develop refining facilities for making petroleum products," he said, "the crude that is now seeking markets in the United States at an increasing rate will be converted into products which will then seek a market in this country."

Several members of Congress from coal and oil producing states have endorsed Ikard's proposal.

Ikard said his plan avoids federal controls but leaves the president free to allocate imports between countries. Licenses to import would be awarded in accordance with regulations prescribed by the president.

Rep. Steed (D-Okla) said that up to now the Ikard amendment "offers the best approach we have."

Steed said there had been informal conferences by several oil state congressmen on the subject and that "this is the accepted version on how we are approaching the program."

Rep. Jarman (D-Okla) said he was "pleased that Ikard took the leadership in submitting a legislative proposal" but said he was studying the bill further. He said a legislative solution "is the only lasting solution."

MOOSE IN DISFAVOR

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me.—(UP) —Students at Maine Vocational-Technical Institute want to change the name of the yearbook, "The Moose Call" and remove the traditional picture of the antlered animal from its cover. They said elimination of the moose symbol would permit the book to represent technical progress rather than imparting "a wee flavor of Paul Bunyanism" to what they consider a growing technical institution.

TO PRESENT CASE

'Propaganda Media' In Council Planning

JACKSON, Miss (AP)—The Citizens Councils laid plans months ago "to enter the national propaganda media" such as television and motion pictures to present the case for racial segregation.

The program would be carried out by a separately incorporated "educational fund." Backers of a bill in the Mississippi Legislature to channel tax money into the councils say the money would go into this fund.

A pamphlet published last year by the Assn. of Mississippi Citizens Councils gave these goals for the educational fund:

"1. Publish and distribute nationwide factual literature presenting the case for states rights and racial integrity.

"2. Initiate a movement to enter the national propaganda media, such as the national press services, television, radio, national publications and the motion picture industry."

The House-approved bill which would allow cities and counties to spend up to $100 per million dollars in assessed valuation for these purposes now is in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee, after hearing Gov. J. P. Coleman behind closed doors, announced plans for closed-door hearings at which Citizens Council spokesmen would be asked to testify.

This educational fund is administered by the executive committee of the state association. The association also says it has local "political and elections" committees which, in effect, screen candidates for office.

The political and elections committee, a council pamphlet says, "attempts to get candidates to voice their opinion on vital subjects prior to election"—presumably on matters relating to segregation.

House critics claimed tax money under the proposed bill could be used to build political machines. They pointed out the bill called for no accounting of how the money would be spent. Citizens Council records are not open to public inspection.

The council pamphlet describing the educational fund says the National Assn for the Advancement of Colored People launched a 10 million-dollar "educational program" in 1953 under the slogan "free by 63." It says the purpose was to prepare public opinion for integration of Negroes into white society by 1963.

"We must counteract this propaganda campaign," the council's pamphlet says. The councils then acknowledged that "numbers of Southerners . . for various reasons, would prefer not to join a local Citizens Council."

The same pamphlet says the educational fund would be used "to encourage the free discussion by the citizens of the United States of those problems upon the solution of which depends the welfare and prosperity of the United States."

Fear Expressed In Congress Of Foreign Refining

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fear was expressed in Congress this week that the United States may be hurt by growth of foreign refining unless imports of oil products are curtailed along with crude oil imports.

Rep. Ikard (D-Tex), member of the House Ways and Means Committee, pointed to this possibility in introducing a bill to limit oil imports, both crude and refined products, to the 1954 ratio of imports to domestic production.

Ikard said an oil import curtailment program cannot be completely effective unless it applies to oil products as well as crude. The present voluntary program applies only to crude oil.

Since 1954, Ikard said, refining capacity has climbed rapidly in Europe, the Near East, Cuba, Puerto Rico and Venezuela. He said there are indications of increasing imports of partially refined products for use in U.S. refineries.

"As these foreign areas develop refining facilities for making petroleum products," he said, "the crude that is now seeking markets in the United States at an increasing rate will be converted into products which will then seek a market in this country."

Several members of Congress from coal and oil producing states have endorsed Ikard's proposal.

Ikard said his plan avoids federal controls but leaves the president free to allocate imports between countries. Licenses to import would be awarded in accordance with regulations prescribed by the president

Rep. Steed (D-Okla) said that up to now the Ikard amendment "offers the best approach we have."

Steed said there had been informal conferences by several oil state congressmen on the subject and that "this is the accepted version on how we are approaching the program."

Rep. Jarman (D-Okla) said he was "pleased that Ikard took the leadership in submitting a legislative proposal" but said he was studying the bill further. He said a legislative solution "is the only lasting solution."

WINS CASE

FARGO, N. D. —(UP) — Ned Nat on, a laborer from Starks La., declined to have an attorney when he was charged with auto theft. "I am perfectly capable of representing myself," he told the judge. Nation cross-examined the two prosecution witnesses and rested his case without testifying himself or presenting any witnesses. The judged ruled there was insufficient evidence to hold Nation and ordered him freed.

MOOSE IN DISFAVOR

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me.—(UP) —Students at Maine Vocational-Technical Institute want to change the name of the yearbook, "The Moose Call" and remove the traditional picture of the antlered animal from its cover. They said elimination of the moose symbol would permit the book to represent technical progress rather than imparting "a wee flavor of Paul Bunyanism" to what they consider a growing technical institution.

TO PRESENT CASE

'Propaganda Media' In Council Planning

JACKSON, Miss (AP)—The Citizens Councils laid plans months ago "to enter the national propaganda media" such as television and motion pictures to present the case for racial segregation.

The program would be carried out by a separately incorporated "educational fund." Backers of a bill in the Mississippi Legislature to channel tax money into the councils say the money would go into this fund.

A pamphlet published last year by the Assn. of Mississippi Citizens Councils gave these goals for the educational fund:

"1. Publish and distribute nationwide factual literature presenting the case for states rights and racial integrity.

"2. Initiate a movement to enter the national propaganda media, such as the national press services, television, radio, national publications and the motion picture industry."

The House-approved bill which would allow cities and counties to spend up to $100 per million dollars in assessed valuation for these purposes now is in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee, after hearing Gov. J. P. Coleman behind closed doors, announced plans for closed-door hearings at which Citizens Council spokesmen would be asked to testify.

This educational fund is administered by the executive committee of the state association. The association also says it has local "political and elections" committees which, in effect, screen candidates for office.

The political and elections committee, a council pamphlet says, "attempts to get candidates to voice their opinion on vital subjects prior to election"—presumably on matters relating to segregation.

House critics claimed tax money under the proposed bill could be used to build political machines. They pointed out the bill called for no accounting of how the money would be spent. Citizens Council records are not open to public inspection.

The council pamphlet describing the educational fund says the National Assn for the Advancement of Colored People launched a 10 million-dollar "educational program" in 1953 under the slogan "free by 63 " It says the purpose was to prepare public opinion for integration of Negroes into white society by 1963.

"We must counteract this propaganda campaign," the council's pamphlet says. The councils then acknowledged that "numbers of Southerners. . .for various reasons, would prefer not to join a local Citizens Council."

The same pamphlet says the educational fund would be used "to encourage the free discussion by the citizens of the United States of those problems upon the solution of which depends the welfare and prosperity of the United States."

General Strike May Start War

HAVANA (UP) — Rebel leader Fidel Castro, in an Easter calm before the storm, Saturday appealed to women and workers to join him and die, if necessary, in the war he promised to touch off "in the very near future" against President Fulgencio Batista.

It appeared that Castro's threat of "total war" would begin with a general strike, probably on Monday. In Havana Holy Saturday was calm, although some small depositors continued a run on banks. The Banco Godoy Soyan remained open three hours past its usual Saturday noon closing to accommodate worried customers.

Many residents streamed out to beaches. Shops were open as usual. Church attendance was high for Easter eve ceremonies.

But signs of preparation for armed action were everywhere. Government road blocks halted all traffic into Havana for rigid inspection. Yachts were forbidden to leave Havana harbor without giving 24-hour prior notice, as the government moved to head off expected outbursts of rebel violence.

Guards were posted at the vital Almendares tunnel, expected to be a major rebel target in event of attack on Havana.

The rebel radio continued to appeal to workers to "fight in the houses and on the streets."

The rebel workers vanguard organization pledged to drive out labor leaders and eliminate a payroll system which it charged was netting labor leaders of millions of dollars a year.

Fighting activity was under way in Santiago de Cuba, the country's second largest city and capital of Oriente Province.

Barricades of sandbags and concrete have been thrown up at key points in the town city. Two-man military patrols roamed constantly.

Rail and car traffic between cities in Oriente was virtually at a standstill because of rebel sabotage. Only air travel remained unimpaired. Deliveries of milk and food were reported halted in some districts of Santiago.

Khrushchev Urges Halt To A-Tests

MOSCOW (UP) — Nikita S. Khrushchev has personally urged the United States and Britain in formal notes to join Russia in suspending nuclear weapons tests so they may be finally banned "for all time," it was announced Saturday night.

The Soviet premier warned that the alternative was resumption of Russian tests which the Soviets announced they had completely banned. Khrushchev said the Russian suspension was effective March 31.

His notes were addressed to President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Another note was sent to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. They were the first such communications to Western heads of state from Khrushchev and marked his initial plunge into official diplomatic issues as new premier of the Soviet Union.

It was not immediately known whether the notes were identical. The British Foreign Office in London said only that the note to Macmillan "dealt with nuclear questions." There was no comment from Bonn.

Makes His Point

In his letter to Eisenhower, according to Radio Moscow, Khrushchev said the United States should suspend tests to "make possible the cessation everywhere and for all time of the testing of nuclear weapons."

If the United States and Britain refuse to agree, Khrushchev warned that "The Soviet Union will have no other choice under these circumstances but to consider itself, in the interests of its security, free of the assumed commitment to discontinue nuclear weapons tests."

Khrushchev thus put on paper what he said Friday in a speech of welcome to Polish leaders in Budapest, Hungary, in which he said the Soviet Union would be forced to follow the example of the Soviet Union" and resume tests.

The Soviet suspension date was announced March 31 by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, but he gave no date for it to take effect.

Rights Reserved

Khrushchev did that in his letter to Eisenhower, making it effective the day Gromyko spoke. At that time the Soviets reserved the right to revoke their ban if the Western powers refused to go ahead. Both Britain and the United States rejected the move as "propaganda."

The Soviet premier sent his notes through the embassies in Moscow.

He reviewed in the Eisenhower message the various Soviet proposals for ending nuclear tests "during the past three years."

He said that "unfortunately we have still not reached agreement on the unconditional and instantaneous discontinuation of nuclear weapons tests, or even on their suspension."

He stated it was worthy of the United States and Russia, "which were the first to develop atomic and hydrogen weapons and which possess considerable stocks thereof," to lead in the "noble cause" of ending test explosions.

Misfortune Lot Of Lana Turner

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Lana Turner, moviedom's original sweater girl who was billed for years as "the most flaming star since Clara Bow," has been dogged by personal misfortune during her 21 years in the Hollywood limelight.

At 38, Miss Turner has been married five times, to four husbands. She has had several broken romances.

She lost several children through miscarriages during two of her marriages. Her only child, Cheryl, who stabbed Johnny Stompanato to death Friday night, ran away last year and then a few months later suffered a broken back in a fall from a horse.

Miss Turner was a Hollywood high school girl of 17 when a friend of producer Mervyn Le Roy saw her sitting on a drugstore stool sipping an ice cream soda. She was taken to a studio, given her first part and soon ballyhooed by press agents as a "sweater girl."

Started as Cheer Leader

Born Julia Jean Turner on Feb. 8, 1920, in the little mining town of Wallace, Idaho, Miss Turner changed her first name to Lana for her movie career. Her father, Virgil Turner, was a mining man. He died when she was 9, and her mother, Mildred, reared her alone.

Lana made her first public appearances as a high school cheer leader. She showed the same cheer leader sparkle in her film appearances in her first movies, "They Won't Forget," "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," and "Two Girls on Broadway."

Early in 1940, she appeared in a movie with band leader Artie Shaw.

"He is the most egotistical man I ever met," she said. "I hate him!"

Within a few weeks, she had eloped with Shaw.

"Love is similiar to hate," she explained at the time. "Ask any doctor."

The marriage lasted until September, 1940, when she won a divorce from Shaw after testifying in court:

"It was fight, fight, fight, fight, fight, all the time. And often he wouldn't even talk to me."

Married and Remarried

Two years later, Miss Turner married Stephen Crane, then a tobacconist, after an evening of dancing. Soon after, the newlyweds discovered his divorce from Carol Kurtz of Indianapolis was not final. Lana got an annulment.

They were remarried on March 14, 1943. Their daughter, Cheryl, was born July 25, 1943, and Lana divorced Crane on Aug. 21, 1944.

Four years later, Lana was married again, to the three-time divorced millionaire sportsman Henry J. (Bob) Topping.

The marriage lasted only four years, during which Miss Turner suffered several miscarriages.

A year after she divorced Topping, she married actor Lex Barker in Italy, in 1953. They were divorced last June. Miss Turner charged Barker, a former screen Tarzan, with "extreme cruelty."

General Strike May Start War

HAVANA (UP) — Rebel leader Fidel Castro, in an Easter calm before the storm, Saturday appealed to women and workers to join him and die, if necessary, in the war he promised to touch off "in the very near future" against President Fulgencio Batista.

It appeared that Castro's threat of "total war" would begin with a general strike, probably on Monday. In Havana Holy Saturday was calm, although some small depositors continued a run on banks. The Banco Godoy - Soyan remained open three hours past its usual Saturday noon closing to accommodate worried customers.

Many residents streamed out to beaches. Shops were open as usual. Church attendance was high for Easter eve ceremonies.

But signs of preparation for armed action were everywhere. Government road blocks halted all traffic into Havana for rigid inspection. Yachts were forbidden to leave Havana harbor without giving 24-hour prior notice, as the government moved to head off expected outbursts of rebel violence.

Guards were posted at the vital Almendares tunnel, expected to be a major rebel target in event of attack on Havana.

The rebel radio continued to appeal to workers to "fight in the houses and on the streets."

The rebel workers vanguard organization pledged to drive out labor leaders and eliminate a checkoff system which it charged was netting labor leaders 67 million dollars a year.

Feverish activity was under way in Santiago de Cuba, the country's second largest city and capital of Oriente Provience.

Barricades of sandbags and concrete have been thrown up at key points in the tense city. Two-car military patrols roamed ceaselessly.

Rail and car traffic between cities in Oriente was virtually at a standstill because of rebel snipers. Only air travel remained unaffected. Deliveries of milk and bread were reported halted in some districts of Santiago.

Khrushchev Urges Halt To A-Tests

MOSCOW (UP) — Nikita S. Khrushchev has personally urged the United States and Britain in formal notes to join Russia in suspending nuclear weapons tests so they may be finally banned "for all time," it was announced Saturday night.

The Soviet premier warned that the alternative was resumption of Russian tests which the Soviets announced they had conditionally banned. Khrushchev said the Russian suspension was effective March 31.

His notes were addressed to President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Another note was sent to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. They were the first known communications to Western heads of state from Khrushchev and marked his initial plunge into official diplomatic issues as new premier of the Soviet Union.

It was not immediately known whether the notes were identical. The British Foreign Office in London said only that the note to Macmillan "dealt with nuclear questions." There was no comment from Bonn.

Makes His Point

In his letter to Eisenhower, according to Radio Moscow, Khrushchev said the United States should suspend tests to "make possible the cessation everywhere and for all time of the testing of nuclear weapons.

If the United States and Britain refuse to agree, Khrushchev warned that "The Soviet Union will have no other choice under these circumstances but to consider itself, in the interests of its security, free of the assumed commitment to discontinue nuclear weapons tests.

Khrushchev thus put on paper what he said Friday in a speech in Budapest, Hungary, in which he challenged the Western powers to "follow the example of the Soviet Union" and suspend tests.

The Soviet suspension first was announced March 31 by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, but he gave no date for it to take effect.

Rights Reserved

Khrushchev did that in his letter to Eisenhower, making it effective the day Gromyko spoke. At that time, the Soviets reserved the right to revoke their ban if the Western powers refused to go along. Both Britain and the United States rejected the move as "propaganda."

The Soviet premier sent his notes through the embassies in Moscow.

He reviewed in the Eisenhower message the various Soviet proposals for ending nuclear tests "during the past three years."

He said that "unfortunately we have still not reached agreement on the unconditional and instantaneous discontinuation of nuclear weapons tests, or even on their suspension."

He stated it was worthy of the United States and Russia, "which were the first to develop atomic and hydrogen weapons and which possess considerable stocks thereof," to lead in the "noble cause" of ending test explosions.

Misfortune Lot Of Lana Turner

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Lana Turner, moviedom's original sweater girl who was billed for years as "the most flaming star since Clara Bow," has been dogged by personal misfortune during her 21 years in the Hollywood limelight.

At 38, Miss Turner has been married five times, to four husbands. She has had several broken romances.

She lost several children through miscarriages during two of her marriages. Her only child, Cheryl, who stabbed Johnny Stompanato to death Friday night, ran away last year and then a few months later suffered a broken back in a fall from a horse.

Miss Turner was a Hollywood high school girl of 17 when a friend of producer Mervyn Le Roy saw her sitting on a drugstore stool sipping an ice cream soda. She was taken to a studio, given her first part and soon ballyhooed by press agents as a "sweater girl."

Started as Cheer Leader

Born Julia Jean Turner on Feb. 8, 1920, in the little mining town of Wallace, Idaho, Miss Turner changed her first name to Lana for her movie career. Her father, Virgil Turner, was a mining man. He died when she was 9, and her mother, Mildred, reared her alone.

Lana made her first public appearances as a high school cheer leader. She showed the same cheer leader sparkle in her film appearances in her first movies, "They Won't Forget," "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," and "Two Girls on Broadway."

Early in 1940, she appeared in a movie with band leader Artie Shaw.

"He is the most egotistical man I ever met," she said. "I hate him!"

Within a few weeks, she had eloped with Shaw.

"Love is similiar to hate," she explained at the time. "Ask any doctor."

The marriage lasted until September, 1940, when she won a divorce from Shaw after testifying in court:

"It was fight, fight, fight, fight, fight, all the time. And often he wouldn't even talk to me."

Married and Remarried

Two years later, Miss Turner married Stephen Crane, then a tobacconist, after an evening of dancing. Soon after, the newlyweds discovered his divorce from Carol Kurtz of Indianapolis was not final. Lana got an annulment.

They were remarried on March 14, 1943. Their daughter, Cheryl, was born July 25, 1943, and Lana divorced Crane on Aug. 21, 1944.

Four years later, Lana was married again, to the three-time divorced millionaire sportsman Henry J. (Bob) Topping.

The marriage lasted only four years, during which Miss Turner suffered several miscarriages.

A year after she divorced Topping, she married actor Lex Barker in Italy, in 1953. They were divorced last June. Miss Turner charged Barker, a former screen Tarzan, with "extreme cruelty."

TO PROBLEMS

Miss. Lawmakers Find Solutions

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Last week marked the beginning of the end of the 1958 Legislature as lawmakers found solutions to some problems and neared compromise in others.

High on the list was a Senate-House agreement on appropriations bills to remove a restriction against using the money for legislators' salaries. The action released nearly 50 million dollars in appropriations bills to the governor for his signature.

Similar action is expected this week on another 100 million dollars worth of appropriations.

Also headed for the governor's desk is a bill revamping procedure for registering voters as an additional barrier to Negro voting.

The proposal followed a suggestion by Gov. J. P. Coleman when the Legislature convened last January.

The bill would remove registration duties from the circuit clerk and give it to a court-appointed registrar who would operate as an inferior court and for a maximum of five days a month.

He would have sole charge of the poll books and would make all decisions as to which applicants qualified under Mississippi's law requiring applicants to explain duties of citizenship.

A Senate-House conference reported progress in seeking compromise between Senate and House versions of raising teacher pay and providing for a nine-month school term.

The main barrier to agreement stems from inability of the conferees to determine the exact amount each version would cost state.

The House version—raises up to $400 and an optional ninth month with the state paying part of the cost—would require 97 million dollars. The Senate version—raises up to $725 and a state-paid mandatory nine-month school term—would cost eight million dollars more.

Meanwhile, the Budget Commission has postponed its meetings on how to trim the 1958-60 budget to provide for teacher pay raises until the conferees decide which version to accept. The commission will meet again Wednesday.

The Senate Constitution Committee plans a meeting Tuesday to consider two constitutional amendments designed to pave the way for a September special session to consider additional amendments to help prevent school integration.

The two amendments would liberalize the method of amending the 1890 document and would add seen seats to the 140-seat House and five seats to the 49-seat Senate.

Some lawmakers felt only a constitutional convention — which the 1957 special session rejected in favor of amendments — would result in reapportionment.

So far, the Legislature has not agreed on any amendments to the Constitution.

And none of the lawmakers call the addition of 12 seats reapportionment.

In other action last week, the Legislature approved a bill providing for slum clearance in all Mississippi municipalities.

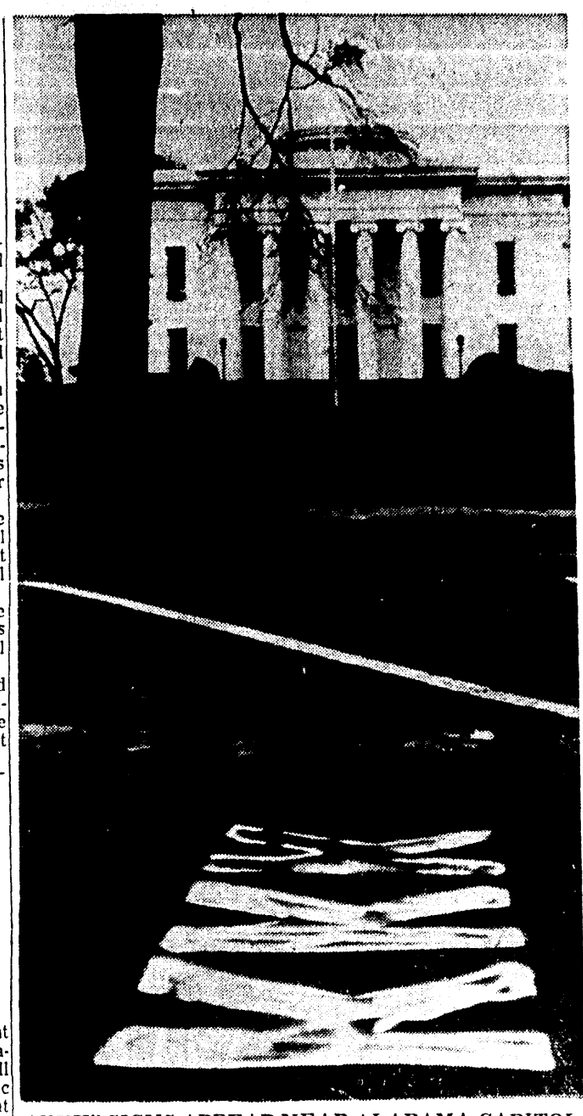
Under the bill, the cities would put up one-third and the federal government two-thirds of the cost of clearing blighted areas and erecting public housing.

Another bill which passed both houses but returns to the Senate for agreement on House amendments would authorize state ownership and development of ports to help Mississippi compete for the world market.

Under the bill, ports would vote themselves under state control and the state would develop port facilities through the Agricultural and Industrial Board.

Major differences between the Senate and the House versions is whether to issue revenue or full faith and credit bonds.

In either case, the state would be requested to make up any unpaid notes but interest rates are lower for full faith and credit bonds.



"KKK" SIGNS APPEAR NEAR ALABAMA CAPITOL AFTER NEGRO MASS MEETING PUBLICIZED—Large Ku Klux Klan signs were discovered painted on Montgomery streets early yesterday, seven near the capitol, after plans were disclosed for a Negro mass protest meeting there Easter Day. Some 25 to 30 signs were reported. Police say they have no information on those responsible for the signs. (AP Wirephoto)

SAC Figures Much In Ike Military Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's defense reorganization plan probably would bring all medium and long-range ballistic missiles under centralized combat direction of the Strategic Air Command for planning or actual wartime purposes.

This is suggested strongly in the organizational chart which includes the unified and specified commands proposed under the new program.

Along with the unified commands—for Europe, Alaska, the Atlantic, Pacific, Caribbean, and Eastern Atlantic-Mediterranean—appears the Air Force's SAC command.

SAC's immediate primary mission is to operate its heavy and medium bombers against strategic targets in the event of war. To this function already has been added the use of air-breathing, cruise-type missiles like the 5,000-mile-range Snark and the intermediate range Matador.

Along with the ballistic missiles is coming another development—the military reconnaissance earth satellite, to scout the globe from the edge of space.

In several Pentagon quarters, other than the Navy, there is conviction that all phases of long-distance missile warfare must be brought under over-all control. The reasons cited for this are several:

(1) That even after Intercontinental and Intermediate Range Ballistic Missiles are operationally ready, they will be used together with instead of in place of manned bombers; (2) the essential purpose is to get nuclear explosive on an enemy target regardless of which service provides the missiles and the firing crews; (3) all intelligence needed for strategic missile warfare should be available to the agency directing that warfare, including data to be provided for reconnaissance satellites.

Some Army experts estimate that more than 90 per cent of the probable strategic points in Russia would be the logical targets for the Intermediate Range Ballistic Missiles, with ranges from 800 to 1,500 miles. All three services are in the IRBM field, including the Navy with its Polaris missile to be fired from nuclear submarines submerged off an enemy's coast.

Bringing all ballistic missile operating under the single, specified command of SAC could mean that even the Navy's Polaris would fall under general direction of an Air Force agency.

Story Of A Bad Boy In A School

By ROBERT FARRINGTON

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the story of Tony and Mr. Carpenter and the toughest school in town.

Tony is a bad boy in a school of bad boys. The city Board of Education doesn't use words like that. It calls Tony "disturbed" and assigns him to a special "problem" school opened a few weeks ago in a condemned building in downtown Greenwich Village. All the boys there have been expelled from other schools.

Tony, of Italian descent, was beaten up the other day. His right eye was half-closed with a swollen bruise over the cheekbone. He sat with his back to the wall between two other white boys in Carpenter's room.

Carpenter is a Negro, as are most of the dozen boys in his class. School officials say they don't keep count by race. Negroes predominate among the school's 90-odd boys, compared to whites and Puerto Ricans.

Edward Carpenter, 37, is round-faced, of medium height and with a hard, muscular handshake. Carpenter means business. He had one of his students, a 15-year-old Negro, taken to the police station after the boy pushed and shoved him in a schoolyard squabble. The boy, who was charged with juvenile delinquency, was back in the classroom, showing no particular animosity.

Carpenter was testing his dozen students'reading level by having them come to his desk quietly one by one. Abruptly, he addressed the class. "Let's talk about what's on all of our minds. We're thinking it, let's say it. What about it, Tony? What happened to you?"

Tony, surprised, looked around cautiously. Then in a low voice, he answered, "A bunch of guys jumped me. Colored guys. I didn't do anything to them."

"Well, what about it, class? Why did they jump him?" Carpenter asked.

There was a shuffling of feet and a thin Negro boy up front said, "Maybe they wanted to show him who was boss around here."

"Is that it? Do you think colored boys pick on white boys?" Carpenter asked.

Most of the heads nodded vigorously. A white boy with a strong Spanish accent said, "There's more colored in the school. If there was more Puerto Rican or Spanish, they'd pick on the colored boys, and if there were more whites they'd pick on all the others. That's just how it is."

"Do you think that's fair?" asked Carpenter.

"What can you do about it? You colored boys are in the majority."

A Negro boy said "we wasn't there when Tony got jumped. If it happens again, we could make the others stand back—just one against one."

"Suppose he's bigger than Tony, is that fair?"

No, the boys agreed, that wasn't fair.

The talk switched to tough kids in other classes, and to another teacher who failed to control them during the brief moments the classes were together in the cafeteria.

"He's afraid of the kids," said one boy.

"He's a phony," said another.

"Am I afraid, am I a phony?" Carpenter shot back.

"No; you don't let us get away with anything."

Carpenter sketched some of the background of the maligned teacher. He had been a top basketball player, a college boxing champion. Carpenter told them of Jackie Robinson and the temper he held in check and the slurs he endured as the first Negro baseball player in the major leagues.

"Don't you think it takes more of a man, that it's harder to keep your mouth shut and not hit somebody?" Carpenter concluded.

The class agreed it did and that it had been hasty in calling the teacher a "phony."

Going from classroom to classroom, it was evident there was good stuff in most of the boys. Their faces were clean, alert, intelligent, their clothing neat. Many wore ties. Carpenter insists on ties. He feels proper dress builds selfrespect.

The school principal, Irving M. Boroff, an old hand at handling difficult boys, won't let them wear dungarees, boots or motorcycle jackets. Matches, and therefore cigarettes, are forbidden for fear of fire in the 50-year-old building. Actually, the building looks as solid and safe as a firehouse, but it was condemned to make way for a playground for a new school.

Each morning, the boys have to turn out their pockets. Matches and cigarettes are confiscated. This also goes for any little thing like a sharpened screwdriver or a beer can opener which is a wicked weapon in a fight.

A tall, clean-cut Negro, said to the reporter, "You want to know what's wrong with this school? The teachers aren't tough enough. That's what's the matter."

TO PROBLEMS

Miss. Lawmakers Find Solutions

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Last week marked the beginning of the end of the 1958 Legislature as lawmakers found solutions to some problems and neared compromise in others.

High on the list was a Senate-House agreement on appropriations bills to remove a restriction against using the money for legislators' salaries. The action released nearly 50 million dollars in appropriations bills to the governor for his signature.

Similar action is expected this week on another 100 million dollars worth of appropriations.

Also headed for the governor's desk is a bill revamping procedure for registering voters as an additional barrier to Negro voting.

The proposal followed a suggestion by Gov. J. P. Coleman when the Legislature convened last January.

The bill would remove registration duties from the circuit clerk and give it to a court-appointed registrar who would operate as an inferior court and for a maximum of five days a month.

He would have sole charge of the poll books and would make all decisions as to which applicants qualified under Mississippi's law requiring applicants to explain duties of citizenship.

A Senate-House conference reported progress in seeking compromise between Senate and House versions of raising teacher pay and providing for a nine-month school term.

The main barrier to agreement stems from inability of the conferees to determine the exact amount each version would cost state.

The House version—raises up to $400 and an optional ninth month with the state paying part of the cost—would require 97 million dollars. The Senate version—raises up to $725 and a state-paid mandatory nine-month school term—would cost eight million dollars more.

Meanwhile, the Budget Commission has postponed its meetings on how to trim the 1958-60 budget to provide for teacher pay raises until the conferees decide which version to accept. The commission will meet again Wednesday.

The Senate Constitution Committee plans a meeting Tuesday to consider two constitutional amendments designed to pave the way for a September special session to consider additional amendments to help prevent school integration.

The two amendments would liberalize the method of amending the 1890 document and would add seen seats to the 140-seat House and five seats to the 49-seat Senate.

Some lawmakers felt only a constitutional convention — which the 1957 special session rejected in favor of amendments — would result in reapportionment.

So far, the Legislature has not agreed on any amendments to the Constitution.

And none of the lawmakers call the addition of 12 seats reapportionment.

In other action last week, the Legislature approved a bill providing for slum clearance in all Mississippi municipalities.

Under the bill, the cities would put up one-third and the federal government two-thirds of the cost of clearing blighted areas and erecting public housing.

Another bill which passed both houses but returns to the Senate for agreement on House amendments would authorize state ownership and development of ports to help Mississippi compete for the world market.

Under the bill, ports would vote themselves under state control and the state would develop port facilities through the Agricultural and Industrial Board.

Major differences between the Senate and the House versions is whether to issue revenue or full faith and credit bonds.

In either case, the state would be requested to make up any unpaid notes but interest rates are lower for full faith and credit bonds.

SAC Figures Much In Ike Military Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's defense reorganization plan probably would bring all medium and long-range ballistic missiles under centralized combat direction of the Strategic Air Command for planning or actual wartime purposes.

This is suggested strongly in the organizational chart which includes the unified and specified commands proposed under the new program.

Along with the unified commands—for Europe, Alaska, the Atlantic, Pacific, Caribbean, and Eastern Atlantic-Mediterranean—appears the Air Force's SAC command.

SAC's immediate primary mission is to operate its heavy and medium bombers against strategic targets in the event of war. To this function already has been added the use of air-breathing, cruise-type missiles like the 5,000-mile-range Snark and the intermediate range Matador.

Along with the ballistic missiles is coming another development—the military reconnaissance earth satellite, to scout the globe from the edge of space.

In several Pentagon quarters, other than the Navy, there is conviction that all phases of long-distance missile warfare must be brought under over-all control. The reasons cited for this are several:

(1) That even after Intercontinental and Intermediate Range Ballistic Missiles are operationally ready, they will be used together with instead of in place of manned bombers; (2) the essential purpose is to get nuclear explosive on an enemy target regardless of which service provides the missiles and the firing crews; (3) all intelligence needed for strategic missile warfare should be available to the agency directing that warfare, including data to be provided for reconnaissance satellites.

Some Army experts estimate that more than 90 per cent of the probable strategic points in Russia would be the logical targets for the Intermediate Range Ballistic Missiles, with ranges from 800 to 1,500 miles. All three services are in the IRBM field, including the Navy with its Polaris missile to be fired from nuclear submarines submerged off an enemy's coast.

Bringing all ballistic missile operating under the single, specified command of SAC could mean that even the Navy's Polaris would fall under general direction of an Air Force agency.

Story Of A Bad Boy In A School

By ROBERT FARRINGTON

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the story of Tony and Mr. Carpenter and the toughest school in town.

Tony is a bad boy in a school of bad boys. The city Board of Education doesn't use words like that. It calls Tony "disturbed" and assigns him to a special "problem" school opened a few weeks ago in a condemned building in downtown Greenwich Village. All the boys there have been expelled from other schools.

Tony, of Italian descent, was beaten up the other day. His right eye was half-closed with a swollen bruise over the cheekbone. He sat with his back to the wall between two other white boys in Carpenter's room.

Carpenter is a Negro, as are most of the dozen boys in his class. School officials say they don't keep count by race. Negroes predominate among the school's 90-odd boys, compared to whites and Puerto Ricans.

Edward Carpenter, 37, is round-faced, of medium height and with a hard, muscular handshake. Carpenter means business. He had one of his students, a 15-year-old Negro, taken to the police station after the boy pushed and shoved him in a schoolyard squabble. The boy, who was charged with juvenile delinquency, was back in the classroom, showing no particular animosity.

Carpenter was testing his dozen students' reading level by having them come to his desk quietly one by one. Abruptly, he addressed the class. "Let's talk about what's on all of our minds. We're thinking it, let's say it. What about it, Tony? What happened to you?"

Tony, surprised, looked around cautiously. Then in a low voice, he answered, "A bunch of guys jumped me. Colored guys. I didn't do anything to them."

"Well, what about it, class? Why did they jump him?" Carpenter asked.

There was a shuffling of feet and a thin Negro boy up front said, "Maybe they wanted to show him who was boss around here."

"Is that it? Do you think colored boys pick on white boys?" Carpenter osked.

Most of the heads nodded vigorously. A white boy with a strong Spanish accent said, "There's more colored in the school. If there was more Puerto Rican or Spanish, they'd pick on the colored boys, and if there were more whites they'd pick on all the others. That's just how it is."

"Do you think that's fair?" asked Carpenter.

"What can you do about it? You colored boys are in the majority."

A Negro boy said "we wasn't there when Tony got jumped. If it happens again, we could make the others stand back—just one against one."

"Suppose he's bigger than Tony, is that fair?"

No, the boys agreed, that wasn't fair.

The talk switched to tough kids in other classes, and to another teacher who failed to control them during the brief moments the classes were together in the cafeteria.

"He's afraid of the kids," said one boy.

"He's a phony," said another.

"No; you don't let us get away with anything."

VOTING SET THIS WEEK

Hand Shaking Time Almost Over In W. M. Primary

By LYNN GARRETT
Staff Writer

Hand-shaking time is running out for the 14 candidates in the West Monroe Democratic primary, as voters prepare to go to the polls Tuesday to select a mayor and five aldermen.

Seeking re-election to the mayor's post is J. Allan Norris, incumbent, with Marlin Hattaway as the opposition candidate.

Norris, an area resident for 35 years, was principal of Collinston Junior High School two years, and was associated with the Central Savings Bank for 25 years. He is a graduate of Choudrant High School, Louisiana State Normal College, Louisiana Tech, and Bowling Green Business University, Bowling Green, Ky.

He is ending his first full term as West Monroe mayor, and also served one year of the 14-month unexpired term after a previous mayor resigned.

Hattaway, West Monroe businessman, has been a resident of the city for 45 years. He held a post on the city council from 1938-1950, and ran for mayor in 1954, losing to Norris. He owns real estate interests.

Aldermen Vie

Four of the present aldermen, A. P. Burkett, C. E. Ponder, Roy Cash and Amos Hood, are running for re-election to their positions. Burkett, a salesman, is ending his first term on the council. He has been a resident of West Monroe for 18 years.

Ponder is a retired Post Office employee, and is also finishing his first term on the council. He has lived in the city for 34 years.

A resident of West Monroe for 44 years, Cash is in the radio and appliance repair business, and is ending his first term as alderman also.

Hood, employed by the Ouachita Citizen, is ending one full term on the council, and also served by appointment for one year several years ago.

Seeking Posts

The other eight men vying for council posts are R. C. "Dick" Jolissaint, Loy K. Heard, George Cox, A. J. Lester, H. H. McBroom, Jack Russell, Ben Farmer and B. H. Dyar.

Jolissaint is owner and operator of a welding company, and has lived in West Monroe 23 years. He was previously an alderman for one term, and was acting mayor for a short time several years ago.

A partner in a contractors firm, Heard has lived in the city 31 years and this is his first time to seek a city office.

Cox has lived in the city for 25 years, and is a plumbing and heating contractor. Lester, who is in the insurance and real estate business, has never held a city office and has lived in West Monroe 23 years.

A native of West Monroe, McBroom is a mechanic for a construction company and has never held a city post. Russell, co-owner and operator of a cab company, is a native of the city also.

Farmer is truck sales manager for an automobile agency. He has lived in West Monroe 23 years and has never held a city office. Dyar, an accountant, has never held a city position either, and has lived in West Monroe for many years.

Tell Views

Norris has asserted that the streets that were damaged by the sewer program will all be in excellent condition when the current work is finished. Bad weather has hampered our efforts along these lines," the mayor said. "But residents may be confident that when we finish the project, all streets will be in just as good condition as they were before the sewer work, and in some cases will be in even better condition."

"Drainage programs, a greatly expanded recreational program, and all other projects which will mean growth and progress for our city, will continue to go my full attention if I am re-elected my opponent."

Norris contends he has made it possible for West Monroe to grow and prosper these past few years, he added. "If you elect me as your mayor, we will all work for that for even greater accomplishments during those next four years."

Hattaway has said he is "not a politician, but a businessman and running a city is his business." He has commented he would like to see some of the lower-paid city employees paid more money, and said that if elected he would try to make this possible. Hattaway has also mentioned the street, drainage and recreation programs, and has pledged his full attention to the duties of the city, that its growth might continue.

City Betterment

Burkett has mentioned that he will lend his efforts to helping West Monroe obtain the proposed hospital, and said he would "cooperate in every way for the betterment of the city."

Ponder gave credit to the residents of the city for the "excellent record of accomplishments West Monroe has enjoyed these past four years." He said he was asking re-election that he might "continue to be part of West Monroe's march for progress."

"If re-elected, my only commitments are to you, the people," Cash said. "I am for progress in general and will work diligently towards that end."

Hood said that any and all attempts at improving West Monroe would get his full attention, and that he wanted only to see the city continue "on the present upward trend."

Jolissaint has said he is very interested in industries for West Monroe, and added that he is for betterment in all phases of the city's work and activities.

Improve Conditions

Emphasizing that he is not running to gain prestige, Heard has said he wants only to "improve conditions in West Monroe, especially the streets and drainage."

Cox has promised to "cooperate in every way possible, in order that West Monroe and its people can have the best advantages a city administration can offer."

Lester, who said he feels the "full potentialities of West Monroe have not yet been realized," has pledged himself to work toward that goal. "Our city is growing, and the city and its people must progress together," he added.

Progressive Note

Although touching on a generally progressive note was McBroom, who said he wanted to be a part of West Monroe's growth, and added that he believed full cooperation can bring about an even greater jump along such lines.

Russell vowed to cooperate in every way possible in order that the "betterment of all our citizens may be realized."

Noting that he was very interested in the city's recreational program, Farmer said he would also do everything in his power to help work on the street program move along as satisfactorily as possible.

Dyar pledged to represent "all the people, in all walks of life." He said the city "gets money from taxpayers, and renders service in return." He added that he is an advocate of a high standard of service.

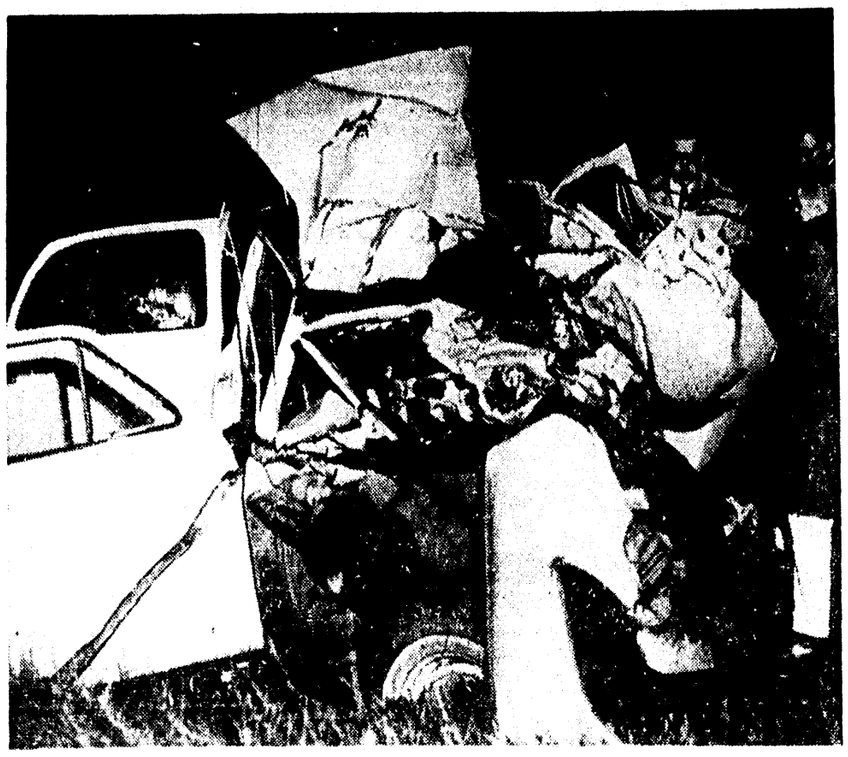
Polling Places

Eight polling places for the election have been announced. The city's approximately 4,700 registered voters are located in eight precincts of Ward 5.

Polling places are, precinct 1, Agricultural Building, 704 Cypress St.; precinct 2, Old City Hall, Trenton St.; precinct 3, fire station at Coleman Avenue and South Sixth street; precinct 4, Mitchell School, Mitchell Lane; precinct 6, Spiller's Grocery, Montgomery street; precinct 8, Hattaway's Motel, 1300 Cypress St.; precinct 9, Claiborne street fire station, and precinct 11, Fairgrounds Building.

Deputies at the polls will be Mrs. Mattie Godwin, Mrs. Lela Cullom, E. E. Sherrard, Mrs. Fields, A. D. Spillers, Mrs. Roylea Liner, Mrs. Webb Goodlett and Mrs. M. R. Coon.

About 50 commissioners have also been named for duty at the precinct headquarters. Polls will open at 6 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. State regulations provide for the second primary to be held three weeks after the date of the first primary, thus setting the second for April 29.



FIVE DIE IN CAR ACCIDENT — Three boys and two girls were apparently killed outright, when a Greyhound bus and a passenger car collided at Creswell, Oregon, Friday. Nine persons among the Greyhound's 25 pasengers, were taken from the wrecked bus to a hospital in Eugene. Three were admitted, the others treated and released. The death car, which ended up about 70 feet from the bus, shows coroner's deputies and onlookers prying the car door to get a body of one of the victims. (AP Wirephoto)

Reb's Major Lifeline Is Endangered

BUKITTINGGI, Indonesia (UP) —Revolutionary forces retreated on two fronts before Indonesian government troops in the Barisian Mountains Saturday and the loss of the rebels' only major lifeline to the outside world was imminent.

Rebel government officials admitted their troops had to fall back before heavy troop, mortar and air attacks by twin central government drives from Pakanbaru and Rengat toward the revolutionary strongholds of Bukittinggi and Padang.

Rebel leaders in Bukittinggi made plans to "take to the hills" and continue their revolution with guerrilla warfare if necessary.

Rebel Interior Minister Dahlan Djambek said the government troops had overrun the key town of Lubuk Djambi, about 80 miles southeast of Bukittinggi, and were within 25 miles of the vital gasoline supply road from neutral South Sumatra.

He said another arm of the central government force had broken through rebel defenses at Bankinang and were engaged with a battalion of rebel troops about 50 miles northeast of Bukittinggi.

There was no report on the success or failure of a rebel counter attack at Siantar, about 50 miles south of the North Sumatran capital of Medan. This was designed as a diversion to take the pressure off Bukittinggi and the rebel port of Padang.

Western newsmen who arrived in Singapore from Sumatra said the central government forces were well organized and the rebels appeared doomed.

(In Jakarta, an Indonesian army spokesman charged that the retreating rebels were looting banks, homes and stores, burning homes and leaving IOU's for food they took.

Sees Chance Of Overriding Ike's Veto

WASHINGTON, April 5—UP — Sen. Allen J. Ellender today fired a double - barreled blast at the administration and food industry "middlemen" for cooperating to "beat the farmer down, down, down."

The chairman of the Senate Agriculture committee also predicted there is a "good possibility" that enough votes can be mustered in the senate to override President Eisenhower's farm freeze veto.

The Louisiana Democrat told a reporter he is "confident" that after recessing lawmakers will hear enough from the folks back home to convince them that "now is the time to depress farm prices further."

Lowering Farm Income

In a radio report, (WWL-New Orleans) Ellender said "with a depression stalking our country," a further lowering of farm income will ultimately lead to concentration of farm output in a "very few lands."

That, he said, will mean a "monopoly in agriculture with the accompanying evils of price gouging and possible future shortages."

Ellender said it is "inconceivable" that Eisenhower should have cited last month's four per cent rise in monthly farm prices in his veto message as an encouraging sign.

He said 47 per cent of the entire rise came from only three commodities - strawberries, potatoes and eggs-which account for only 10 per cent of total farm income.

Food Costs Increase

Arguing against the administration's contention that lower farm prices will mean lower retail food prices for consumers, Ellender said the retail price of the family food basket has jumper from $920 to $1,042 since 1950.

He said the farmer's share of the total has dropped by $12 while the middleman's portion has gone up by $134.

Elaborating to a reporter, Ellender charged that middlemen have "cooperated" with the administration's efforts to "prove" that low farm prices mean low retail food prices.

VOTING SET THIS WEEK

Hand Shaking Time Almost Over In W. M. Primary

By LYNN GARRETT
Staff Writer

Hand-shaking time is running out for the 14 candidates in the West Monroe Democratic primary, as voters prepare to go to the polls Tuesday to select a mayor and five aldermen.

Seeking re-election to the mayor's post is J. Allan Norris, incumbent, with Marlin Hattaway as the opposition candidate.

Norris, an area resident for 25 years, was principal of Collinston Junior High School two years, and was associated with the Central Savings Bank for 25 years. He is a graduate of Choudrant High School, Louisiana State Normal College, Louisiana Tech, and Bowling Green Business University, Bowling Green, Ky.

He is ending his first full term as West Monroe mayor, and also served one year of the 14-month unexpired term after a previous mayor resigned.

Hattaway, West Monroe businessman, has been a resident of the city for 40 years. He held a post on the city council from 1938-1950, and ran for mayor in 1954, losing to Norris. He also has real estate interests.

Aldermen Vie

Four of the present aldermen, A. P. Burkett, C. E. Ponder, Roy Cash and Amos Hood, are running for re-election to their positions. Burkett, a salesman, is ending his first term on the council. He has been a resident of West Monroe for 18 years.

Ponder is a retired Post Office employee, and is also finishing his first term on the council. He has lived in the city for 34 years.

A resident of West Monroe for 44 years, Cash is in the radio and appliance repair business, and is ending his first term as alderman also.

Hood, employed by the Ouachita Citizen, is ending one full term on the council, and also served by appointment for one year several years ago.

Seeking Posts

The other eight men vying for council posts are R. C. "Dick" Jolissaint, Loy K. Heard, George Cox, A. J. Lester, H. H. McBroom, Jack Russell, Ben Farmer and B. H. Dyar.

Jolissaint is owner and operator of a welding company, and has lived in West Monroe 23 years. He was previously an alderman for one term, and was acting mayor for a short time several years ago.

A partner in a contractors firm, Heard has lived in the city 31 years and this is his first time to seek a city office.

Cox has lived in the city for 25 years, and is a plumbing and heating contractor. Lester, who is in the insurance and real estate business, has never held a city office and has lived in West Monroe 23 years.

A native of West Monroe, McBroom is a mechanic for a construction company and has never held a city post. Russell, co-owner and operator of a cab company, is a native of the city also.

Farmer is truck sales manager for an automobile agency. He has lived in West Monroe 23 years and has never held a city office. Dyar, an accountant, has never held a city position either, and has lived in West Monroe for many years.

Tell Views

Norris has assured that the streets that were damaged by the sewer program will all be in excellent condition when the current work is finished. "Bad weather has hampered our efforts along these lines," the mayor said, "but residents may be confident that when we finish the project, all streets will be in just as good condition as they were before the sewer work, and in some cases will be in even better condition."

"Drainage programs, a greatly expanded recreational program, and all other projects which will mean growth and progress for our city, will continue to get my full attention if you will re-elect me as your mayor."

"Your cooperation has made it possible for West Monroe to grow and prosper these past few years," he added. "If you will re-elect me as your mayor, we will all work together for even greater accomplishments during these next four years."

Hattaway has said he is "not a politician, but a businessman and running a city is big business." He has commented he would like to see some of the lower-paid city employees paid more money, and said that if elected he would try to make this possible. Hattaway has also mentioned the street, drainage and recreation programs, and has pledged his full attention to the duties of the city, that its growth might continue.

City Betterment

Burkett has mentioned that he will lend his efforts to helping West Monroe obtain the proposed hospital, and said he would "cooperate in every way for the betterment of the city."

Ponder gave credit to the residents of the city for the "excellent record of accomplishments West Monroe has enjoyed these past four years." He said he was asking re-election that he might "continue to be part of West Monroe's march for progress."

"If re-elected, my only commitments are to you, the people." Cash said, "I am for progress in general and will work diligently towards that end."

Hood said that any and all attempts at improving West Monroe would get his full attention, and that he wanted only to see the city continue "on the present upward trend."

Jolissaint has said he is very interested in industries for West Monroe, and added that he is for betterment in all phases of the city's work and activities.

Improve Conditions

Emphasizing that he is not running to gain prestige, Heard has said he wants only to "improve conditions in West Monroe, especially the streets and drainage."

Cox has promised to "cooperate in every way possible, in order that West Monroe and its people can have the best advantages a city administration can offer."

Lester, who said he feels the "full potentialities of West Monroe have not yet been realized," has pledged himself to work toward that goal. "Our city is growing, and the city and its people must progress together," he added.

Progressive Note

Although touching on a generally progressive note was McBroom, who said he wanted to be a part of West Monroe's growth, and added that he believed full cooperation can bring about an even greater jump along such lines.

Russell vowed to cooperate in every way possible in order that the "betterment of all our citizens may be realized."

Noting that he was very interested in the city's recreational program, Farmer said he would also do everything in his power to help work on the street program move along as satisfactorily as possible.

Dyar pledged to represent "all the people, in all walks of life." He said the city "gets money from taxpayers, and renders service in return." He added that he is an advocate of a high standard of service.

Polling Places

Eight polling places for the election have been announced. The city's approximately 4,700 registered voters are located in eight precincts of Ward 5.

Polling places are, precinct 1, Agricultural Building, 704 Cypress St.; precinct 2,, Old City Hall, Trenton St.; precinct 3, fire station at Coleman Avenue and South Sixth street; precinct 4, Mitchell School, Mitchell Lane; precinct 6, Spiller's Grocery, Montgomery street; precinct 8, Hattaway's Motel, 1300 Cypress St.; precinct 9, Claiborne street fire station, and precinct 11, Fairgrounds Building.

Deputies at the polls will be Mrs. Mattie Godwin, Mrs. Lela Cullom, E. E. Sherrard, Mrs. Fields, A. D. Spillers, Mrs. Roylea Liner, Mrs. Webb Goodlett and Mrs. M. R. Coon.

About 50 commissioners have also been named for duty at the precinct headquarters. Polls will open at 6 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. State regulations provide for the second primary to be held three weeks after the date of the first primary, thus setting the second for April 29.

Reb's Major Lifeline Is Endangered

BUKITTINGGI, Indonesia (UP) —Revolutionary forces retreated on two fronts before Indonesian government troops in the Barisian Mountains Saturday and the loss of the rebels' only major lifeline to the outside world was imminent.

Rebel government officials admitted their troops had to fall back before heavy troop, mortar and air attacks by twin central government drives from Pakanbaru and Rengat toward the revolutionary strongholds of Bukittinggi and Padang.

Rebel leaders in Bukittinggi made plans to "take to the hills" and continue their revolution with guerrilla warfare if necessary.

Rebel Interior Minister Dahlan Djambek said the government troops had overrun the key town of Lubuk Djambi, about 80 miles southeast of Bukittinggi, and were within 25 miles of the vital gasoline supply road from neutral South Sumatra.

He said another arm of the central government force had broken through rebel defenses at Bankinang and were engaged with a battalion of rebel troops about 80 miles northeast of Bukittinggi.

There was no report on the success or failure of a rebel counter attack at Siantar, about 50 miles south of the North Sumatran capital of Medan. This was designed as a diversion to take the pressure off Bukittinggi and the rebel port of Padang.

(Western newsmen who arrived in Singapore from Sumatra said the central government forces were well organized and the rebels appeared doomed.

(In Jakarta, an Indonesian army spokesman charged that the retreating rebels were looting banks, homes and stores, burning homes and leaving IOUs for food they took.

Sees Chance Of Overriding Ike's Veto

WASHINGTON, April 5—UP — Sen. Allen J. Ellender today fired a double - barreled blast at the administration and food industry "middlemen" for cooperating to "beat the farmer down, down, down."

The chairman of the Senate Agriculture committee also predicted there is a "good possibility" that enough votes can be mustered in the senate to override President Eisenhower's farm freeze veto.

The Louisiana Democrat told a reporter he is "confident" that after recessing lawmakers will hear enough from the folks back home to convince them that "now is the time to depress farm prices further."

Lowering Farm Income

In a radio report, (WWL-New Orleans) Ellender said "with a depression stalking our country," a further lowering of farm income will ultimately lead to concentration of farm output in a "very few lands."

That, he said, will mean a "monopoly in agriculture with the accompanying evils of price gouging and possible future shortages."

Ellender said it is "inconceivable" that Eisenhower should have cited last month's four per cent rise in monthly farm prices in his veto message as an encouraging sign.

He said 47 per cent of the entire rise came from only three commodities - strawberries, potatoes and eggs-which account for only 10 per cent of total farm income.

Food Costs Increase

Arguing against the administration's contention that lower farm prices will mean lower retail food prices for consumers, Ellender said the retail price of the family food basket has jumper from $920 to $1,042 since 1950.

He said the farmer's share of the total has dropped by $12 while the middleman's portion has gone up by $134.

Elaborating to a reporter, Ellender charged that middlemen have "cooperated" with the administration's efforts to "prove" that low farm prices mean low retail food prices.

Christians Today Celebrate Easter

right within their own beloved but enshackled countries. . . ."

'He Is Risen'

In his radioed message, Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. and president of the National Council of Churches of Christ, said:

" 'He is risen' is the message of Easter. It is a simple message. It carries with iit a tremendous implication for life under all circumstances. Christ the Lord is alive! He is alive today and is doing mighty things. In Him there is life and hope, for from Him flows love and power and mercy greater than man in his feeble way can imagine."

In Jerusalem, the city where Christ died, about 10,000 pilgrims and tourists from a dozen nations were present for the celebration of the resurrection. The number was the largest of recent years.

United Nations forces guarding the Gaza Strip between Israel and the Arab World expected a quiet weekend. About 100 soldiers from the Canadian, Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, Colombian and Brazilian contingents among the U. N. forces visited Jerusalem.

The Easter observance in Jerusalem came on one of the rare occasions when it coincides with important religious celebrations of the Moslems and Jews.

Thousands of pilgrims and Italians gathered in Rome for services in nearly 500 churches, and received a personal blessing from Pope Pius XII. The 82-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church was to give his annual message by radio and television Sunday.

Mild weather favored many celebrants. However, the British Isles was hit by snowstorms, and high seas battered the coastlines.

In New York City, scene of the renowned Easter parade along Fifth Ave., the forecast was for clouds and possibly rain. About 7,000 persons were expected for early morning services at famed Radio City Music Hall in Rockefeller Center. The Protestant Council of New York was the sponsor.

An unusual feature of the week-end rites was revived in Mexico City after being banned last year: "The Burning of Judas."

Large effigies of Judas, the betrayer of Christ, are filled with explosives and hung over streets. On the day before Easter the explosives are touched off.

The practice was banned because of numerous deaths blamed on the fireworks, but this year the government ruled it could be resumed under proper supervision. Church leaders objected that it was not fitting for a solemn day of faith and religion.

Right To Work Chances Look Good In State

not in the form of the usual type of poll, but individual reactions from the Legislators are being pooled and tabulated just the same.

Niklaus also confirmed that he plans to release a statement next week concerning the organization's membership drive—which is aimed at making the association "one of the most influential organizations of its kind in the state."

Farm Bureau To Aid

It was also learned from reliable sources that the Louisiana Farm Bureau executive committee decided at a recent meeting to support a campaign to restore right to work in Louisiana this year. Most states in the South have such laws.

Further support comes from resolutions passed by the chambers of commerce of at least a dozen cities urging "passage of a right to work law, which would give all workers the right to decide whether or not they wish to join and pay dues to a union in order to secure or hold a job."

New Orleans led the pack passing a model resolution in December 1957. Since then, Chambers known to have approved a similar resolution are Shreveport, Jennings, Opelousas, DeRidder, Bossier, Kinder, Eunice, Houma, Terrebonne, Morgan City and Berwick.

Repealed In 1956

The right to work law enacted under the Kennon administration in 1954 was repealed in 1956 when Gov. Long, who has strong labor backing, came back into power.

A month ago, anti-labor forces felt it would be a bit useless to devote much time and effort during the coming session when the lawmakers who had repealed the law would be back again.

It was felt that the best way to attack the problem would be to save time and money until 1960 and make right to work an issue in the gubernatorial campaign.

"Make the candidates express themselves, so we would know where they stood," Niklaus said.

But Sen. Davis has forced the right to work group into a position of backing his play. Leaders feel now that not to show strength this year would tend to indicate in 1960 to a new crop of public officials that labor is the strong element in the state.

Might Vote Same Way

Results of the informal poll so far seem to indicate that many of the legislators who voted to repeal the law would certainly do so again—but many of these same solons would, on the other hand, approve a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people at the time.

A spokesman for the Free Enterprise Association said that the "Sen. McClellan rackets committee hearings will weigh heavily on the public's attitude toward right to work, and it will also be in the Legislature."

In campaign literature being prepared by the association, it states that a "majority of the members of both the House and Senate have assured their vote would be the "right to work" issue.

New Ideas Prompted In State

the recession will be quite mild in Louisiana.

He predicted new highs in economic activity before 1958 ends. While state spending this fiscal year is large enough to require surplus funds, he wrote, and while it is likely "the anticipated increase in revenues will fall short of budget requests" for fiscal 1959, the recession "will not be sufficiently severe in this state to be a governing consideration in planning taxes and expenditures for the years ahead."

Revenue Collector James S. Reily a few weeks ago gave the first administration guess on new revenues, estimating a $5,800,000 increase for fiscal 1959.

But Dr. McDonald, in a joint discussion with Reily at the Public Affairs Research Council session in New Orleans, was far more optimistic. He estimated a five per cent hike.

With current state revenues touching roughly 400 million dollars, Dr. McDonald's guess would mean an extra 20 million in the upcoming year.

Add together Reily's $5,800,000 estimate plus such fund tapping ideas as Fields' 14-million-dollar proposal, up to more than 40 million dollars more could be dragged into legislative view.

Gov. Long's administration has said little in recent months about surplus funds some 22 levee boards have in state control, estimated to run as high as 10 million dollars.

Several months ago, House Speaker Robert Angelle commented, "If they have such surplus money, we would probably get their opinion as to what it could be used for."

But politicians are likely to be cautious about invading the levee districts.

The scene was set in the 1957 Legislature when three lawmakers drew legislative attention to what they charged was extravagance in the Lafourche Basin Levee District. Gov. Long did some shaking up in a couple of districts after that.

In another direction, the Rockefeller Wildlife and Refuge Reserve, estimated at five million, possibly could be used in part for educational or health facilities. The fund is restricted to such purposes or preserve facilities.

The Public Welfare Department, seeking a 9½ mill on dollar general raise, will have a welfare surplus of approximately 16½ million dollars June 30, end of the present fiscal period.

The department says it needs the sum as a cushion. Budget Committee attention has turned toward that fund. There is private talk it could drop to 10 million without harm, providing a few dollars for other use.

As nearly everyone in the state knows by now, the Louisiana Teachers Assn. seeks a gas gathering tax raise, which Long said he would sign if it passed.

It would require 29 million just to keep teachers where they are now or half the raise authorized in 1956. Lt. Gov. Lether Frazar said. The budget office has made no allowance for this sum, leaving that up to the Legislature. The pay raise has been coating on surplus money.

Long's budget investigators are almost certain to slice budget requests which so far have soared nearly 18 million dollars above current spending.

In the past, initial budget requests always were high and were trimmed by the top fiscal officer, J. Harvey Rester. The Legislature would then take a final whack or push some budget back up again, depending on its mood.

With current revenues estimated at 400 million, McDonald's five per cent hike estimate would be strongly optimistic. But the average in recent years has been six per cent, as this shows:

1. In the 1953-54 fiscal year, revenues gained 3.5 per cent over the previous period despite former Gov. Robert Kennon's two cent gasoline tax cut.

2. In the following fiscal year 1954-55, revenues were 313 million, up 3.9 per cent, at the time of a previous mild slump.

3. In Fiscal 1955-56, revenues rose 10.5 per cent in the start of a Louisiana boom, totaling 346 million.

4. In fiscal 1956-57, state revenues climbed to 385 million for a 11.4 rise.

5. The current 1957-58 fiscal year moved up to around 400 million for a rough gain of four per cent.

Overall budgeted spending amounts to 608 million this year, including 136 million in federal grants and 33 million which must be turned over to parish and cities. Approximately 40 million in previous surplus was raked in to help balance the budget.

and 15 pounds of zinc and sulphur fuel were used. It was 2-inched in diameter, and the steel tubing of the rocket was 1-16 of an inch thick.

MARS members plan to have the wall of the next rocket slightly thicker, so it will withstand the force of the explosion better.

The slender missile plunged to earth 1,000 feet from the launching tower, burying itself nearly six feet deep in a pasture. Several Black Angus cows nearby were startled, but unharmed

Rested on Tower

Before luanching, the rocket rested on a tower of three steel conduit pipes, lodged in eight inches of concrete. The tower was at an 86 degree angle south, so the rocket would not come straight down on its platform after it had fired.

At the blastoff, the nozzle fell to the ground next to the tower, one of the pipes was completely broken off, and two others were bent.

The rocket zoomed upwards, reached its highest point, arched and seemingly threatened to head toward the onlookers, then soared off south toward the cow pasture.

A 12 volt battery 400 feet from the tower operated a relay which in turn, set off a six-volt battery next to the launching platform.

Two transits used in surveying helped to determine the maximum altitude which the rocket reached. Two stop watches were also used, clocking the time from the maximum height to the moment the rocket hit the ground.

The nose cone of the rocket apparently disappeared in mid-flight. The rocket buried itself almost six feet in the earth and was badly bent when it was dug out.

MARS members were assisted by Monroe City Engineer Wade Sanders, a member of the Louisiana engineering society. Sanders worked at the Army's Redstone Arsenal where missile testing is conducted, for five years.

Federal Agents Confiscate 23 Cases Of Liquor

BASTROP, La. (AP) — Federal agents confiscated 23 cases of assorted liquor here Saturday which they said was being loaded into a private plane apparently for transportation to Mississippi.

R. F. LeFors, agent for the federal alcohol tax division, said he and another agent also seized the plane and a pickup truck at municipal airport. No arrests were made.

LeFors identified the owners of the plane as John Barmer Sr., John Barmer Jr., both of Meridian, Miss., and the truck owner as Jude White of Bastrop.

The agent said the pilot of the plane was released after giving a statement. LeFors declined to identify the pilot or reveal contents of his statement.

Fitzhugh Wilson, U. S. District Attorney at Monroe, said he would have to investigate the case further before he would know of any possible charges.

Without proper equipment, a white man might die in 6 hours in the Australian deserts where the dry heat reaches 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Yet aborigine savages can travel in the same area for several days without water.

Meanwhile, another education subcommittee, headed by Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D-W Va.), will open hearings April 28 on a variety of bills providing federal aid for public school construction. Although the House defeated construction bills in the last two years, they are being revived as an anti-recession measure.

Elliott said scholarships, loans and job opportunities now available to college students are "greatly inadequate." He said the administration's four - year, one-billion-dollar science education bill, providing 10,000 scholarships annually, does not go far enough towards meeting the need.

His own bill provides 40,000 scholarships annually for six years plus an equal number of low-interest loans, repayable within 10 years after a student graduates.

Christians Today Celebrate Easter

right within their own beloved but enshackled countries. . . ."

'He Is Risen'

In his radioed message, Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. and president of the National Council of Churches of Christ, said:

" 'He is risen' is the message of Easter. It is a simple message. It carries with iit a tremendous implication for life under all circumstances. Christ the Lord is alive! He is alive today and is doing mighty things. In Him there is life and hope, for from Him flows love and power and mercy greater than man in his feeble way can imagine."

In Jerusalem, the city where Christ died, about 10,000 pilgrims and tourists from a dozen nations were present for the celebration of the resurrection. The number was the largest of recent years.

United Nations forces guarding the Gaza Strip between Israel and the Arab World expected a quiet weekend. About 100 soldiers from the Canadian, Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, Colombian and Brazilian contingents among the U. N. forces visited Jerusalem.

The Easter observance in Jerusalem came on one of the rare occasions when it coincides with important religious celebrations of the Moslems and Jews.

Thousands of pilgrims and Italians gathered in Rome for services in nearly 500 churches, and received a personal blessing from Pope Pius XII. The 82-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church was to give his annual message by radio and television Sunday.

Mild weather favored many celebrants. However, the British Isles was hit by snowstorms, and high seas battered the coastlines.

In New York City, scene of the renowned Easter parade along Fifth Ave., the forecast was for clouds and possibly rain. About 7,000 persons were expected for early morning services at famed Radio City Music Hall in Rockefeller Center. The Protestant Council of New York was the sponsor.

An unusual feature of the weekend rites was revived in Mexico City after being banned last year: "The Burning of Judas."

Large effigies of Judas, the betrayer of Christ, are filled with explosives and hung over streets. On the day before Easter the explosives are touched off.

The practice was banned because of numerous deaths blamed on the fireworks, but this year the government ruled it could be resumed under proper supervision. Church leaders objected that it was not fitting for a solemn day of faith and religion.

New Ideas Prompted In State

the recession will be quite mild in Louisiana.

He predicted new highs in economic activity before 1958 ends. While state spending this fiscal year is large enough to require surplus funds, he wrote, and while it is likely "the anticipated increase in revenues will fall short of budget requests" for fiscal 1959, the recession "will not be sufficiently severe in this state to be a governing consideration in planning taxes and expenditures for the years ahead."

Revenue Collector James S. Reily a few weeks ago gave the first administration guess on new revenues, estimating a $5,800,000 increase for fiscal 1959.

But Dr. McDonald, in a joint discussion with Reily at the Public Affairs Research Council session in New Orleans, was far more optimistic. He estimated a five per cent hike.

With current state revenues touching roughly 400 million dollars, Dr. McDonald's guess would mean an extra 20 million in the upcoming year.

Add together Reily's $5,800,000 estimate plus such fund tapping ideas as Fields' 14-million-dollar proposal, up to more than 40 million dollars more could be dragged into legislative view.

Gov. Long's administration has said little in recent months about surplus funds some 22 levee boards have in state control, estimated to run as high as 10 million dollars.

Several months ago, House Speaker Robert Angelle commented, "If they have such surplus money, we would probably get their opinion as to what it could be used for."

But politicians are likely to be cautious about invading the levee districts.

The scene was set in the 1957 Legislature when three lawmakers drew legislative attention to what they charged was extravagance in the Lafourche Basin Levee District. Gov. Long did some shaking up in a couple of districts after that.

In another direction, the Rockefeller Wildlife and Refuge Reserve, estimated at five million, possibly could be used in part for educational or health facilities. The fund is restricted to such purposes or preserve facilities.

The Public Welfare Department, seeking a 9½ mill on dollar general raise, will have a welfare surplus of approximately 16½ million dollars June 30, end of the present fiscal period.

The department says it needs the sum as a cushion. Budget Committee attention has turned toward that fund. There is private talk it could drop to 10 million without harm, providing a few dollars for other use.

As nearly everyone in the state knows by now, the Louisiana Teachers Assn. seeks a gas gathering tax raise, which Long said he would sign if it passed.

It would require 29 million just to keep teachers where they are now or half the raise authorized in 1956. Lt. Gov. Lether Frazar said. The budget office has made no allowance for this sum, leaving that up to the Legislature.

Right To Work Chances Look Good In State

not in the form of the usual type of poll, but individual reactions from the Legislators are being pooled and tabulated just the same.

Niklaus also confirmed that he plans to release a statement next week concerning the organization's membership drive—which is aimed at making the association "one of the most influential organizations of its kind in the state."

Farm Bureau To Aid

It was also learned from reliable sources that the Louisiana Farm Bureau executive committee decided at a recent meeting to support a campaign to restore right to work in Louisiana this year. Most states in the South have such laws.

Further support comes from resolutions passed by the chambers of commerce of at least a dozen cities urging "passage of a right to work law, which would give all workers the right to decide whether or not they wish to join and pay dues to a union in order to secure or hold a job."

New Orleans led the pack passing a model resolution in December 1957. Since then, Chambers known to have approved a similar resolution are Shreveport, Jennings, Opelousas, DeRidder, Bossier, Kinder, Eunice, Houma, Terrebonne, Morgan City and Berwick.

Repealed In 1956

The right to work law enacted under the Kennon administration in 1954 was repealed in 1956 when Gov. Long, who has strong labor backing, came back into power.

A month ago, anti-labor forces felt it would be a bit useless to devote much time and effort during the coming session when the lawmakers who had repealed the law would be back again.

It was felt that the best way to attack the problem would be to save time and money until 1960 and make right to work an issue in the gubernatorial campaign.

"Make the candidates express themselves, so we would know where they stood," Niklaus said.

But Sen. Davis has forced the right to work group into a position of backing his play. Leaders feel now that not to show strength this year would tend to indicate in 1960 to a new crop of public officials that labor is the strong element in the state.

Might Vote Same Way

Results of the informal poll so far seem to indicate that many of the legislators who voted to repeal the law would certainly do so again—but many of these same solons would, on the other hand, approve a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people at the [illegible]

A spokesman for the Free Enterprise Association said that the "Sen. McClellan rackets committee hearings will weigh heavily on the public's attitude toward right to work, and it will also be in the Legislature."

In campaign literature being prepared by the association, it states that a "majority of the members of both the House and Senate have assured their vote would be the "right to work" issue.

The pay raise has been coating on surplus money.

Long's budget investigators are almost certain to slice budget requests which so far have soared nearly 18 million dollars above current spending.

In the past, initial budget requests always were high and were trimmed by the top fiscal officer, J. Harvey Rester. The Legislature would then take a final whack or push some budget back up again, depending on its mood.

With current revenues estimated at 400 million, McDonald's five per cent hike estimate would be strongly optimistic. But the average in recent years has been six per cent, as this shows:

1. In the 1953-54 fiscal year, revenues gained 3.5 per cent over the previous period despite former Gov. Robert Kennon's two cent gasoline tax cut.

2. In the following fiscal year 1954-55, revenues were 313 million, up 3.9 per cent, at the time of a previous mild slump.

3. In Fiscal 1955-56, revenues rose 10.5 per cent in the start of a Louisiana boom, totaling 346 million.

4. In fiscal 1956-57, state revenues climbed to 385 million for a 11.4 rise.

5. The current 1957-58 fiscal year moved up to around 400 million for a rough gain of four per cent.

Overall budgeted spending amounts to 608 million this year, including 136 million in federal grants and 33 million which must be turned over to parish and cities. Approximately 40 million in previous surplus was raked in to help balance the budget.

and 15 pounds of zinc and sulphur fuel were used. It was 2-inched in diameter, and the steel tubing of the rocket was 1-16 of an inch thick.

MARS members plan to have the wall of the next rocket slightly thicker, so it will withstand the force of the explosion better.

The slender missile plunged to earth 1,000 feet from the launching tower, burying itself nearly six feet deep in a pasture. Several Black Angus cows nearby were startled, but unharmed.

Rested on Tower

Before luanching, the rocket rested on a tower of three steel conduit pipes, lodged in eight inches of concrete. The tower was at an 86 degree angle south, so the rocket would not come straight down on its platform after it had fired.

At the blastoff, the nozzle fell to the ground next to the tower, one of the pipes was completely broken off, and two others were bent.

The rocket zoomed upwards, reached its highest point, arched and seemingly threatened to head toward the onlookers, then soared off south toward the cow pasture.

A 12 volt battery 400 feet from the tower operated a relay which in turn, set off a six-volt battery next to the launching platform.

Two transits used in surveying helped to determine the maximum altitude which the rocket reached. Two stop watches were also used, clocking the time from the maximum height to the moment the rocket hit the ground.

The nose cone of the rocket apparently disappeared in mid-flight. The rocket buried itself almost six feet in the earth and was badly bent when it was dug out.

MARS members were assisted by Monroe City Engineer Wade Sanders, a member of the Louisiana engineering society. Sanders worked at the Army's Redstone Arsenal where missile testing is conducted, for five years.

Federal Agents Confiscate 23 Cases Of Liquor

BASTROP, La. (AP) — Federal agents confiscated 23 cases of assorted liquor here Saturday which they said was being loaded into a private plane apparently for transportation to Mississippi.

R. F. LeFors, agent for the federal alcohol tax division, said he and another agent also seized the plane and a pickup truck at municipal airport. No arrests were made.

LeFors identified the owners of the plane as John Barmer Sr., John Barmer Jr., both of Meridian, Miss., and the truck owner as Jude White of Bastrop.

The agent said the pilot of the plane was released after giving a statement. LeFors declined to identify the pilot or reveal contents of his statement.

Fitzhugh Wilson, U. S. District Attorney at Monroe, said he would have to investigate the case further before he would know of any possible charges.

Without proper equipment, a white man might die in 6 hours in the Australian deserts where the dry heat reaches 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Yet aborigine savages can travel in the same area for several days without water.

Dental Association State Meeting Near

Expanding programs of the Louisiana Dental Association, and dental health education activities in general, will be emphasized at the 78th annual meeting of the association, to be held here April 9-12 at the Hotel Frances.

Dr. Cecil P. Jarrell of Monroe is president of the group.

The first day of the meet will be given over to a golf tournament and dinner, followed by a meeting of the board of directors.

Mayor W. L. "Jack" Howard will address the group Thursday, and Dr. Victor B. Marquier, president-elect of the association, will preside at a meeting of district dental society officers.

Other talks, a cocktail party and buffet supper will round out the second day's activities.

Noon Luncheon

Friday's sessions will get underway with a past presidents' breakfast, followed by two talks and a noon luncheon of the council on dental health. Dr. James C. Brousseau of Baton Rouge, general chairman of the council, will be in charge. A meeting of the Fellows of the American College of Dentists is slated for Friday afternoon, with a dinner dance planned that night.

The last day will be filled with a number of table clinics. Local dentists participating in the clinics will be Dr. Seymour Solomon, Dr. Val Ringo and Dr. G. Marshall Mott.

Meeting in conjunction with the Louisiana Dental Association will be the Louisiana Dental Assistants Association, with headquarters at the Penn Hotel. Their program will include a number of addresses, luncheons and reports, with installation of officers set for Friday and a dance planned that night.

Also attending the sessions will be members of the women's auxiliary, and representatives of the Louisiana Dental Hygienists Association.

DR. CECIL JARRELL

A USEFUL LIBRARY

CHICAGO — (UP) — Ismar Baruch, who served the U.S. Civil Service Commission for 40 years, continued to serve his country after death by willing his library to the commission. The Public Personnel Association said that among Baruch's papers were records of federal civil service activities during his participation and original material on position classification.

Miss. Drys Prepared To Give Battle

JACKSON, Miss. (UP)—Mississippi drys are prepared to give battle, citing statistics from the record and sounding a call for grass-roots support, if legalized liquor looms as a real possibility.

Neither house has had an opportunity to act on a bill under which counties could vote themselves out from under prohibition and set up both package and liquor-by-drink outlets.

Basic to the drys' stand is a belief—despite claims that people who want liquor will find it—that prohibition actually reduces liquor consumption.

Mrs. J. A. Burt, state president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, (WCTU) cites as proof the fact liquor consumption dropped during national prohibition.

The WCTU, the Baptists and other dry groups are expected to swing into action if the Senate temperance and finance committees report favorably on the legalized liquor bills.

Dr. Chester Quarles, executive secretary treasurer of the Mississippi Baptist General Convention, says:

"The Mississippi Baptist Convention has stood historically and traditionally in favor of retaining our statewide prohibition laws and we stand ready. . . to call on every Baptist pastor in the state, if necessary, to use his influence in every way to defeat the bills."

Statistics to counter claims that legalized liquor will eliminate the bootlegger and provide better control have been assembled by the WCTU. Mrs. Burt says these official records show

After voting in legalized liquor in 1949, Kansas saw arrests for drunkenness increase by 100 per cent by 1952 and arrests for drunk driving climb by 151 per cent.

She cites those figures as evidence of "what Mississippi might expect in the way of increased crime were it to legalize liquor."

Studies in Massachusetts, Utah and California have shown that for each dollar of liquor taxes collected, "a state must pay out from $1.50 to $7.50 in direct, alcohol-caused expenses," Mrs. Burt says.

Mrs. Burt says WCTU units are prepared to bring their educational campaign to a high pitch if needed.

Her information kit also includes statistics to counter claims that legalized liquor will do away with illegal liquor traffic.

Mississippi and South Carolina, she said, have about the same area and population.

But in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1956, "wet" South Carolina seized 1,651 stills while "dry" Mississippi seized only 720

South Carolina, with legalized liquor available, had 1,013 arrests by federal alcohol tax units for illegal liquor traffic. Mississippi had only 694.

KHRUSHCHEV SAYS

No Aid Will Be Given Hungary

STALINVAROS, Hungary (UP) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday warned Hungary's Communists in this rebel stronghold during the 1956 revolution that they cannot count on Soviet military aid again in any future anti-Communist uprising.

"In that case you shall and must help yourselves," the touring Russian leader told a crowd of 15,000 Hungarians at an outdoor rally. "Therefore you must become more and more strong."

There should be no further need, he said, for the Budapest regime to "depend on the Russians coming to help them if the counter-revolutionaries should attempt to raise their heads again."

Khrushchev spoke in the Stalinvaros town square as militiamen, police and soldiers lined the scene. Security precautions were as stringent as they were during his visit to Budapest which ended Saturday morning.

Stalinvaros, formerly Dunapentele, is an industrial city on the Danube 60 miles south of Budapest. It was one of the anti-Communist rebel bastions in the October 23rd uprising in 1956.

The rebels and the Russian troops and tanks which smashed the revolt in November, 1956, staged a major battle in the streets of the city.

Referring to the Soviet counter-attack that began on the morning of November 4 in Budapest, Khrushchev said:

"The only possible thing for us to do at that time was to help our brothers.

"You will have realized now who is your true friend and will appreciate that our soldiers have shed their blood for your freedom."

Urging the Hungarian Reds to become stronger, he recalled that Bolsheviks under Lenin numbered only a few thousand early in this century.

"Now we are hundreds of millions," he said. "So why should we fear anything?"

Dr. Cecil P. Jarrell of Monroe is president of the group.

The first day of the meet will be given over to a golf tournament and dinner, followed by a meeting of the board of directors.

Mayor W. L. "Jack" Howard will address the group Thursday, and Dr. Victor B. Marquer, president-elect of the association, will preside at a meeting of district dental society officers.

Other talks, a cocktail party and buffet supper will round out the second day's activities.

Friday's sessions will get underway with a past presidents' breakfast, followed by two talks and a noon luncheon of the council on dental health. Dr. James C. Brousseau of Baton Rouge, general chairman of the council, will be in charge. A meeting of the Fellows of the American College of Dentists is slated for Friday afternoon, with a dinner dance planned that night.

The last day will be filled with a number of table clinics. Local dentists participating in the clinics will be Dr. Seymour Solomon, Dr. Val Ringo and Dr. G. Marshall Mott.

Meeting in conjunction with the Louisiana Dental Association will be the Louisiana Dental Assistants Association, with headquarters at the Penn Hotel. Their program will include a number of addresses, luncheons and reports, with installation of officers set for Friday and a dance planned that night.

Also attending the sessions will be members of the women's auxiliary, and representatives of the Louisiana Dental Hygienists Association.

A USEFUL LIBRARY

CHICAGO — (UP) — Ismar Baruch, who served the U.S. Civil Service Commission for 40 years, continued to serve his country after death by willing his library to the commission. The Public Personnel Association said that among Baruch's papers were records of federal civil service activities during his participation and original material on position classification.

Miss. Drys Prepared To Give Battle

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi drys are prepared to give battle, citing statistics from the record and sounding a call for grass-roots support, if legalized liquor looms as a real possibility.

Neither house has had an opportunity to act on a bill under which counties could vote themselves out from under prohibition and set up both package and liquor-by-drink outlets.

Basic to the drys' stand is a belief—despite claims that people who want liquor will find it—that prohibition actually reduces liquor consumption.

Mrs. J. A. Burt, state president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, (WCTU) cites as proof the fact liquor consumption dropped during national prohibition.

The WCTU, the Baptists and other dry groups are expected to swing into action if the Senate temperance and finance committees report favorably on the legalized liquor bills.

Dr. Chester Quarles, executive secretary treasurer of the Mississippi Baptist General Convention, says:

"The Mississippi Baptist Convention has stood historically and traditionally in favor of retaining our statewide prohibition laws and we stand ready. . . to call on every Baptist pastor in the state, if necessary, to use his influence in every way to defeat the bills."

Statistics to counter claims that legalized liquor will eliminate the bootlegger and provide better control have been assembled by the WCTU. Mrs. Burt says these official records show

After voting in legalized liquor in 1949, Kansas saw arrests for drunkenness increase by 100 per cent by 1952 and arrests for drunk driving climb by 151 per cent.

She cites those figures as evidence of "what Mississippi might expect in the way of increased crime were it to legalize liquor."

Studies in Massachusetts, Utah and California have shown that for each dollar of liquor taxes collected, "a state must pay out from $1.50 to $7.50 in direct, alcohol-caused expenses," Mrs. Burt says.

Mrs. Burt says WCTU units are prepared to bring their educational campaign to a high pitch if needed.

Her information kit also includes statistics to counter claims that legalized liquor will do away with illegal liquor traffic.

Mississippi and South Carolina, she said, have about the same area and population.

But in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1956, "wet" South Carolina seized 1,651 stills while "dry" Mississippi seized only 720

South Carolina, with legalized liquor available, had 1,013 arrests by federal alcohol tax units for illegal liquor traffic. Mississippi had only 694.

KHRUSHCHEV SAYS

No Aid Will Be Given Hungary

STALINVAROS, Hungary (UP) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday warned Hungary's Communists in this rebel stronghold during the 1956 revolution that they cannot count on Soviet military aid again in any future anti-Communist uprising.

"In that case you shall and must help yourselves," the touring Russian leader told a crowd of 15,000 Hungarians at an outdoor rally. "Therefore you must become more and more strong."

There should be no further need, he said, for the Budapest regime to "depend on the Russians coming to help them if the counter-revolutionaries should attempt to raise their heads again."

Khrushchev spoke in the Stalinvaros town square as militiamen, police and soldiers lined the scene. Security precautions were as stringent as they were during his visit to Budapest which ended Saturday morning.

Stalinvaros, formerly Dunapentele, is an industrial city on the Daube 60 miles south of Budapest. It was one of the anti-Communist rebel bastions in the October 23rd uprising in 1956.

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

Few men in Monroe can boast 22 years of continuous service as a player and manager in softball, and dean of the few is Ralph Marionneaux. It's only fitting that Marionneaux, once the most feared and the "most hated by the opposition" in city softball circles, should become Monroe's commissioner of softball.

The Monroe Recreation department yesterday announced Marionneaux has accepted the job—with all its attendant headaches on protests and player rows—vacated recently by the death of Dr. William L. Bendel Sr. Commissioner of softball was one of several posts held by Dr. Bendel when he died here last February 10.

RALPH MARIONNEAUX

Marionneaux, a native of Plaquemine, came to Monroe to make his home as a youth of 17 in 1926. He recalls playing in his first softball game here at the old Forsythe baseball park in 1928 with such players as Dr. Bendel, Saul Adler, Carroll Royce, Walter Veach, and others. The civic clubs were fielding teams as relaxation for businessmen those days.

When the Y's Men's Club organized the Twilight League about 1931-32, Marionneaux was one of its outstanding players. He later shifted to the City League, then operated independently of the recreation department and headed by Dr. DeWitt T. Milam, the league's first president.

The City League became the "American League" of Monroe softball, becoming stronger year after year, ultimately coming under the jurisdiction of the recreation department.

Marionneaux's first managerial job was with the old Peacock Jewelers in the City League. He was at the height of his career as manager of Spatafora's Pharmacy when that club was having those great series with Cooperative Dairies and All-State of Sears. Softball was at its best during the 1940's when Ralph was piloting the Spats. He ended his playing career in 1949 with Spatafora, and managed the next year before stepping out of softball entirely except as a fan.

Softball rose to the heights here with Marionneaux, and has never been the same since he quit playing. In the late 1940's softball games, particularly those in which his clubs were playing, attracted up to 4,000 fans to single games. They played the best, seeking to improve each year.

Marionneaux, connected with a wholesale drug firm, is a brother of "Frenchie" Marioneaux (spelled this time with one N) of Winnsboro who used to be quite a baseball figure in the old North Louisiana League. Asked why his brother spelled the family name with one "N", Ralph declares "Frenchie" always maintained the extra "N" made the name too long. "He signs all his legal papers with the single N," Ralph said.

Marionneaux recalls one of his best softball experiences as a game against the professional Jax girls in a game in which $500 was raised for the benefit of the Goodfellows Fund which is used to help Christmas needy.

Nick Bruscato, becoming anxious about son Frankie when the latter hadn't written in several days, telephoned Churchill Downs race track at Louisville, Ky., to inquire about him. Who should answer the phone but Bill Corum, famed radio sports broadcaster.

"Don't worry about Frankie," Corum advised Bruscato. "He's in good hands."

"That was certainly good news to me," said Nick. Frankie is a good boy and wants to be a jockey. He's with Tennessee Wright Stables but he has to work his way up—know all about horses—before he can ride in the races."

Frankie weighs 108 pounds and used to live near Santa Anita track in California when the Bruscato family lived there a few years before returning "home" to Monroe. Nick, who used to be a great hand in baseball, played some in the Evangeline and was looked over by the St. Louis Cardinals about 1934, had Frankie coming up as a concert pianist under one of California's best piano instructors. The boy can really do wonders with a piano now. When the family returned to Monroe, Frankie became interested in chemistry, studying for two years at Northeast State here.

But three and a half months ago Frankie got to remembering those horses at Santa Anita and decided he wanted to be a jockey. The redhead wrote Bill Keefe, sports editor of the New Orleans Times Picayune who is quite familiar with the tops in turf at the Fair Grounds. Bruscato relates how Keefe made the contact that landed Frankie the post with Tennessee Wright Stables. Frankie is working his way up . . . stable boy, pony boy, exercise boy. We're waiting, like Papa Nick, for the day he can ride his first winner.

Two Tied For Masters Lead

Palmer Sinks 25-Foot Putt To Tie Snead

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Young Arnold Palmer, playing his fourth year of professional golf, holed a tremendous 25-foot putt on the 18th green Saturday and tied old master Sam Snead for the lead after three rounds of the 22nd Masters Tournament. Each shot a four-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 211.

These two came from three strokes off the pace to overtake front-running Ken Venturi in a swift-paced third round played before a crowd that probably was the biggest in Masters history. Police estimated that 20,000 people swarmed over the mighty 6,980-yard Augusta National Course on a muggy, cloudy day.

Venturi, the leader for two days, faded just a bit on the third round—not as bad a blowup as he experienced two years ago on the final round—but that was all his challengers needed. He finished with a 74, after three-putting the last green, for a 214 total.

First Snead took the lead almost as it became evident Venturi couldn't hold it. Then Palmer tied. Then one after another, the challengers who had chances to draw even with those two tried and failed.

Art Wall Jr., after shooting three straight birdies on the back nine, missed out when he hit into a trap on the last hole. He needed a birdie three to make it a three-way deadlock.

Next it was Cary Middlecoff, a former Masters winner and two-time National Open champion, who needed a birdie on the 18th to tie. He missed his shorter putt for a birdie and had to settle for a 69 and third place at 212.

Wall wound up two strokes behind, tied at 213 with two touring pros from Odessa, Tex. — red-haired Billy Maxwell and silver-thatched Bo Wininger — and Al Mengert of Westfield, N. J., who plays circuit golf only during the winter.

At 214 were Venturi, Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., and Billy Joe Patton, the wisecracking amateur from Morganton, N. C., who has a habit of causing disturbances in the Masters.

Doug Ford, the defending champion who came from behind on the last round a year ago, still was in striking distance at 215, where he was bracketed with Canada's Stan Leonard.

It still was anybody's tournament with only 18 holes to go as the normally difficult par 36-36—72 Augusta National Course presented few problems to the top pros. There were eleven of them under par for the three rounds and every one had a chance to come out on top.

There were no fewer than a dozen sub par rounds Saturday over the big course, whose fairways and greens still were soft and slow after a spell of wet spring weather that included rain Friday and a threat of showers Saturday.

Snead, Palmer and Hawkins all had 68s; Middlecoff, Mengert and Ben Hogan 69s, and there were a flock of 71s and 72s.

Palmer, a 28-year-old golfer with the arms of a blacksmith, turned pro soon after winning the National Amateur championship in 1954. He has been on a hot streak lately, winning the St. Petersburg Open two weeks ago and losing a playoff for the Azalea Open title at Wilmington, N. C., last Monday.

GROOM FOR RACES — These stock cars were pictured this week at the Twin City Speedway, West Monroe, as they were taking trial runs and otherwise getting ready for today's races at the oval off the old Natchitoches road. No. 12 is the 7-Day Garage machine to be driven by Gary Greenway, and No. 13, immediately behind 12 is the Hurl's Garage car to be driven by Royce Whitlock. The white job in the left foreground is Curtis Newsom's machine which he will drive. Part of the grandstand is pictured in the background.

Stock Car Races Slated At Twin City Oval Today

Stock car racers of the area heed the opening call of the Twin City Speedway today for an afternoon of racing scheduled to open with heat races at 1 o'clock on the half mile oval on the old Natchitoches road, West Monroe.

The racers maintain they're not making this their official season opener, but from the number of automobiles and drivers ready there will be plenty of action as the stock car enthusiasts start in quest of the track championship won last year by "Red" Futch.

Modified cars — stock machines souped up for top speeds—are dominating the scenery with two heat races, each getting half the contending cars in 10-lap races; a consolation race, for cars that fail to place in the heat races; a trophy dash, for the four fastest cars in the time trials; and a 25-lap feature run for all modifieds still in running condition after the earlier races. A 12-lap jaloppy run for machines on which racers are not allowed to spend more than $150 to get in running order is also scheduled.

Oliver Cloyd, owner of the track on a 40-acre plot between Natchitoches road and U.S. highway 80, has made renovations since last summer when the stock cars ran every Sunday that weather permitted. Cloyd has said he will continue improvements as long as the fans continue to show their interest in the sport.

Among cars believed ready to go today are the following:

Jalopies — No. 11, '46 Ford, owned and operated by Wade Bell; No. 101, '40 Ford, Joe (The One-Man Wrecking Crew) Mallard; No. 25, '46 Ford, owner-driver Henry Williams; No. 39, '37 Ford, owned by Slim Durbin Wrecking Yard, driver H. L. Hale; No. 9, '51 Chevrolet, Anding Brothers owner, driver John Crockett; No. 18, '36 Ford, owner Anding Brothers, driver Ralph Roberson; No. 19, '36 Ford, owner Anding Brothers, driver Raymond Walters, No. 22, '49 Ford, owner Anding Brothers, driver Jay Burks; and a '36 Ford, number unrecorded, to be driven by Eddie Ray Dye.

Modifies—No. 39, Ford, owner Slim Durbin Wrecking Yard, Monroe, driver H. L. Hale; No. 8, Chrysler, owner Larry's Carburetor Shop, Monroe, driver "Sonny" Brumfield; No. 10, Ford from Shreveport, driver and owner not yet registered here; No. 16, Oldsmobile, owner Lou Craig's Auto Sales, Monroe, driver Gary Greenway; No. 17, Ford, owner Burl Anding, West Monroe, driver Billy Bayles; No. 5, Studebaker, owned and driven by Parker, Shreveport; No. 7-11, General Motors, owned by James C. Robertson Takes Cage Point Title

NEW YORK (UP)—Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati won the 1957-58 major college basketball scoring championship with the most impressive records ever compiled by a sophomore.

The 6-foot 5-inch Robertson, named the "Player of The Year" by the United Press, scored 984 points in 28 games for a game average of 35.1. Both figures were season highs and the best ever recorded by a first-year varsity player, according to the NCAA Service Bureau.

Elgin Baylor of Seattle and Wilt Chamberlain of Kansas, who finished second and third respectively behind Robertson for the scoring title, held the previous sophomore records. Baylor averaged 29.7 points a game during the 1956-57 campaign while Chamberlain scored 800 points, also during the same season.

Robertson, who is most effective on driving layups, assumed the point lead in mid-January, faced strong threats by both Baylor and Chamberlain and then nailed down the lead for good on March 1. Twice during the stretch, Baylor, who scored 50 or more points on three different occasions, took over the lead, but each time Robertson came on again.

The Cincinnati whiz scored 50 or more points four times (twice, against Seton Hall and Arkansas, he scored 56 points) to wind up with the third highest average ever and the second best point total.

Baylor finished with 943 points and a 32.5 average, while Chamberlain, who missed several games because of injury, wound up with 633 points and a 30.1 average. Baylor's two-year (soph-junior) point total of 1,686 topped the previous record of 1,509 set by Rod Hundley of West Virginia during the 1955-56 season.

All three have eligibility remaining along with the No. 4 scorer, Bailey Howell of Mississippi State, and Kelly Coleman of Kentucky Wesleyan, the highest scoring freshman of all time, who wound up sixth.

Maroons Defeat Northeast, 19-2

PONCHATOULA, La. (Special) — Mississippi State swamped Northeast State, 19-2, here yesterday for their third straight win and the unofficial championship of the Southeastern round robin baseball tournament. Southeastern whipped Southwestern of Memphis, 7-3, in the day's other game.

Mississippi State won the game in the first inning with three runs off Northeast starter Lyle Dorsey and got progressively better in the next two innings, scoring four in the second and five in the third. They tapered off to four tallies off relief pitcher Jay Gross in the fourth, one in the fifth, two in the sixth and none in the last frame of the seven-inning tilt.

Charlie Turner spearheaded the Maroon attack by driving in six runs, four of them on a third inning grand slam homer. He got three hits as did Boren and Glover. Boren and Bailey also homered for the Southeastern Conference team.

Left fielder James Mock and catcher Don Ballard led Northeast's seven-hit offense, both getting two hits in three trips. Mock scored both of the Northeast runs and Ballard drove him in for one of them.

Mock singled with one out in the second, Homer Rouse fanned, Bob Groves walked and Ballard singled Mock home. Mock led off the sixth with a double, Rouse walked and Groves grounded to short and Mock came home as State tried for a double play.

The loss was the first for George Luffey's Indians in the tourney. They tied Northern Illinois, 5-5, in the first contest and beat Southwestern of Memphis, 9-8, Friday.

Northeast will meet the LSU freshmen at Baton Rouge Wednesday and then return for a Gulf States tilt with Louisiana Tech here Friday.

Celtics Defeat Hawks, Square Playoff Series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Boston Celtics, crippled by the loss of big Bill Russell, choked off the St. Louis Hawks Saturday night with clever slow-down tactics and great defensive play for a 109-98 victory which evened the world series of pro basketball at two games each.

Dazzling Bob Cousy led the defending National Basketball Assn. Champions with 24 points, 16 of them in the second quarter when he played most of the time in the pivot.

Cliff Hagan pumped in 27 points to lead both clubs in scoring. Bill Sharman hit 21 for Boston. All but two of them were in the second half.

Mrs. Rice Has Winners In 2 Miami Races

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mrs. Ada Rice's Air Pilot and Talent Show Saturday swept Gulfstream Park feature races, the $15,000 Fort Lauderdale Handicap and the $10,000 Aftermath Purse.

Both winners are offspring of Olympia, the noted sire owned by Fred Hooper of Coral Gables, and both are trained by Jimmy Conway.

Air Pilot came within three fifths of a second of the track record for a mile and a sixteenth established two weeks ago by Round Table. Frank Smith guided Air Pilot to a 1:42 1-5 effort while winning by five lengths.

W. S. Miller's Better Bee, the 4 to 5 favorite, took the place by 3½ lengths over J. C. Dobkin's Point of Order.

Talent Show earned a ticket to Churchill Downs and a probable starting berth in the Kentucky Derby by his impressive victory in the Aftermath Purse.

The son of Olympia and Royal Lily scored in handy fashion as he outran Elmendorf's Day Court by one length under the guidance of Willie Shoemaker. Orbit's Image, owned by W. M. Peavy, was a half length behind Day Court.

Talent Show, the $3.20 favorite, was timed in 1:43 2-5 for a mile and a 16th.

West Monroe pushed across three runs each in the third and fourth innings and added another in the sixth and one more in the fifth. The losers tallied once in the fifth and got two in the seventh.

Aubrey Patton started for West Monroe and gave way to Garland Webb in the last of the seventh. Bacon and Gates did the catching. Colvin started for Dubach, and Bridges came in the fifth while Watts did the catching.

The Rebs backed up their pitchers with two double plays, both going from shortstop Shelby Aulds to second baseman Jerry Stovall to Grubbs at first.

West Monroe meets Ouachita at home Tuesday afternoon.

COMPLETE SURPRISE

St. Louis' Hickey Named New Marquette Cage Coach

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Ed Hickey of St. Louis University, one of the nation's top college basketball coaches, Saturday became Marquette University's new basketball coach. The selection of Hickey, who, also was athletic director at St. Louis, came as a complete surprise.

Hickey guided the Billikens to a 24-3 record and the National Invitation Tournament championship in his first season at St. Louis, 1947-48, and then followed up with six more NIT bids. He succeeds Jack Nagle. Nagle resigned Feb. 8, effective June 30.

Larry "Moon" Mullins, Marquette athletic director, declined to disclose the terms of length of Hickey's contract. It is believed that Hickey's salary will come to about $10,000. He will assume his new duties as soon as he clears up his administrative work at St. Louis.

The names of at least half a dozen coaches have been mentioned in connection with the Marquette job during the school's eight-week search for the new coach, but Hickey's was not among them.

Earlier in the day John Benington of Drake withdrew his name from consideration for the post. He had been considered the likely choice.

Mullins termed the 55-year-old Hickey, the unanimous choice of Marquette's athletic board, "One of the nation's great coaches."

"I can't help but feel that, given ample time, he will guide Marquette basketball to an enviable position in the world of intercollegiate athletic competition," he added.

Hickey's over-all record is 344—161, including 212—89 at St. Louis.

Asked when Hickey was first approached about the job, Mullins replied:

"Not very long ago. Only a few days."

In St. Louis, Hickey told newsmen the Marquette offer "came to me through proper administrative channels at both universities."

He said the decision to leave St. Louis "has been an extremely difficult one to make" because he had received "nothing but the most complete and understanding cooperation from the university, its alumni and friends and the city."

Reports circulated here that among those in line for Hickey's job are assistant coach Fred Kovar; Joseph "Buddy" Brehmer, Rockhurst College coach at Kansas City; Hank Raymonds, coach at Christian Brothers College in Memphis, and Johnny Dee, coach of the Denver Truckers of the National Industrial Basketball League.

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

Few men in Monroe can boast 22 years of continuous service as a player and manager in softball, and dean of the few is Ralph Marionneaux. It's only fitting that Marionneaux, once the most feared and the "most hated by the opposition" in city softball circles, should become Monroe's commissioner of solftball.

The Monroe Recreation department yesterday announced Marionneaux has accepted the job—with all its attendant headaches on protests and player rows—vacated recently by the death of Dr. William L. Bendel Sr. Commissioner of softball was one of several posts held by Dr. Bendel when he died here last February 10.

RALPH MARIONNEAUX

Marionneaux, a native of Plaquemine, came to Monroe to make his home as a youth of 17 in 1926. He recalls playing in his first softball game here at the old Forsythe baseball park in 1928 with such players as Dr. Bendel, Saul Adler, Carroll Royce, Walter Veach, and others. The civic clubs were fielding teams as relaxation for businessmen those days.

When the Y's Men's Club organized the Twilight League about 1931-32, Marionneaux was one of its outstanding players. He later shifted to the City League, then operated independently of the recreation department and headed by Dr. DeWitt T. Milam, the league's first president.

The City League became the "American League" of Monroe softball, becoming stronger year after year, ultimately coming under the jurisdiction of the recreation department.

Marionneaux's first managerial job was with the old Peacock Jewelers in the City League. He was at the height of his career as manager of Spatafora's Pharmacy when that club was having those great series with Cooperative Dairies and All-State of Sears. Softball was at its best during the 1940's when Ralph was piloting the Spats. He ended his playing career in 1949 with Spatafora, and managed the next year before stepping out of softball entirely except as a fan.

Softball rose to the heights here with Marionneaux, and has never been the same since he quit playing. In the late 1940's softball games, particularly those in which his clubs were playing, attracted up to 4,000 fans to single games. They played the best, seeking to improve each year.

Marionneaux, connected with a wholesale drug firm, is a brother of "Frenchie" Marioneaux (spelled this time with one N) of Winnsboro who used to be quite a baseball figure in the old North Louisiana League. Asked why his brother spelled the family name with one "N", Ralph declares "Frenchie" always maintained the extra "N" made the name too long. "He signs all his legal papers with the single N," Ralph said.

Marionneaux recalls one of his best softball experiences as a game against the professional Jax girls in a game in which $500 was raised for the benefit of the Goodfellows Fund which is used to help Christmas needy.

Nick Bruscato, becoming anxious about son Frankie when the latter hadn't written in several days, telephoned Churchill Downs race track at Louisville, Ky., to inquire about him. Who should answer the phone but Bill Corum, famed radio sports broadcaster.

"Don't worry about Frankie," Corum advised Bruscato. "He's in good hands."

"That was certainly good news to me," said Nick. Frankie is a good boy and wants to be a jockey. He's with Tennessee Wright Stables but he has to work his way up—know all about horses—before he can ride in the races."

Frankie weighs 108 pounds and used to live near Santa Anita track in California when the Bruscato family lived there a few years before returning "home" to Monroe. Nick, who used to be a great hand in baseball, played some in the Evangeline and was looked over by the St. Louis Cardinals about 1934, had Frankie coming up as a concert pianist under one of California's best piano instructors. The boy can really do wonders with a piano now. When the family returned to Monroe, Frankie became interested in chemistry, studying for two years at Northeast State here.

But three and a half months ago Frankie got to remembering those horses at Santa Anita and decided he wanted to be a jockey. The redhead wrote Bill Keefe, sports editor of the New Orleans Times Picayune who is quite familiar with the tops in turf at the Fair Grounds. Bruscato relates how Keefe made the contact that landed Frankie the post with Tennessee Wright Stables. Frankie is working his way up . . . stable boy, pony boy, exercise boy. We're waiting, like Papa Nick, for the day he can ride his first winner.

Two Tied For Masters Lead

Palmer Sinks 25-Foot Putt To Tie Snead

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Young Arnold Palmer, playing his fourth year of professional golf, holed a tremendous 25-foot putt on the 18th green Saturday and tied old master Sam Snead for the lead after three rounds of the 22nd Masters Tournament. Each shot a four-under-par 68 for a 54-hole total of 211.

These two came from three strokes off the pace to overtake front-running Ken Venturi in a swift-paced third round played before a crowd that probably was the biggest in Masters history. Police estimated that 20,000 people swarmed over the mighty 6,980-yard Augusta National Course on a muggy, cloudy day.

Venturi, the leader for two days, faded just a bit on the third round—not as bad a blowup as he experienced two years ago on the final round—but that was all his challengers needed. He finished with a 74, after three-putting the last green, for a 214 total.

First Snead took the lead almost as it became evident Venturi couldn't hold it. Then Palmer tied. Then one after another, the challengers who had chances to draw even with those two tried and failed.

Art Wall Jr., after shooting three straight birdies on the back nine, missed out when he hit into a trap on the last hole. He needed a birdie three to make it a three-way deadlock.

Next it was Cary Middlecoff, a former Masters winner and two-time National Open champion, who needed a birdie on the 18th to tie. He missed his shorter putt for a birdie and had to settle for a 69 and third place at 212.

Wall wound up two strokes behind, tied at 213 with two touring pros from Odessa, Tex. — red-haired Billy Maxwell and silver-thatched Bo Wininger — and Al Mengert of Westfield, N. J., who plays circuit golf only during the winter.

At 214 were Venturi, Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., and Billy Joe Patton, the wisecracking amateur from Morganton, N. C., who has a habit of causing disturbances in the Masters.

Doug Ford, the defending champion who came from behind on the last round a year ago, still was in striking distance at 215, where he was bracketed with Canada's Stan Leonard.

It still was anybody's tournament with only 18 holes to go as the normally difficult par 36-36—72 Augusta National Course presented few problems to the top pros. There were eleven of them under par for the three rounds and every one had a chance to come out on top.

There were no fewer than a dozen sub par rounds Saturday over the big course, whose fairways and greens still were soft and slow after a spell of wet spring weather that included rain Friday and a threat of showers Saturday.

Snead, Palmer and Hawkins all had 68s; Middlecoff, Mengert and Ben Hogan 69s, and there were a flock of 71s and 72s.

Palmer, a 28-year-old golfer with the arms of a blacksmith, turned pro soon after winning the National Amateur championship in 1954. He has been on a hot streak lately, winning the St. Petersburg Open two weeks ago and losing a playoff for the Azalea Open title at Wilmington, N. C., last Monday.

Stock Car Races Slated At Twin City Oval Today

Stock car racers of the area heed the opening call of the Twin City Speedway today for an afternoon of racing scheduled to open with heat races at 1 o'clock on the half mile oval on the old Natchitoches road, West Monroe.

The racers maintain they're not making this their official season opener, but from the number of automobiles and drivers ready there will be plenty of action as the stock car enthusiasts start in quest of the track championship won last year by "Red" Futch.

Modified cars — stock machines souped up for top speeds—are dominating the scenery with two heat races, each getting half the contending cars in 10-lap races; a consolation race, for cars that fail to place in the heat races; a trophy dash, for the four fastest cars in the time trials; and a 25 - lap feature run for all modifieds still in running condition after the earlier races. A 12-lap jaloppy run for machines on which racers are not allowed to spend more than $150 to get in running order is also scheduled.

Oliver Cloyd, owner of the track on a 40-acre plot between Natchitoches road and U.S. highway 80, has made renovations since last summer when the stock cars ran every Sunday that weather permitted. Cloyd has said he will continue improvements as long as the fans continue to show their interest in the sport.

Among cars believed ready to go today are the following:

Jalopies — No. 11, '46 Ford, owned and operated by Wade Bell; No. 101, '40 Ford, Joe (The One-Man Wrecking Crew) Mallard; No. 25, '46 Ford, owner - driver Henry Williams; No. 39, '37 Ford, owned by Slim Durbin Wrecking Yard, driver H. Robertson Takes Cage Point Title

NEW YORK (UP)—Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati won the 1957-58 major college basketball scoring championship with the most impressive records ever compiled by a sophomore.

The 6-foot 5-inch Robertson, named the "Player of The Year" by the United Press, scored 984 points in 28 games for a game average of 35.1. Both figures were season highs and the best ever recorded by a first-year varsity player, according to the NCAA Service Bureau.

Elgin Baylor of Seattle and Wilt Chamberlain of Kansas, who finished second and third respectively behind Robertson for the scoring title, held the previous sophomore records. Baylor averaged 29.7 points a game during the 1956-57 campaign while Chamberlain scored 800 points, also during the same season.

Robertson, who is most effective on driving layups, assumed the point lead in mid-January, faced strong threats by both Baylor and Chamberlain and then nailed down the lead for good on March 1. Twice during the stretch, Baylor, who scored 50 or more points on three different occasions, took over the lead, but each time Robertson came on again.

The Cincinnati whiz scored 50 or more points four times (twice, against Seton Hall and Arkansas, he scored 56 points) to wind up with the third highest average ever and the second best point total.

Baylor finished with 943 points and a 32.5 average, while Chamberlain, who missed several games because of injury, wound up with 633 points and a 30.1 average. Baylor's two-year (soph-junior) point total of 1,686 topped the previous record of 1,509 set by Rod Hundley of West Virginia during the 1955-56 season.

All three have eligibility remaining along with the No. 4 scorer, Bailey Howell of Mississippi State, and Kelly Coleman of Kentucky Wesleyan, the highest scoring freshman of all time, who wound up sixth.

Maroons Defeat Northeast, 19-2

PONCHATOULA, La. (Special) — Mississippi State swamped Northeast State, 19-2, here yesterday for their third straight win and the unofficial championship of the Southeastern round robin baseball tournament. Southeastern whipped Southwestern of Memphis, 7-3, in the day's other game.

Mississippi State won the game in the first inning with three runs off Northeast starter Lyle Dorsey and got progressively better in the next two innings, scoring four in the second and five in the third. They tapered off to four tallies off relief pitcher Jay Gross in the fourth, one in the fifth, two in the sixth and none in the last frame of the seven-inning tilt.

Charlie Turner spearheaded the Maroon attack by driving in six runs, four of them on a third inning grand slam homer. He got three hits as did Boren and Glover. Boren and Bailey also homered for the Southeastern Conference team.

Left fielder James Mock and catcher Don Ballard led Northeast's seven-hit offense, both getting two hits in three trips. Mock scored both of the Northeast runs and Ballard drove him in for one of them.

Mock singled with one out in the second, Homer Rouse fanned, Bob Groves walked and Ballard singled Mock home. Mock led off the sixth with a double, Rouse walked and Groves grounded to short and Mock came home as State tried for a double play.

The loss was the first for George Luffey's Indians in the tourney. They tied Northern Illinois, 5-5, in the first contest and beat Southwestern of Memphis, 9-8, Friday.

Northeast will meet the LSU freshmen at Baton Rouge Wednesday and then return for a Gulf States tilt with Louisiana Tech here Friday.

Celtics Defeat Hawks, Square Playoff Series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Boston Celtics, crippled by the loss of big Bill Russell, choked off the St. Louis Hawks Saturday night with clever slow-down tactics and great defensive play for a 109-98 victory which evened the world series of pro basketball at two games each.

Dazzling Bob Cousy led the defending National Basketball Assn. Champions with 24 points, 16 of them in the second quarter when he played most of the time in the pivot.

Cliff Hagan pumped in 27 points to lead both clubs in scoring. Bill Sharman hit 21 for Boston. All but two of them were in the second half.

Mrs. Rice Has Winners In 2 Miami Races

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mrs. Ada Rice's Air Pilot and Talent Show Saturday swept Gulfstream Park feature races, the $15,000 Fort Lauderdale Handicap and the $10,000 Aftermath Purse.

Both winners are offspring of Olympia, the noted sire owned by Fred Hooper of Coral Gables, and both are trained by Jimmy Conway.

Air Pilot came within three fifths of a second of the track record for a mile and a sixteenth established two weeks ago by Round Table. Frank Smith guided Air Pilot to a 1:42 1-5 effort while winning by five lengths.

W. S. Miller's Better Bee, the 4 to 5 favorite, took the place by 3½ lengths over J. C. Dobkin's Point of Order.

Talent Show earned a ticket to Churchill Downs and a probable starting berth in the Kentucky Derby by his impressive victory in the Aftermath Purse.

The son of Olympia and Royal Lily scored in handy fashion as he outran Elmendorf's Day Court by one length under the guidance of Willie Shoemaker. Orbit's Image, owned by W. M. Peavy, was a half length behind Day Court.

Talent Show, the $3.20 favorite, was timed in 1:43 2-5 for a mile and a 16th.

West Monroe pushed across three runs each in the third and fourth innings and added another in the sixth and one more in the fifth. The losers tallied once in the fifth and got two in the seventh.

Aubrey Patton started for West Monroe and gave way to Garland Webb in the last of the seventh. Bacon and Gates did the catching. Colvin started for Dubach, and Bridges came in the fifth while Watts did the catching.

The Rebs backed up their pitchers with two double plays, both going from shortstop Shelby Aulds to second baseman Jerry Stovall to Grubbs at first.

West Monroe meets Ouachita at home Tuesday afternoon.

COMPLETE SURPRISE

St. Louis' Hickey Named New Marquette Cage Coach

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Ed Hickey of St. Louis University, one of the nation's top college basketball coaches, Saturday became Marquette University's new basketball coach. The selection of Hickey, who, also was athletic director at St. Louis, came as a complete surprise.

Hickey guided the Billikens to a 24-3 record and the National Invitation Tournament championship in his first season at St. Louis, 1947-48, and then followed up with six more NIT bids. He succeeds Jack Nagle. Nagle resigned Feb. 8, effective June 30.

Larry "Moon" Mullins, Marquette athletic director, declined to disclose the terms of length of Hickey's contract. It is believed that Hickey's salary will come to about $10,000. He will assume his new duties as soon as he clears up his administrative work at St. Louis.

The names of at least half a dozen coaches have been mentioned in connection with the Marquette job during the school's eight-week search for the new coach, but Hickey's was not among them.

Earlier in the day John Benington of Drake withdrew his name from consideration for the post. He had been considered the likely choice.

Mullins termed the 55-year-old Hickey, the unanimous choice of Marquette's athletic board, "One of the nation's great coaches."

"I can't help but feel that, given ample time, he will guide Marquette basketball to an enviable position in the world of intercollegiate athletic competition," he added.

Hickey's over-all record is 344—161, including 212—89 at St. Louis.

Asked when Hickey was first approached about the job, Mullins replied:

"Not very long ago. Only a few days."

In St. Louis, Hickey told newsmen the Marquette offer "came to me through proper administrative channels at both universities."

He said the decision to leave St. Louis "has been an extremely difficult one to make" because he had received "nothing but the most complete and understanding cooperation from the university, its alumni and friends and the city."

Reports circulated here that among those in line for Hickey's job are assistant coach Fred Kovar; Joseph "Buddy" Brehmer, Rockhurst College coach at Kansas City; Hank Raymonds, coach at Christian Brothers College in Memphis, and Johnny Dee, coach of the Denver Truckers of the National Industrial Basketball League.

APRIL 24-27

Monroe Will Host State Amateur Golf Tournament

The Louisiana State Golf Association's 1958 state amateur tournament will be held here this spring, and Bayou DeSiard Country Club is preparing to host the state's big show from Thursday, April 24, through Sunday April 27.

The state amateur never before has been played on a northeast Louisiana course, and Bayou DeSiard welcomes the chance to entertain the cream of Louisiana's amateur linksmen.

Qualifying will be conducted over the 18-hole layout on Thursday, April 24, and the low 32 qualifiers will appear in the first round of the championship scramble. All other flights will consist of 16 players, with first round losers in the championship flight making up the first flight.

All matches will be 18-hole events with the exception of the championship finals which will be over a 36-hole route.

Entrants are restricted to members of clubs holding membership in the Louisiana State Gulf Association, and they must have been residents of Louisiana for at least one year prior to the qualifying date, it was announced by McVea Oliver, Monroe state association president.

A new champion is assured for this year since Jimmy McGonagill, for many years a consistent tournament winner, is no longer a Louisiana resident and is thus ineligible to defend his crown. McGonagill is now making his home in California.

There is an entrance fee of $12.50 for each tourney contender.

RAPS KALINE, SHAW

Tighe Says He'll Fine Lazy Tigers

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Manager Jack Tighe, angered by the Detroit Tigers' poor showing in spring exhibition games, Saturday threatened to fine players who are guilty of laziness or mental lapses during the regular season.

After reprimanding Al Kaline, all-star rightfielder, and rookie pitcher Bob Shaw Friday for minor lapses, Tighe declared:

"I'm tired of being a nice guy. The time has come to let everybody know this is a serious business. . . . Anybody dogging it will hear from me. I don't like to fine any player, but I will if that's what it takes to get results."

Tighe was unhappy over his charges' showing Friday. The regulars played two Detroit farm teams, defeating Augusta 4-2 but losing 7-4 to Charleston.

Tighe reprimanded Kaline for failing to run out a fly ball during the Charleston game. The Tigers had two men on base at the time.

The manager blamed Kaline's failure to run hard on the young slugger's recent troubles at the plate. "It's not that Al is loafing," Tighe said, "but he gets so mad at himself when he isn't hitting that he does things like that."

Tighe said Shaw hasn't been doing enough road work and isn't pitching as well now as he was when spring training opened.

"If he has the good fast ball we need from him he certainly isn't showing it now," Tighe said.

Laurel Race Is Captured By Venomous

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Venomous, whose poison is in her sharp legs, stung six rivals in the $11,040 Cherry Blossom Stakes Saturday by zipping the three-quarters of a mile in a fast one minute and 11 seconds.

The 5-year-old mare, owned by B. A. Dario, president of Lincoln Downs, disdained the 124 pounds loaded on her to beat Linda's Dream, owned by Harold H. Polk, was weighed with only 109 pounds.

Pentagon Stable's Salix, carrying 12 pounds less than Venomous came in third.

The crowd of 21,117 proved good handicappers as the odds on all first three were low.

Venomous paid $3.80, $2.60 and $2.40, Linda's Dream $3 and $2.60 and Salix $3.60.

The Southside League trials will begin at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Bernstein.

Prospective Dixie Leaguers will have their tryouts at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the American Legion Stadium.

El Dorado Gets Place With Big Eight Baseball

RUSTON, La. (Special) — Managers of the Big Eight Baseball League have unanimously voted in favor of El Dorado, Ark., taking over the Springhill franchise in the league. Monroe and Bossier City also have applications for membership before the league, but the managers postponed action on these two possible members until their April 14 meeting.

Larry Fox, league president, also presented the National Collegiate Athletic Association requirements for college athletes playing summer ball. The Big Eight has "always leaned backwards" in protecting the eligibility of their high school and college players, it was pointed out. A college player must hold a job, working 32 hours a week, in order to maintain his eligibility in NCAA schools if he is away from home and playing summer ball.

The Big Eight season will open May 31 playing three night games a week—Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Minden has been granted permission to play seven - inning games at home. League members at the present are Bastrop, Bernice, Homer, Minden, Ruston, and El Dorado.

TEENER REGISTRATION CONTINUES

Little, Dixie Have Tryouts Saturday

Registration deadline for the Little and Dixie Leagues has been set for Wednesday night and tryouts begin Saturday while registration is also still in process for the new V.F.W. Teener League, the Monroe Recreation Department announced yesterday.

Players can register for any of the three leagues at the Community Center, 113½ Catalpa Street.

All boys age 13 through 15 who wish to play in the Teener League are urged to sign up as soon as possible. The Babe Ruth League will not operate this season so all eligible boys who played in that loop last season should sign up for the Teener League.

The Northside Little League will hold their tryouts at 9:30 Saturday morning at Bernstein Park.

Fuentes Promising More Trouble For Ralph Dupas

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If lightweight contender Ralph Dupas thinks he's got troubles now, rugged welterweight Ramon Fuentes of Los Angeles promises to complicate things even more in their 10-rounder Monday night.

The 22-year-old Dupas, ranked second in the lightweight division by the National Boxing Assn. and fourth by Ring Magazine, is involved in a legal battle over his racial status.

The city of New Orleans contends Dupas is a Negro and refuses to give him a birth certificate showing him to be white. Without such a document, Dupas cannot meet white fighters in Louisiana because state segregation laws prohibit r a c i a l l y-mixed matches.

A civil district court last October ordered the city to issue Dupas the certificate he seeks, but an appeals court earlier this week reversed the decision and said the lower court lacked such jurisdiction.

The State Athletic Commission came to the rescue of the New Orleans boxer Tuesday night and upheld its prior sanction of the bout with Fuentes. The commission also decided that Dupas' racial status should remain "status quo until finally decided by the judiciary."

The bout was to have been held March 17, but Dupas contracted flu and forced a postponement. All of which is fine, says Fuentes, a 33-year-old unranked puncher who has met some of the best welterweights and middleweights in the business.

Fuentes says he has trained down to a fine line and contends "a lot of people are in for a surprise."

But Dupas, scheduled to meet champion Joe Brown for the lightweight title in Houston, Tex., next month, has defeated two of the welterweight division's best within the last year. He whipped second-ranked Vince Martinez here last April and beat fourth-ranked Gasnar Ortega at Norfolk, Va., in February.

Dupas, who has won 69 fights, lost only eight and had eight draws, promises to whip Fuentes and then beat Brown for the title. A tall order, but Dupas thinks he can handle it.

Promoter Bonny Geigerman expects a crowd of about 5,000 and the gate to top $10,000 for the bout which will neither be broadcast nor televised.

Sime Takes 100 With Morrow 3rd

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

BIG SPRING, Tex. (AP) — Big Dave Sime of Duke led all the way today in beating Bobby Morrow, Abilene Christian College's Olympic sprint champion, by a foot and a half in a wind-blown 9.6 hundred yard dash, the third chapter in their 3-year feud.

Morrow didn't even finish second. The lanky Texan wound up third to his teammate Bill Woodhouse. A crowd of 6,500 watched the fuel for the two mighty sprinters as Sime registered his second victory over the sprint king of the Olympic Games.

Sime beat Morrow in 9.4 in the Drake Relays of 1956 but later Morrow downed Sime in the 100-meters of the NCAA at 10.4. They hadn't met again until Saturday.

Sime, the big redhead who holds or shares all the sprint records, and the other runners battled a 20-mile per hour crosswind.

The 100-yard dash was the feature of the American Business Club Relays and drew its best crowd despite a dust storm and winds as high as 30 miles per hour.

It was the first time Morrow lost a race in Texas since 1953 and the second time he had lost in two years.

Willie White of Compton, Calif. Junior College beat him last year.

Sime got the start and led Morrow and Woodhouse in that order by about 6 inches for 40 yards. At 80 yards, Sime increased his lead to a foot and at the finish was a foot and a half ahead.

The Sime - Morow duel overshadowed a great high jump by Bertil Holmgren of Southern Methodist, who leaped 6 feet 9⅝ inches in setting a relays record and at the same time beating Dub Thornton of Texas Tech, center of a rhubarb.

Thornton beat Holmgren and his teammate, Don Stewart, in the Texas Relays and Coach McAdoo Keanton of SMU protested the use by the Texas Tech jumper of a built-up shoe. The ABC Relays Rules Committee, however, voted to allow Thornton to jump here using the shoe.

Thornton got only 6 feet 6½ inches, tying Stewart for second place. Holmgren, the Swedish athlete who came to SMU only this year, was leaping the highest of his career.

Texas won the university class championship with a whooping 72½ points. Abilene Christian was second with 38, Southern Methodist third with 29½, and Houston fourth with 28.

Two records were set and one tied. Holmgren set one and Bobby Weise of Houston set the other when he hurled the discus 159 feet 2½ inches. Texas, with its great quarter-miler, Eddie Southern, doing a 47 flat in the teeth of a 25 m.p.h. wind in a dust storm, tied the mile relay record at 3:18.5.

Sime was the overwhelming choice of the sports writers as outstanding man of the meet.

Oerter Beats Discus Mark In Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Big Al Oerter, the Olympic champion from New Hyde Park, N. Y., bettered the existing world record for the discus throw three times in the University of Arkansas Relays Saturday.

The Kansas University giant's best heave was 202 feet, 6 inches—an even eight feet farther than Fortune Gordien spun the platter Aug. 22, 1953 at Pasadena, Calif., for the existing record of 194-6.

The best throw was sandwiched between efforts of 195-4 and 198-6 in the preliminaries Oerter's subsequent performance in the finals was comparatively inauspicious.

The longest throw was first measured at 202-6½ but one-half inch was lopped off in remeasurement. Arkansas track officials said they were sure the field would meet record specifications and they will seek to have the mark entered in the official books.

The discus used was weighed on post office scales and found to exceed the allowable minimum by one ounce.

Oerter, who won the discus event in the 1956 Olympic Games with a throw of 184-10½, also won the shot put Saturday.

He lobbed the 16-pound ball 54 feet, 9 inches to score the only individual double of the day.

Orlando Hazley of Oklahoma State University ran the 100-yard dash in 9.3, tying the existing world mark, but he was aided by a stiff 10-mile wind and the record is not eligible for certification.

No team scores were kept, but the Kansas squad won nine of 16 events.

Track & field, West Region, Fresno State College, Fresno, Calif., May 24.

Eight teams will be selected from the New England and Middle Atlantic districts for the baseball tournaments at Springfield, Mass. The other regional tournaments will draw their contestants from NCAA geographical district in which the host institution is located and from institutions in adjoining districts.

Byers said the NCAA College Committee will use the results of the pilot regional tournaments to determine whether additional national or regional competition should be established for the 300 college division members.

Must Be 50-50 Split For 3rd Bout–Basilio

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Carmen Basilio said Saturday he was "carefully deliberating" on a third bout with Sugar Ray Robinson but said there would have to be a 50-50 split of all receipts.

Basilio was greeted by a crowd of 75 friends as he arrived by train from Chicago. He spent nine days in a hospital there while his eye healed from the March 25 beating in which Robinson took Basilio's middleweight crown.

Basilio told newsmen, "I have many things to consider in thinking about a return to the ring or retirement. Among those are my health, my family, my wife and my soul. And too, there is the financial end. If I fight it will only be with a 50-50 split of returns with Robinson."

Bulks, of Lake Charles, captured the team event with a handicap total of 3112. Watts Furniture (Bogalusa) finished second with 3041 while Lennon's Buick of Monroe took third place with 3034. Other teams from Monroe who did some fine pin toppling were Louisiana Well Co. Howard Griffin and Troy & Nichols.

TEENER REGISTRATION CONTINUES

Little, Dixie Have Tryouts Saturday

Registration deadline for the Little and Dixie Leagues has been set for Wednesday night and tryouts begin Saturday while registration is also still in process for the new V.F.W. Teener League, the Monroe Recreation Department announced yesterday.

Players can register for any of the three leagues at the Community Center, 113½ Catalpa Street.

All boys age 13 through 15 who wish to play in the Teener League are urged to sign up as soon as possible. The Babe Ruth League will not operate this season so all eligible boys who played in that loop last season should sign up for the Teener League.

The Northside Little League will hold their tryouts at 9:30 Saturday morning at Bernstein Park.

The Southside League trials will begin at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Bernstein.

Prospective Dixie Leaguers will have their tryouts at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the American Legion Stadium.

APRIL 24-27

Monroe Will Host State Amateur Golf Tournament

The Louisiana State Golf Association's 1958 state amateur tournament will be held here this spring, and Bayou DeSiard Country Club is preparing to host the state's big show from Thursday, April 24, through Sunday April 27.

The state amateur never before has been played on a northeast Louisiana course, and Bayou DeSiard welcomes the chance to entertain the cream of Louisiana's amateur linksmen.

Qualifying will be conducted over the 18-hole layout on Thursday, April 24, and the low 32 qualifiers will appear in the first round of the championship scramble. All other flights will consist of 16 players, with first round losers in the championship flight making up the first flight.

All matches will be 18-hole events with the exception of the championship finals which will be over a 36-hole route.

Entrants are restricted to members of clubs holding membership in the Louisiana State Gulf Association, and they must have been residents of Louisiana for at least one year prior to the qualifying date, it was announced by McVea Oliver, Monroe state association president.

A new champion is assured for this year since Jimmy McGonagill, for many years a consistent tournament winner, is no longer a Louisiana resident and is thus ineligible to defend his crown. McGonagill is now making his home in California.

There is an entrance fee of $12.50 for each tourney contender.

RAPS KALINE, SHAW

Tighe Says He'll Fine Lazy Tigers

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Manager Jack Tighe, angered by the Detroit Tigers' poor showing in spring exhibition games, Saturday threatened to fine players who are guilty of laziness or mental lapses during the regular season.

After reprimanding Al Kaline, all-star rightfielder, and rookie pitcher Bob Shaw Friday for minor lapses, Tighe declared:

"I'm tired of being a nice guy. The time has come to let everybody know this is a serious business. . . . Anybody dogging it will hear from me. I don't like to fine any player, but I will if that's what it takes to get results."

Tighe was unhappy over his charges' showing Friday. The regulars played two Detroit farm teams, defeating Augusta 4-2 but losing 7-4 to Charleston.

Tighe reprimanded Kaline for failing to run out a fly ball during the Charleston game. The Tigers had two men on base at the time.

The manager blamed Kaline's failure to run hard on the young slugger's recent troubles at the plate. "It's not that Al is loafing," Tighe said, "but he gets so mad at himself when he isn't hitting that he does things like that."

Tighe said Shaw hasn't been doing enough road work and isn't pitching as well now as he was when spring training opened.

"If he has the good fast ball we need from him he certainly isn't showing it now," Tighe said.

Laurel Race Is Captured By Venomous

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Venomous, whose poison is in her sharp legs, stung six rivals in the $11,040 Cherry Blossom Stakes Saturday by zipping the three-quarters of a mile in a fast one minute and 11 seconds.

The 5-year-old mare, owned by B. A. Dario, president of Lincoln Downs, disdained the 124 pounds loaded on her to beat Linda's Dream, owned by Harold H. Polk, was weighed with only 109 pounds.

Pentagon Stable's Salix, carrying 12 pounds less than Venomous came in third.

The crowd of 21,117 proved good handicappers as the odds on all first three were low.

Venomous paid $3.80, $2.60 and $2.40, Linda's Dream $3 and $2.60 and Salix $3.60.

El Dorado Gets Place With Big Eight Baseball

RUSTON, La. (Special) — Managers of the Big Eight Baseball League have unanimously voted in favor of El Dorado, Ark., taking over the Springhill franchise in the league. Monroe and Bossier City also have applications for membership before the league, but the managers postponed action on these two possible members until their April 14 meeting.

Larry Fox, league president, also presented the National Collegiate Athletic Association requirements for college athletes playing summer ball. The Big Eight has "always leaned backwards" in protecting the eligibility of their high school and college players, it was pointed out. A college player must hold a job, working 32 hours a week, in order to maintain his eligibility in NCAA schools if he is away from home and playing summer ball.

The Big Eight season will open May 31 playing three night games a week—Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Minden has been granted permission to play seven - inning games at home. League members at the present are Bastrop, Bernice, Homer, Minden, Ruston, and El Dorado.

Fuentes Promising More Trouble For Ralph Dupas

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If lightweight contender Ralph Dupas thinks he's got troubles now, rugged welterweight Ramon Fuentes of Los Angeles promises to complicate things even more in their 10-rounder Monday night.

The 22-year-old Dupas, ranked second in the lightweight division by the National Boxing Assn. and fourth by Ring Magazine, is involved in a legal battle over his racial status.

The city of New Orleans contends Dupas is a Negro and refuses to give him a birth certificate showing him to be white. Without such a document, Dupas cannot meet white fighters in Louisiana because state segregation laws prohibit racially-mixed matches.

A civil district court last October ordered the city to issue Dupas the certificate he seeks, but an appeals court earlier this week reversed the decision and said the lower court lacked such jurisdiction.

The State Athletic Commission came to the rescue of the New Orleans boxer Tuesday night and upheld its prior sanction of the bout with Fuentes. The commission also decided that Dupas' racial status should remain "status quo until finally decided by the judiciary."

The bout was to have been held March 17, but Dupas contracted flu and forced a postponement. All of which is fine, says Fuentes, a 33-year-old unranked puncher who has met some of the best welterweights and middleweights in the business.

Fuentes says he has trained down to a fine line and contends "a lot of people are in for a surprise."

But Dupas, scheduled to meet champion Joe Brown for the lightweight title in Houston, Tex., next month, has defeated two of the welterweight division's best within the last year. He whipped second-ranked Vince Martinez here last April and beat fourth-ranked Gaspar Ortega at Norfolk, Va., in February.

Dupas, who has won 69 fights, lost only eight and had eight draws, promises to whip Fuentes and then beat Brown for the title. A tall order, but Dupas thinks he can handle it.

Promoter Bonny Geigerman expects a crowd of about 5,000 and the gate to top $10,000 for the bout which will neither be broadcast nor televised.

Sime Takes 100 With Morrow 3rd

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

BIG SPRING, Tex. (AP) — Big Dave Sime of Duke led all the way today in beating Bobby Morrow, Abilene Christian College's Olympic sprint champion, by a foot and a half in a wind-blown 9.6 hundred yard dash, the third chapter in their 3-year feud.

Morrow didn't even finish second. The lanky Texan wound up third to his teammate Bill Woodhouse. A crowd of 6,500 watched the fuel for the two mighty sprinters as Sime registered his second victory over the sprint king of the Olympic Games.

Sime beat Morrow in 9.4 in the Drake Relays of 1956 but later Morrow downed Sime in the 100-meters of the NCAA at 10.4. They hadn't met again until Saturday.

Sime, the big redhead who holds or shares all the sprint records, and the other runners battled a 20-mile per hour crosswind.

The 100-yard dash was the feature of the American Business Club Relays and drew its best crowd despite a dust storm and winds as high as 30 miles per hour.

It was the first time Morrow lost a race in Texas since 1953 and the second time he had lost in two years.

Willie White of Compton, Calif. Junior College beat him last year.

Sime got the start and led Morrow and Woodhouse in that order by about 6 inches for 40 yards. At 80 yards, Sime increased his lead to a foot and at the finish was a foot and a half ahead.

The Sime - Morow duel overshadowed a great high jump by Bertil Holmgren of Southern Methodist, who leaped 6 feet 9⅝ inches in setting a relays record and at the same time beating Dub Thornton of Texas Tech, center of a rhubarb.

Thornton beat Holmgren and his teammate, Don Stewart, in the Texas Relays and Coach McAdoo Keanton of SMU protested the use by the Texas Tech jumper of a built-up shoe. The ABC Relays Rules Committee, however, voted to allow Thornton to jump here using the shoe.

Thornton got only 6 feet 6½ inches, tying Stewart for second place. Holmgren, the Swedish athlete who came to SMU only this year, was leaping the highest of his career.

Texas won the university class championship with a whooping 72½ points. Abilene Christian was second with 38, Southern Methodist third with 29½, and Houston fourth with 28.

Two records were set and one tied. Holmgren set one and Bobby Weise of Houston set the other when he hurled the discus 159 feet 2½ inches. Texas, with its great quarter-miler, Eddie Southern, doing a 47 flat in the teeth of a 25 m.p.h. wind in a dust storm, tied the mile relay record at 3:18.5.

Sime was the overwhelming choice of the sports writers as outstanding man of the meet.

Oerter Beats Discus Mark In Arkansas

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Big Al Oerter, the Olympic champion from New Hyde Park, N. Y., bettered the existing world record for the discus throw three times in the University of Arkansas Relays Saturday.

The Kansas University giant's best heave was 202 feet, 6 inches—an even eight feet farther than Fortune Gordien spun the platter Aug. 22, 1953 at Pasadena, Calif., for the existing record of 194-6.

The best throw was sandwiched between efforts of 195-4 and 198-6 in the preliminaries Oerter's subsequent performance in the finals was comparatively inauspicious.

The longest throw was first measured at 202-6½ but one-half inch was lopped off in remeasurement. Arkansas track officials said they were sure the field would meet record specifications and they will seek to have the mark entered in the official books.

The discus used was weighed on post office scales and found to exceed the allowable minimum by one ounce.

Oerter, who won the discus event in the 1956 Olympic Games with a throw of 184-10½, also won the shot put Saturday.

He lobbed the 16-pound ball 54 feet, 9 inches to score the only individual double of the day.

Orlando Hazley of Oklahoma State University ran the 100-yard dash in 9.3, tying the existing world mark, but he was aided by a stiff 10-mile wind and the record is not eligible for certification.

No team scores were kept, but the Kansas squad won nine of 16 events.

Trojans Beat Seniors, 12-7, In Squad Tilt

TALLULAH, La. (Special) — Apparently the Tallulah Trojans will get off to a slow start this fall if play in the spring contest last Wednesday night at Legion Field is an indication.

Coach Racer Holstead saw his defending state Class A champions fight through at scoreless first half before finally downing the Seniors, 12-7 as a climax to spring football practice.

The Trojans played without the services of two of their first string men, Bill Grant, tackle, and Wayne Noland, a halfback, due to injuries.

The Neumann brothers, fullback Danny and quarterback Tommy, teamed to tally the Trojans two touchdowns.

Danny Neumann, a two time all-state fullback, bulled his way into the end zone from a yard out half way in the third period for the first score of the game.

Quarterback Geral Collins called on halfback Carl Williamson, Leonard Wall and Danny Neumann in moving the ball down field.

The Trojans scored again in the last quarter when substitute quarterback Tommy Neumann rolled out to pass, but, when he couldn't find an open receiver elected to run. He slipped through the secondary and after Danny Neumann threw a key block galloped 35 yards for a score. Both tries for the extra point failed.

The Seniors finally scored after Coach Holstead had substituted his second team. Joe Yerger capped a 70-yard march when he scored on a reverse play from 11 yards out. Phillip Scurria kicked the extra point that ended the scoring for the night.

Semion Wall, Yerger, Sammy Collins, Tommy Roberts carried the mail for the Seniors. In the line Dick Brown, Jim Griswold, Bruce Faught played a standout game for the seniors.

Sign Contract For $50,000 Chicago Open

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—A two-year, contract for a $50,000 open golf tournament in Chicago was signed Saturday by PGA officials and the Chicago sponsors, John and Ed McNulty.

This year's tournament will be played July 31-Aug. 3 at Glen-eagles Country Club in suburban Lemont. The McNulty brothers own the club.

The Chicago Open Invitational is one of two tournaments scheduled to replace George May's Tam O'Shanter World and All-American events, which May canceled Monday night.

Arrangements for the other tournament—the Eastern Open at Baltimore—are almost completed, PGA President George Sargent said. Sargent said he hopes to be able to make a definite announcement on it by Sunday night. It will be played the week before the Chicago tourney.

The second annual Chicago Open Invitational will be played in 1959 unless the PGA championship is held in the Chicago area that year. In the later event, the new $50,000 event will be played in 1960.

Silky May Race In East After Kentucky Derby

NEW YORK (AP)—Silky Sullivan, the West Coast 3-year-old sensation, may race in the East after the Kentucky Derby, his trainer said Saturday.

Reggie Cornell, in a phone conversation from Golden Gate Fields with Jimmy Kilroe, New York racing secretary, said owners Tom Ross and Phil Klipstein plan to race Silky in the Preakness at Pimlico and the Belmont Stakes here if he runs well in the Derby at Churchill Downs.

Cornell said both winners are anxious to show their horse to Eastern racing fans.

Silky will be flown to Louisville from California next week. Cornell said he would probably run in a final Derby warmup on April 26, a week before the Derby.

Fox Hunters Fix Barbecue Supper

ALEXANDRIA, La. (Special)—The Central Louisiana Fox Hunters Association will conduct a barbecue supper for its many hunters and friends at the association's camp site on the Leesville highway west of Gardner on April 12 at 7:30 p.m., according to an announcement by James Washburn, secretary.

Washburn said plans will be made at the supper for a bench show to be conducted later this spring or in the early summer.

Only one golfer, Cary Middlecoff, has played in all five Las Vegas Tournaments of Champions. The tournament admits only golfers who have won a major PGA event during the preceding 12 months.

No New York Rangers hockey team has finished as high as second in the National Hockey League since the championship club of 1941-42.

GRAPEFRUIT LEAGUE OBSERVATIONS

Braves Look Best, Red Sox Most Improved This Spring

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Observations of a baseball camp follower returned home after a seven-week tour of the 12 major league spring trainer camps in Florida:

Best looking team —Milwaukee Braves.

Most improved team — Boston Red Sox.

Most confident manager — Al Lopez, Chicago White Sox.

Most spectacular hitting feat—Stan Musial, Cardinals, going five for five, including four straight hits against Warren Spahn, Braves' southpaw ace. Neil Chrisley, Senators, hitting three home runs, driving in six runs against Detroit.

Most spectacular pitching feat—Dave Sisler, Red Sox, pitching nine innings of no-hit ball against Milwaukee and St. Louis, retiring 27 men in a row after the first batter he faced reached base on an error. Don Drysdale, Dodgers, yielding four hits and one run in 13 innings, against Boston, Detroit and St. Louis, over a stretch of 10 days.

Most disappointing pitchers — Robin Roberts, Phillies, yielded 30 hits and 16 runs in first 24 innings. Paul Foytack, Tigers, rapped for 20 hits and 22 runs in 12 1-3 innings.

Hottest hitters — Bill Skowron, Yankees, batted .417 (20 of 48) through April 1. Casey Wise, Braves, batted .528 (19 of 36).

Most disappointing hitter — Ed Bailey, Redlegs, collected only three hits in first 31 times at bat.

Most improved hitters—Harry Anderson, Phillies; Randy Jackson, Dodgers; Tito Trancona, White Sox; Gene Stephens, Red Sox.

Most improved pitchers—Lindy McDaniel, Cardinals; Bob Purkey and Tom Acker, Redlegs; Danny McDevitt, Dodgers; Ralph Terry, Athletics; Dave Sisler, Red Sox.

Catchers: Haywood Sullivan, Red Sox; Steve Korcheck, Senators; Dutch Dotterer, Redlegs; Joe Pignatano, Dodgers.

Most heart warming episode — Ted Kluszewski, sidelined most of last year by a sacroiliac condition, smashing two home runs and a single to drive in five runs for Pittsburgh.

Saddest sight — Robin Roberts, former Philadelphia pitching ace, being blasted for four Pittsburgh home runs in one inning.

Toughest break—Haywood Sullivan, apparently winning his battle to become Boston's No. 1 catcher, breaking his finger toward close of Florida training period.

Most thankful player — Bob Rush, pitching inspired ball for Milwaukee after 10 years with the lowly Chicago Cubs.

Most pleasant news — Herb Score's apparent complete recovery from the eye injury judging from his excellent pitching for Cleveland in Arizona.

Most provocative interview — Billy Herman's blast against his former Dodger mates, calling them "prima donnas, pouters and past their peak" athletes.

Most rejuvenated veteran—Pee Wee Reese, Dodgers, looking as spry as ever and heads and shoulders better than any other shortstop in camp.

Cockiest player — Billy Martin, Tigers, lighting fire under tame Tigers and predicting a World Series in Detroit.

Most intriguing experiment — Ted Williams' undergoing his own conditioning program and promising to be in the opening day lineup although he has yet to make an appearance in an exhibition game.

Most forgotten figure — Dick Stuart, Pittsburgh's colorful rookie slugger, besieged by practically all visiting newspapermen in 1957 but virtually unnoticed this spring before being sent back to minors.

Funniest spectacle—Albie Pearson, Washington's 5-6 centerfielder, running out to his position, flanked by 6-2 Roy Sievers in left and 6-4 Jim Lemon in right.

Biggest question mark — Will Duke Snider, slowly recovering from a knee operation last December, by ready to resume full-time action in the outfield when Dodgers open the season April 15?

Machen, Folley Bout Wednesday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Top-ranked contender Eddie Machen and Zora Folley, No. 2 contender for the heavyweight title, battle Wednesday night in a delayed 12-rounder which could lead the winner to Pete Rademacher instead of champion Floyd Patterson.

Managers of both Machen and Folley indicate they'll take Rademacher next if the price is right. Cus D'Amato, Patterson's manager, hasn't said much about Folley, but he's made it clear Machen is out on grounds he had his chance and turned it down.

The Cow Palace fight to be televised nationally by ABC at 10 p.m. EST, but blacked out over a 300-mile regional area, was postponed from March 19 after the undefeated Machen came up with a sore left shoulder muscle. He laid off training two weeks but has been boxing four to six rounds daily since March 26.

Both trainer Mario Spaminato and Manager Sid Flaherty describe the 25-year-old Redding Calif., Negro as "fit and ready to go with no ill effects." Oddsmakers have made him the slight favorite to score his 25th victory. He has 16 knockouts.

Folley, 27, fought several exhibitions after the postponement, then returned to his Chandler, Ariz., home. He returned here last Wednesday to resume training. He has a string of 17 straight victories and but three losses in 41 fights. His record shows 25 knockouts.

Both fighters should weigh around 195. Machen, 5-11, is about an inch shorter than the Arizona Negro.

The fight originally shaped up as a battle of counterpunchers. Machen, however, has been showing aggressiveness in his workouts and decked both sparring mates, Howard King of Reno, Nev., and Roger Rischer, the California heavyweight champion.

Machen has made it clear he's unhappy over statements by Folley's manager, Bill Swift, that the postponement was made as a "trick". A doctor said an examination showed Machen had "bicep tendonitis," or a pulled muscle.

Co-promoter Abe Acquistapace estimates a $100,000 gate from 13,000 paying customers. The Cow Palace record is 19,536 who paid $167,870 to watch Ezzard Charles knock out Pat Valentine Oct. 14, 1949.

Acquistapace said he and partner Jim Pusatari would go after Patterson for the winner, and "if not him, somebody else. If Rademacher is interested, we're listening."

Flaherty was more forthright. He said Bill King, a Louisville, Ky., promoter, was flying here for the fight, and if a reasonable macher fight could be signed.

Rademacher, an Olympic champion, was knocked out in his first and only pro fight last August by Patterson in the sixth round. He says he's ready to try again

Flaherty, who managed former middleweight champion Carl "Bobo" Olsen, said Machen's injury was "a superficial thing but the Folley fight is so important he didn't want to go unless he was absolutely perfect."

JENA ALL-STATE — Shirley Faye Cobb, forward on the Jena High School girls' basketball team, was named on the all-state Class AA team this year. A senior, she led her team to the district 3-AA title and a season record of 20 wins against nine losses. She averaged 28 points a game.

CHESSMEN DRAW

LONDON (AP) — Moscow Radio said Saturday world champion Vasily Smyslov and Mikhail Botvinnik, both Russians, drew in the 13th game of their chess title match. Botvinnik leads eight points to five.

Girl Grapplers Back At Kallio's

The "Barefoot Contessa" and the "Flaming Red Head" will be at Kallio's Arena tomorrow night as lady wrestlers take the spotlight on a card also featuring a four - man tag team affair involving males.

The shoeless lass is Judy Grable and the girlie with the scarlet tresses is Peggy Allen. Neither is a stranger to local fans, having appeared here several times in the past. The girls will clash in an hour - limit, two - out - of - three falls match.

Bill Barney and Jack Curtis meet Charley Laye and his clumsy sidekick, Dick Barkley, in the main event tag brawl, set to go 90 minutes or less.

Loy Scarborough will officiate the night's matches, the first to start at 8:15.

A feminine Argentine Rocca, the blonde Miss Grable is a former circus aerialist and uses her flying experience to great advantage in the ring. Her favorite holds are flying head scissors, flying toe holds, and fancy combinations of cartwheels and drop-kicks.

Miss Allen is planning an aerial attack of her own — she plans to send Judy flying out of the ring. The tempestuous red head is quite an ill - mannered babe and likes to hear her opponents scream. This mat cutie is all woman but no lady.

Laye and Barkley are planning plenty of trouble for Bill Barney. Bill was given an assistant referee's job in last week's tag match when Bernard Hodgemyer, slated to team with Laye and Barkley against Curtis, Barney and Phil Brummett, failed to show up. Laye and Barkley contend Barney used his official's post to help his ex-partners win. Curtis and Brummett won when the villains were disqualified for tying up opponents and referees in the ropes.

Softball Pilots To Meet Monday

Trojans Beat Seniors, 12-7, In Squad Tilt

TALLULAH, La. (Special) — Apparently the Tallulah Trojans will get off to a slow start this fall if play in the spring contest last Wednesday night at Legion Field is an indication.

Coach Racer Holstead saw his defending state Class A champions fight through at scoreless first half before finally downing the Seniors, 12-7 as a climax to spring football practice.

The Trojans played without the services of two of their first string men, Bill Grant, tackle, and Wayne Noland, a halfback, due to injuries.

The Neumann brothers, fullback Danny and quarterback Tommy, teamed to tally the Trojans two touchdowns.

Danny Neumann, a two time all-state fullback, bulled his way into the end zone from a yard out half way in the third period for the first score of the game.

Quarterback Geral Collins called on halfback Carl Williamson, Leonard Wall and Danny Neumann in moving the ball down field.

The Trojans scored again in the last quarter when substitute quarterback Tommy Neumann rolled out to pass, but, when he couldn't find an open receiver elected to run. He slipped through the secondary and after Danny Neumann threw a key block galloped 35 yards for a score. Both tries for the extra point failed.

The Seniors finally scored after Coach Holstead had substituted his second team. Joe Yerger capped a 70-yard march when he scored on a reverse play from 11 yards out. Phillip Scurria kicked the extra point that ended the scoring for the night.

Semion Wall, Yerger, Sammy Collins, Tommy Roberts carried the mail for the Seniors. In the line Dick Brown, Jim Griswold, Bruce Faught played a standout game for the seniors.

Sign Contract For $50,000 Chicago Open

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—A two-year, contract for a $50,000 open golf tournament in Chicago was signed Saturday by PGA officials and the Chicago sponsors, John and Ed McNulty.

This year's tournament will be played July 31-Aug. 3 at Gleneagles Country Club in suburban Lemont. The McNulty brothers own the club.

The Chicago Open Invitational is one of two tournaments scheduled to replace George May's Tam O'Shanter World and All-American events, which May canceled Monday night.

Arrangements for the other tournament—the Eastern Open at Baltimore—are almost completed, PGA President George Sargent said. Sargent said he hopes to be able to make a definite announcement on it by Sunday night. It will be played the week before the Chicago tourney.

The second annual Chicago Open Invitational will be played in 1959 unless the PGA championship is held in the Chicago area that year. In the later event, the new $50,000 event will be played in 1960.

Silky May Race In East After Kentucky Derby

NEW YORK (AP)—Silky Sullivan, the West Coast 3-year-old sensation, may race in the East after the Kentucky Derby, his trainer said Saturday.

Reggie Cornell, in a phone conversation from Golden Gate Fields with Jimmy Kilroe, New York racing secretary, said owners Tom Ross and Phil Klipstein plan to race Silky in the Preakness at Pimlico and the Belmont Stakes here if he runs well in the Derby at Churchill Downs.

Cornell said both winners are anxious to show their horse to Eastern racing fans.

Silky will be flown to Louisville from California next week. Cornell said he would probably run in a final Derby warmup on April 26, a week before the Derby.

Fox Hunters Fix Barbecue Supper

ALEXANDRIA, La. (Special)—The Central Louisiana Fox Hunters Association will conduct a barbecue supper for its many hunters and friends at the association's camp site on the Leesville highway west of Gardner on April 12 at 7:30 p.m., according to an announcement by James Washburn, secretary.

Washburn said plans will be made at the supper for a bench show to be conducted later this spring or in the early summer.

Only one golfer, Cary Middlecoff, has played in all five Las Vegas Tournaments of Champions. The tournament admits only golfers who have won a major PGA event during the preceding 12 months.

No New York Rangers hockey team has finished as high as second in the National Hockey League since the championship club of 1941-42.

GRAPEFRUIT LEAGUE OBSERVATIONS

Braves Look Best, Red Sox Most Improved This Spring

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Observations of a baseball camp follower returned home after a seven-week tour of the 12 major league spring trainer camps in Florida:

Best looking team —Milwaukee Braves.

Most improved team — Boston Red Sox.

Most confident manager — Al Lopez, Chicago White Sox.

Most spectacular hitting feat—Stan Musial, Cardinals, going five for five, including four straight hits against Warren Spahn, Braves' southpaw ace. Neil Chrisley, Senators, hitting three home runs, driving in six runs against Detroit.

Most spectacular pitching feat—Dave Sisler, Red Sox, pitching nine innings of no-hit ball against Milwaukee and St. Louis, retiring 27 men in a row after the first batter he faced reached base on an error. Don Drysdale, Dodgers, yielding four hits and one run in 13 innings, against Boston, Detroit and St. Louis, over a stretch of 10 days.

Most disappointing pitchers — Robin Roberts, Phillies, yielded 30 hits and 16 runs in first 24 innings. Paul Foytack, Tigers, rapped for 20 hits and 22 runs in 12 1-3 innings.

Hottest hitters — Bill Skowron, Yankees, batted .417 (20 of 48) through April 1. Casey Wise, Braves, batted .528 (19 of 36).

Most disappointing hitter — Ed Bailey, Redlegs, collected only three hits in first 31 times at bat.

Most improved hitters—Harry Anderson, Phillies; Randy Jackson, Dodgers; Tito Trancona, White Sox; Gene Stephens, Red Sox.

Most improved pitchers—Lindy McDaniel, Cardinals; Bob Purkey and Tom Acker, Redlegs; Danny McDevitt, Dodgers; Ralph Terry, Athletics; Dave Sisler, Red Sox.

Most promising rookies — pitchers: Carleton Willey, Braves; Bennie Daniels, Pirates; Roman Semproch, Phillies; Bob Shaw, Tigers; Ralph Lumenti, Senators; Bob Smith, Red Sox. Infielders: Dick Gray, Dodgers; Mike Baxes, Athletics. Outfielders: Vada Pinson, Redlegs; Marty Keough, Red Sox; Albie Pearson, and Neil Chrisley, Senators. Catchers: Haywood Sullivan, Red Sox; Steve Korcheck, Senators; Dutch Dotterer, Redlegs; Joe Pignatano, Dodgers.

Most heart warming episode — Ted Kluszewski, sidelined most of last year by a sacroiliac condition, smashing two home runs and a single to drive in five runs for Pittsburgh.

Saddest sight — Robin Roberts, former Philadelphia pitching ace, being blasted for four Pittsburgh home runs in one inning.

Toughest break—Haywood Sullivan, apparently winning his battle to become Boston's No. 1 catcher, breaking his finger toward close of Florida training period.

Most thankful player — Bob Rush, pitching inspired ball for Milwaukee after 10 years with the lowly Chicago Cubs.

Most pleasant news — Herb Score's apparent complete recovery from the eye injury judging from his excellent pitching for Cleveland in Arizona.

Most provocative interview — Billy Herman's blast against his former Dodger mates, calling them "prima donnas, pouters and past their peak" athletes.

Most rejuvenated veteran—Pee Wee Reese, Dodgers, looking as spry as ever and heads and shoulders better than any other shortstop in camp.

Cockiest player — Billy Martin, Tigers, lighting fire under tame Tigers and predicting a World Series in Detroit.

Most intriguing experiment — Ted Williams' undergoing his own conditioning program and promising to be in the opening day lineup although he has yet to make an appearance in an exhibition game.

Most forgotten figure — Dick Stuart, Pittsburgh's colorful rookie slugger, besieged by practically all visiting newspapermen in 1957 but virtually unnoticed this spring before being sent back to minors.

Funniest spectacle—Albie Pearson, Washington's 5-6 centerfielder, running out to his position, flanked by 6-2 Roy Sievers in left and 6-4 Jim Lemon in right.

Biggest question mark — Will Duke Snider, slowly recovering from a knee operation last December, by ready to resume full-time action in the outfield when Dodgers open the season April 15?

Machen, Folley Bout Wednesday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Top-ranked contender Eddie Machen and Zora Folley, No. 2 contender for the heavyweight title, battle Wednesday night in a delayed 12-rounder which could lead the winner to Pete Rademacher instead of champion Floyd Patterson.

Managers of both Machen and Folley indicate they'll take Rademacher next if the price is right. Cus D'Amato, Patterson's manager, hasn't said much about Folley, but he's made it clear Machen is out on grounds he had his chance and turned it down.

The Cow Palace fight to be televised nationally by ABC at 10 p.m. EST, but blacked out over a 300-mile regional area, was postponed from March 19 after the undefeated Machen came up with a sore left shoulder muscle. He laid off training two weeks but has been boxing four to six rounds daily since March 26.

Both trainer Mario Spaminato and Manager Sid Flaherty describe the 25-year-old Redding Calif., Negro as "fit and ready to go with no ill effects." Oddsmakers have made him the slight favorite to score his 25th victory. He has 16 knockouts.

Folley, 27, fought several exhibitions after the postponement, then returned to his Chandler, Ariz., home. He returned here last Wednesday to resume training. He has a string of 17 straight victories and but three losses in 41 fights. His record shows 25 knockouts.

Both fighters should weigh around 195. Machen, 5-11, is about an inch shorter than the Arizona Negro.

The fight originally shaped up as a battle of counterpunchers. Machen, however, has been showing aggressiveness in his workouts and decked both sparring mates, Howard King of Reno, Nev., and Roger Rischer, the California heavyweight champion.

Machen has made it clear he's unhappy over statements by Folley's manager, Bill Swift, that the postponement was made as a "trick". A doctor said an examination showed Machen had "bicep tendonitis," or a pulled muscle.

Co-promoter Abe Acquistapace estimates a $100,000 gate from 13,000 paying customers. The Cow Palace record is 19,530 who paid $167,870 to watch Ezzard Charles knock out Pat Valentine Oct. 14, 1949.

Acquistapace said he and partner Jim Pusatari would go after Patterson for the winner, and "if not him, somebody else. If Rademacher is interested, we're listening."

Flaherty was more forthright. He said Bill King, a Louisville, Ky., promoter, was flying here for the fight, and if a reasonable macher fight could be signed.

Rademacher, an Olympic champion, was knocked out in his first and only pro fight last August by Patterson in the sixth round. He says he's ready to try again

Flaherty, who managed former middleweight champion Carl "Bobo" Olsen, said Machen's injury was "a superficial thing but the Folley fight is so important he didn't want to go unless he was absolutely perfect."

JENA ALL-STATE — Shirley Faye Cobb, forward on the Jena High School girls' basketball team, was named on the all-state Class AA team this year. A senior, she led her team to the district 3-AA title and a season record of 20 wins against nine losses. She averaged 28 points a game.

CHESSMEN DRAW

LONDON (AP) — Moscow Radio said Saturday world champion Vasily Smyslov and Mikhail Botvinnik, both Russians, drew in the 13th game of their chess title match. Botvinnik leads eight points to five.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: Please explain the phrase, "Give yourself to Christ," which you use so constantly. P. L.

ANSWER: You were made for fellowship with God. No other creature was made in God's image and likeness — only man was fashioned for communion with Him. But when man sinned, his fellowship with God was broken. He was expelled from the realm for which he was created. He became estranged, he walked in loneliness and fear, he became acquainted with suffering and pain. He experienced anxiety and frustration.

But, although man left God, God never left him. He pursued him in his errant paths, he tried to demonstrate His love and compassion, he tried in many ways to communicate with him. Finally, God clothed himself in human flesh, he became incarnate in Christ. He proved his love on the Cross when He made atonement for our sins. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself."

But, since God gave us the power of choice, it is left for every man to decide whether or not he shall accept God's gesture of mercy and Grace. Though we legally belong to God, He makes the giving of ourselves to Him, voluntary. He has paved the way for man to come back into fellowship with Him, but we must come of our own volition. Otherwise, it would be forced love, and God couldn't countenance nor accept that. If we would have all that God offers, we must "give ourselves to Christ." We must live for the One who died for us, if we are to be saved.

Bible Words for Today

JOHN 17:21—"That they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us, so that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (RSV)

* * *

This prayer which our Saviour offered on that last night that He was with His disciples just before He went to the cross has been called by some the real "Lord's Prayer," because it was the one He really prayed Himself, while the one that is called "The Lord's Prayer" was the one He taught His disciples to pray, and is the only such prayer of which we have any record. The one prayer that was on His great heart that night was that "they may all be one"—and for that He laid down His life. After these more than 2,000 years, to what extent has that prayer been answered? In recent years there have been many evidences of God's people of various nations and denominations coming closer together in spirit, but in many ways they are still far from being "one." May His prayer be ours.

Clergy To Hold Ark. Meeting In Crossett

CROSSETT (Special) — The Episcopal Clergy of the Diocese of Arkansas will hold their Spring Clergy Conference here this week.

The field of study for this conference will be Pastoral Theology, led by the Very Rev. George M. Alexander, Dean of the School of Theology of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn. He will give three lectures on various aspects of the subject, which will be followed by discussion periods.

The Rev. Norman Hall, Leadership Training Division of the National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church of New York, will have two and one-half hours Tuesday night for bringing the clergy of the diocese up to date on material, plans, visual aids, etc., which the Leadership Training Division of the National Council can provide for enrichment of the educational program of individual churches.

There are two conferences of all Episcopal clergymen in Arkansas each year. They are set and presided over by the Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Robert R. Brown, D. D. In the past these conferences have been held in Little Rock and at Camp Mitchell on Petit Jean Mountain. This marks the beginning of a policy of having them convene at various parishes and missions about the Diocese.

According to Peter F. Watzek, General Chairman for Crossett, the Conference will begin with registration at St. Mark's Episcopal Church by 4:00 p.m. Tuesday. Dinner in the Parish House will follow at 6:00. The meetings will conclude with lunch at the Parish House on Thursday, April 10th.

Grace Church Cites Japan In Festival

Preparations are being made for a special day of fellowship next Sunday at the Grace Episcopal Church parish house, when the young people will hold a Japanese festival. Theme of the event which is the culmination of a Lenten study on Japan, will be "A Japanese Tea Garden."

Many of the young people will wear Japanese costumes and the customs of the Orient will be carried out. Various Japanese articles will be displayed as well as the handicrafts made by members of the church school classes.

The purpose of the festival is to climax a Lenten study of the Nippon Sei Ko Kwai, a self-governing branch of the Anglican Communion. The church school missionary offering for this year is designated to help the church in Japan and the missionary district of Salina, Kansas, in the United States.

The plans for the day are for the church family to come to the parish house immediately following the 9:45 a.m. service.

'Louisianians' To Offer Music In This Area

Of interest in the Twin Cities area, will be the appearance of the "Louisianians" at the Trinity Baptist Church on Thursday this week. The 22 voice male chorus will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. The program will consist of both secular and religious songs with a number of spirituals included.

These men are much in demand throughout the South. They have appeared twice in recent years at Southern Baptist Conventions in 1955 at Miami, Fla. and in 1957 at Chicago, Ill. They travel the southland each year on goodwill tours on behalf of the Baptist College located in Pineville.

Dr. P. V. Blanchard, head of the Louisiana College Music Department, is the director. He organized the original group with eight singers in 1947. Since that time, the group has grown to its present enrollment and has become nationally known.

The "Louisianians" will entertain the West Monroe Kiwanis Club at noon on Thursday, April 10. At 5:25 p.m., they will appear on television, and on Friday, the group will present a concert at the Rayville High School at 12:35 p.m.

Crossett '58-59 Concert Slate Is Announced

The Jefferies Music Quartet of Crossett, Ark., and The Southerners, well - known Jackson, Miss., group, will be among those appearing here when the regular first Sunday afternoon Booster Singing Convention meets at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at Booster Hall.

The program will continue until 4 p.m.

Many outstanding song leaders, quartets and trios from various sections of Louisiana and Arkansas will also be on hand, officials said.

Garland May, convention president, issues an invitation to all singers and lovers of good Gospel singing to attend.

Music Set For Assembly Of God

Special Easter music at the First Assembly of God Church, Cypress and Crosley Street, West Monroe, will include an octet of young people singing "The Unveiled Christ" and "He Rose Triumphantly."

The selections are part of the Easter Sunday School program scheduled for today at 9:45 a.m.

During the coming week, evangelistic services will be held daily except Saturday at 7:00 p.m. Rev. J. D. Middlebrook will be visiting speaker.

Archbishop Of Capetown Lashes Out At Apartheid

By LYNN HEINZERLING

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—The Most Rev. Joose de Blank, who left a slightly drab London bishopric less than six months ago, is now one of South Africa's most controversial figures.

The 49-year-old Anglican archbishop of Cape Town, who held his peace nearly four months on the subject of South Africa's racial legislation then exploded in wrathful denunciation, has heard himself castigated as a "political priest."

P. J. Coetzee, a Nationalist member of Parliament, recently rose in the House of Assembly and inquired "whether we should not just banish people who do us so much harm in this country."

He was referring to Archbishop de Blank and the Rt. Rev. Ambrose Reeves, bishop of Johannesburg, one of 14 Anglican bishops serving under the Rev. Mr. de Blank.

Other South Africans have come to the archbishop's support. Author Alan Paton, chairman of the Liberal party, recently wrote: "There are hundreds of thousands of South Africans who are thankful that he saw so quickly that apartheid (South Africa's segregation policy) is an evil thing."

Archbishop de Blank, whose Anglicans are a minority in South Africa, has warned that he will not give episcopal communion in churches which practice apartheid.

"I have to admit with shame," he wrote in Good Hope, the official diocesan organ, "that I have been told of certain congregations where apartheid operates.

"I don't and cannot believe it but if it were ever proved to me . . . let me state with all emphasis at my command that I should do everything in my power to eradicate it.

"And in the intervening period while it still existed I should have to refuse any episcopal ministration on my behalf of the congregation concerned.

"Far better that our church should be small numerically but true to its Lord than that it should be strong numerically but in its strength dependent on nominal faith of many who have no serious intention of ever putting their faith in practice."

Primitive cave women in the United States tidied up their floors by spreading fresh soil over the debris rather than using the equivalent of a broom. Archeologists today are happy about this for it preserved the tools and other articles used in those ancient days as carefully as if they had been left in a modern filing cabinet.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: Please explain the phrase, "Give yourself to Christ," which you use so constantly. P. L.

ANSWER: You were made for fellowship with God. No other creature was made in God's image and likeness — only man was fashioned for communion with Him. But when man sinned, his fellowship with God was broken. He was expelled from the realm for which he was created. He became estranged, he walked in loneliness and fear, he became acquainted with suffering and pain. He experienced anxiety and frustration.

But, although man left God, God never left him. He pursued him in his errant paths, he tried to demonstrate His love and compassion, he tried in many ways to communicate with him. Finally, God clothed himself in human flesh, he became incarnate in Christ. He proved his love on the Cross when He made atonement for our sins. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself."

But, since God gave us the power of choice, it is left for every man to decide whether or not he shall accept God's gesture of mercy and Grace. Though we legally belong to God, He makes the giving of ourselves to Him, voluntary. He has paved the way for man to come back into fellowship with Him, but we must come of our own volition. Otherwise, it would be forced love, and God couldn't countenance nor accept that. If we would have all that God offers, we must "give ourselves to Christ." We must live for the One who died for us, if we are to be saved.

Bible Words for Today

JOHN 17:21 — "That they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us, so that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (RSV)

* * *

This prayer which our Saviour offered on that last night that He was with His disciples just before He went to the cross has been called by some the real "Lord's Prayer," because it was the one He really prayed Himself, while the one that is called "The Lord's Prayer" was the one He taught His disciples to pray, and is the only such prayer of which we have any record. The one prayer that was on His great heart that night was that "they may all be one" — and for that He laid down His life. After these more than 2,000 years, to what extent has that prayer been answered? In recent years there have been many evidences of God's people of various nations and denominations coming closer together in spirit, but in many ways they are still far from being "one." May His prayer be ours.

REV. G. ALEXANDER

Clergy To Hold Ark. Meeting In Crossett

CROSSETT (Special) — The Episcopal Clergy of the Diocese of Arkansas will hold their Spring Clergy Conference here this week.

The field of study for this conference will be Pastoral Theology, led by the Very Rev. George M. Alexander, Dean of the School of Theology of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn. He will give three lectures on various aspects of the subject, which will be followed by discussion periods.

The Rev. Norman Hall, Leadership Training Division of the National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church of New York, will have two and one-half hours Tuesday night for bringing the clergy of the diocese up to date on material, plans, visual aids, etc., which the Leadership Training Division of the National Council can provide for enrichment of the educational program of individual churches.

There are two conferences of all Episcopal clergymen in Arkansas each year. They are set and presided over by the Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Robert R. Brown, D. D. In the past these conferences have been held in Little Rock and at Camp Mitchell on Petit Jean Mountain. This marks the beginning of a policy of having them convene at various parishes and missions about the Diocese.

According to Peter F. Watzek, General Chairman for Crossett, the Conference will begin with registration at St. Mark's Episcopal Church by 4:00 p.m. Tuesday. Dinner in the Parish House will follow at 6:00. The meetings will conclude with lunch at the Parish House on Thursday, April 10th.

Grace Church Cites Japan In Festival

Preparations are being made for a special day of fellowship next Sunday at the Grace Episcopal Church parish house, when the young people will hold a Japanese festival. Theme of the event which is the culmination of a Lenten study on Japan, will be "A Japanese Tea Garden."

Many of the young people will wear Japanese costumes and the customs of the Orient will be carried out. Various Japanese articles will be displayed as well as the handicrafts made by members of the church school classes.

The purpose of the festival is to climax a Lenten study of the Nippon Sei Ko Kwai, a self-governing branch of the Anglican Communion. The church school missionary offering for this year is designated to help the church in Japan and the missionary district of Salina, Kansas, in the United States.

The plans for the day are for the church family to come to the parish house immediately following the 9:45 a.m. service.

'Louisianians' To Offer Music In This Area

These men are much in demand throughout the South. They have appeared twice in recent years at Southern Baptist Conventions in 1955 at Miami, Fla. and in 1957 at Chicago, Ill. They travel the southland each year on goodwill tours on behalf of the Baptist College located in Pineville.

Dr. P. V. Blanchard, head of the Louisiana College Music Department, is the director. He organized the original group with eight singers in 1947. Since that time, the group has grown to its present enrollment and has become nationally known.

The "Louisianians" will entertain the West Monroe Kiwanis Club at noon on Thursday, April 10. At 5:25 p.m., they will appear on television, and on Friday, the group will present a concert at the Rayville High School at 12:35 p.m.

Archbishop Of Capetown Lashes Out At Apartheid

By LYNN HEINZERLING

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) —The Most Rev. Joose de Blank, who left a slightly drab London bishopric less than six months ago, is now one of South Africa's most controversial figures.

The 49-year-old Anglican archbishop of Cape Town, who held his peace nearly four months on the subject of South Africa's racial legislation then exploded in wrathful denunciation, has heard himself castigated as a "political priest."

P. J. Coetzee, a Nationalist member of Parliament, recently rose in the House of Assembly and inquired "whether we should not just banish people who do us so much harm in this country."

He was referring to Archbishop de Blank and the Rt. Rev. Ambrose Reeves, bishop of Johannesburg, one of 14 Anglican bishops serving under the Rev. Mr. de Blank.

Other South Africans have come to the archbishop's support. Author Alan Paton, chairman of the Liberal party, recently wrote: "There are hundreds of thousands of South Africans who are thankful that he saw so quickly that apartheid (South Africa's segregation policy) is an evil thing."

Archbishop de Blank, whose Anglicans are a minority in South Africa, has warned that he will not give episcopal communion in churches which practice apartheid.

"I have to admit with shame," he wrote in Good Hope, the official diocesan organ, "that I have been told of certain congregations where apartheid operates.

"I don't and cannot believe it but if it were ever proved to me . . . let me state with all emphasis at my command that I should do everything in my power to eradicate it.

"And in the intervening period while it still existed I should have to refuse any episcopal ministration on my behalf of the congregation concerned.

"Far better that our church should be small numerically but true to its Lord than that it should be strong numerically but in its strength dependent on nominal faith of many who have no serious intention of ever putting their faith in practice."

Primitive cave women in the United States tidied up their floors by spreading fresh soil over the debris rather than using the equivalent of a broom. Archeologists today are happy about this for it preserved the tools and other articles used in those ancient days as carefully as if they had been left in a modern filing cabinet.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Historical Novels On Royal Family Popular

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Historical novels based on the lives of the English royal family are always popular. The newest title of this type is "Victoria and Albert" by Evelyn Anthony. When Victoria became Queen of England she was a tiny, blue-eyed, fair-haired girl, who bore little resemblance to the formidable "Widow of Windsor" she later became. But this is a novel about Victoria, the wife, not the widow, beginning with youth and marriage and ending as a vital part of Victoria's life ended with the death of Albert, the only person she ever loved. Evelyn Anthony's portrait of the Queen and her consort is touching and moving. She loved Albert so much that she never once realized that he did not love her. Miss Anthony has skillfully reconstructed their daily life as well as the political life of the period. There have been many books about Victoria ranging from the satirical to the dull. "Victoria and Albert" has the distinction of presenting Victoria as a human being.

A very fine novel is "Michelangelo the Florentine" by Sidney Alexander. In a very impressive novel, Mr. Alexander has revealed a very great genius in all of his imperfect humanity. In this book we live in the Italian Renaissance and the entire period is brought vividly to life. The pages of the book swarm with the giants of the period — the evil Borgias, the Medici, Machivelli, Leonardo da Vinci, Botticelli and too many others to name. This book will not appeal to every reader, but to a discriminating audience, it will be a great reading experience.

Frederic F. Van de Water is an outstanding historical novelist of the American scene. His latest book is called "Day of Battle." It covers Vermont's heroic effort, following the fall of Ticonderoga in 1777, to equip an army to resist the British. A most devoted recruit to this cause was handsome Young Lieutenant Jeremy Shaw, homeward bound to York state from his term of service with the army. The story of the struggle to rout the British, told in terms of the people who worked and sacrificed so devotedly for its success, makes absorbing reading.

A fascinating story of the early Christian era is "The Wayward Heart" by Sallie Lee Bell. It is the story of beautiful Sherah and the two men who loved her and how she chose the hard but right course for her life. Miss Bell makes the heroic events of Bible history come alive in this story. A modern novel with a Louisiana setting is "Love in A Windy Space" by Wirt Williams. It has its setting in New Orleans and uses this fascinating city to make an exciting background for a story of modern youth.

"Angel" by Elizabeth Taylor is a strange and powerful novel. Her central character is Angelica Deverell, a precocious fifteen year old who became a successful novelist, without any real ability. Funny and sad at the same time Mrs. Taylor succeeds in winning our sympathy for a character who might easily have appeared too bizarre for us to care about her. Albert Camus is one of the most powerful of modern day writers, in fact he won the Nobel prize for literature in 1957. We have just added to our collection a book of his short stories called "Exile and the Kingdom." If you are interested in the marvelous mind you will surely want to read "Exile and the Kingdom."

Non-fiction this week offers a great variety of material. "The Movies" by Richard Griffith and Arthur Mayer is one of the most interesting books that I have seen in a long time. It is a large book, beautifully done and contains a complete history of the motion picture industry. "Dew Line" by Richard Morenus is an account of distant early warning, America's first line of defense. It is a book which will make many of us feel better, when we think of the threat of foreign invasion.

Books on archeology are extremely popular. The latest one of this type is """Digging Up Jericho" by Kathleen Kenyon. This is a fascinating account of one of the earliest civilizations in the world. There is now a revival of interest in accounts of adventure in World War II. Edgar D. Whitcomb has written an exciting and thrilling story of one of the most dramatic events of the war in "Escape from Corregidor." If you want to read a story of incredible bravery and determination don't miss this book.

A very fine picture of life in one of the countries of South America is "Chile Through Embassy Windows, 1939-1953" written by Claude G. Bowers who several years ago gave us "My Mission to Spain." This book adds much to our understanding of Latin America.

National library week called to your attention the importance of reading, we urge you to keep up the habit and truly "Wake Up and Read."

Reach Of Fear Excellent Book

THE REACH OF FEAR, a novel of suspense by D. L. Mathews (Rinehart & Company, $2.95.)

The unseen leading character in this adroit novel is fear itself — black, ugly, destructive fear which seeks into every house in a modern suburban "development" and warps, wrecks — and even kills — as it mushrooms out.

Despite all evidence to the contrary, the neighbors in the little suburban colony are determined to label the murder of thirteen - year - old Bruce Adams the work of a sex fiend. Convinced that a madman is loose among them, they allow fear to possess them and to poison their every action.

Neighbors that rarely spoke before exchange insultes; the local philanderer is flushed into the open; a marriage that has been preserved by patience flies apart; a past that should have remained a secret is tragically exposed.

Against the background of wild emotion, expert police work proceeds sanely and steadily, and, despite the confusion of false charges and misdirected suspicion, the surprising solution is revealed to a shattered community.

In this first novel, Mathews has brilliantly characterized her "development" dwellers and skillfully woven an absorbing story of the impact of murder.

Great Story Of Pope Pius XII

WITNESS OF THE LIGHT By Katherine Burton (Longmans, $4). This is the life story of Pope Pius XII, diplomat, scholar and spiritual leader.

Pope Pius XII is unquestionably one of the most sifinificant and adored men of our time. This biography not only covers in detail the life, thoughts and influence of this religious figure but is a human-interest story as well, replete with illustrations and anecdotes showing the very human, very great Pope Pius XII.

Mrs. Burton shows the Pope growing up in a devout family circle in a Rome torn by the dissensions between the papacy and the new kingdom of Italy. Devoted to the Church as a child, Eugenio Pacelli was ordained a priest in 1899. Then came training as a diplomat during the days of Leo XIII and appointment as under-secretary of state in 1912.

After receiving bishop's orders, Eugenio Pacelli was named nuncio to Bavaria during World War I. In spite of the troubled times and troubled conditions he concluded ed concordats with Bavaria, Prussia and later with Germany. Cardinal in 1929, papal secretary of state in 1930, he made trips to South America and the United States where he began his friendship with Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Cardinal Pacelli, elected Pope in 1939, took the name of his illustrious predecessor, Pius XI. A man of peace, Pope Pius XII strove to prevent World War II and worked constantly for peace during the conflict. Sponsoring a vigorous program for prisoners, at the war's end the Pope's heart went out to the many destitute and displaced persons and he worked hard and effectively for them. Speaking out against the tyranny of states over individuals and families, Pope Pius XII, a great leader of Catholic and Christian thought and teaching, has striven constantly for the betterment of the human race.

Love Story In Old France

UNDER THE WINTER MOON A love story set against the background of Medieval France and the first crusade by Teresa Brooke (Doubleday, $3.95).

". . . This way," said Anne softly, and Denys followed her through the trees until they came to a sunlit clearing. A fallen trunk lay spread across the knee deep grass. Bees and crickets were clamoring among the bluebells and foxgloves.

"They call this the Elfin Glade," said Anne dreamily. "Shall we rest a bit?" . . . She felt a moment of panic as he sat down beside her.

"God protect me," she thought hurriedly. "What on earth am I doing?" She caught her breath. The sense of that radiant young flesh close beside her left her with a feeling of vertigo: it was like standing on the edge of a cliff.

Then she said to herself calmly: "Never mind. Let come what may."

In a tiny woodland glade, dappled with sunlight, garlanded with flowers, a beautiful woman and her young lover found a few fleeting hours of happiness.

But for Lady Anne of Mezieres and Denys de Seconnet that happiness was to become as remote as a dimly remembered dream. There in that secluded hideaway they killed Geoffrey of Mezieres, who, as Anne's husband, had been the only obstacle to their love. Yet Geoffrey's death was to drive them still farther apart —Denys to do penance on a crusade to the Holy Land, and Anne to wait for his return until that day when she could bear their separation no longer and set - out herself to look for him.

Under the Winter Moon is an extraordinary story, as delicate as a tapestry, as passionate and direct as a ballad. Here is the pageantry and color of medievel France —a land of faith and poetry, sorcery and passion, recreated by a sensitive, gifted new writer.

Fine Dish Of Hughes, Some 500-Odd Pages

THE LANGSTON HUGHES READER. Braziller. $5.95.

This is a fine rich dish of Hughes — 500 pages from his voluminous writings, poems dated as early as 1926, short stories, some translations from French, some of the "Simple" pieces, some plays, speeches and autobiography.

There are many explanations for Hughes' popularity, such as his sure knack for telling a story, his ability to get five - syllable thoughts into one - syllable words. But best of all, I think, is the wonderful light touch; who is more serious among our writers, and who makes us enjoy it so much?

OCCASIONAL HIT

British Theater Group Is Courting Failure

By NORMAN MOSS

LONDON (AP) — In the hotly competitive world of the London commercial theater, the English Stage Company is unique. It wants to make a lot of money to lose.

Operating away from London's bright lights center (a sort of British off - broadway), it has constantly run in the red by unswervingly following a policy of promoting new talent, new ideas and new trends in the drama.

It has been interested in harbingers more than hits, in serious purpose more than sell - outs. This policy has won it the accolade from one critic as the most influential theater group in Britain.

But when the red ink threatens to drown out the brave venture, the company reaches into a constantly changing repertoire and sends a likely looking production into the commerical theater for a fee. Often enough for survival, the emigrant scores a smash and the money comes rolling back from London's fashionable West End Theater, even from New York's Broadway.

The mainspring behind the success of the English Stage Company is George Devine, its shaggy - haired artistic director.

"The modern theater in this country bears almost no relation to modern life," he complained recently. "Look at it! How often do you see the moods of life today reflected in the theater?

"Compared with modern painting, modern music or modern poetry, our theater is like an old lady in a sunbonnet."

The English Stage Company was informed two years ago to combat this state of affairs. It took over the Royal Court Theater in Chelsea, a 485-seat playhouse with an illustrious history —the first plays of Bernard Shaw and Hendrik Ibsen were presented there to shocked and divided Edwardian audiences.

Rocket to Fame

Almost immediately the English Stage Company dropped a bombshell into British drama in the form of John Osborne. The 28-year-old playwright rapidly became the archetype of the "angry young man" currently raising the temperature of British letters.

The Royal Court put on his youthful, tempestuous and tormented "Look Back in Anger," rocketing him to fame. It is now packing a New York theater.

Sir Laurence Olivier saw "Look Back in Anger" and met the rebellious author in the theater lounge. "Wish you'd write a play for me to act in," he remarked over a drink.

The result was "The Entertainer," in which Sir Laurence played a bawdy, broken - down vaudevillian. He received only a fraction of his usual salary when the play was presented at the Royal Court.

Later "The Entertainer" was moved to a West End theater. Sir Laurence is now playing the role on Broadway, in the same production by the 28-year-old director, Tony Richardson.

Venturesome Trials

The English Stage Company has introduced some new American drama to Britain. A notable success was the much - praised play by the Nobel prize winner, William Faulkner, "Requiem for a Nun."

Another was the Broadway success, "A Member of the Wedding," by Carson McCullers.

The company stirred up controversy with a comedy mocking religion called "The Making of Moo," and with the works of the French dramatist Eugene Ionesco. The French playwright, who believes true communication is impossible, wrote a play for two characters and 24 chairs. This also went to New York via the Royal Court.

The Royal Court is a theater center as well as a playhouse. Young writers sending in their plays — and the company re-doing, receives 30 a week — are encouraged or counselled.

So that aspiring dramatists can have more contact with the live theater, Devine has instituted a "writer's pass" which he gives to a chosen few. This gives the holder free run of the theatre, front-of-the-backstage.

In its first eight months, the company won the applause of the press and playgoers — and lost $23,000. This was a success it could not afford for long.

Money to Lose

Then the directors saw an opportunity to transfer some of its productions which had caught on with a large public to commercial theaters, at a profit. The first of these was not a new play at all, but a revival of a 17th century sex comedy called "The Country Wife," which later also transferred to New York.

"In transfers, I went out strictly for money," Devine says.

"We were having a hard time financially. I didn't want to have to choose plays here because they were going to pay. If I started doing that, there would be no point in our being here.

"So I said, 'Okay, let's make money in the West End and in New York. Let's make enough money there to lose here in Chelsea.'

"And that's what we've been doing."

TV notes

Barbara Bel Geddes and John Kerr will co - star in the April 10 "Playhouse 90" drama, "Rumors of Evening." It is a World War II story by F. E. Durkee Jr. about a love affair between an American pilot and an English girl.

The TV version of Victor Herbert's musical, "The Red Mill," will employ two narrators when presented on CBS April 19. Harpo Marx will be one of them but that doesn't mean he will talk at long last in a public performance. His "narration" will be through the harp, with little Evelyn ("Eloise") Rudie "translating" for him.

"Playhouse 90" for April 17 will offer Elizabeth Montgomery, Robert Middleton, Henry Hull, James Drury, Franchot Tone and Eva Le Gallienne in a filmed drama called "Bitter Heritage." The story is about community antagonism to Jesse James Jr. when he returns to the Kansas town where he was born. The former title of the work was "The Brand of Jesse James."

April 7-11 NBC's "Today" program will offer a week - long series entitled "The Threshold Years," devoted to the teenager. Dave Garroway will be in charge, as usual. Most of the series will be live, although some film will be used.

NBC's "Tic Tac Dough" is going to have a German counterpart over the Munich station beginning April 15. It will be called "Tick-Tack."

"Public Prosecutor," to be done on "U. S. Steel Hour" April 23, is a stage play produced in Britain and has been acquired by the Theater Guild for Broadway next season. Apparently the Guild wants to give it a pre - tryout tryout.

The very attractive and young Ann Helm, who won admiration from the critics when "Cloud Seven" played briefly on the Broadway stage this season, will have the title role in "The Sleeping Beauty" when it is done at a date still to be determined on NBC's "Shirley Temple's Storybook" program. This one will be on film.

The first show of the new "No Warning" series, to bow on NBC April 6 at 7:30 p. m. will be "Ashley and Son" and will star Everett Sloane.

"Kraft Television Theater" will do a two - parter in May. It will be a dramatization of Robert Penn Warren's novel, "All the King's Men." The first half will be seen May 7, the second on May 14.

Al Smith And His America Is Top Work

AL SMITH AND HIS AMERICA. By Oscar Handlin. Library of American Biography —Little, Brown: $350.

Editor Handlin becoming happily author Handlin for this biography series he directs now does the 18th book in it, and easily one of the best.

Smith's rise on New York's East Side, his practical direct education at rallies, party meetings and legislative sessions, the development and growth of his liberalism, his willingness to compromise on little things but his admirable devotion to principle, his popular governorship, his campaign for the presidency and the fierce debate on the Catholic issue, his declining years with the rival Roosevelt the leader of party and nation — all this, short though the book is, comes through these pages with a fresh and foreceful significance.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Historical Novels On Royal Family Popular

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Historical novels based on the lives of the English royal family are always popular. The newest title of this type is 'Victoria and Albert" by Evelyn Anthony. When Victoria became Queen of England she was a tiny, blue-eyed, fair-haired girl, who bore little resemblance to the formidable "Widow of Windsor" she later became. But this is a novel about Victoria, the wife, not the widow, beginning with youth and marriage and ending as a vital part of Victoria's life ended with the death of Albert, the only person she ever loved. Evelyn Anthony's portrait of the Queen and her consort is touching and moving. She loved Albert so much that she never once realized that he did not love her. Miss Anthony has skillfully reconstructed their daily life as well as the political life of the period. There have been many books about Victoria ranging from the satirical to the dull. "Victoria and Albert" has the distinction of presenting Victoria as a human being.

A very fine novel is "Michelangelo the Florentine" by Sidney Alexander. In a very impressive novel, Mr. Alexander has revealed a very great genius in all of his imperfect humanity. In this book we live in the Italian Renaissance and the entire period is brought vividly to life. The pages of the book swarm with the giants of the period — the evil Borgias, the Medici, Machivelli, Leonardo da Vinci, Botticelli and too many others to name. This book will not appeal to every reader, but to a discriminating audience, it will be a great reading experience.

Frederic F. Van de Water is an outstanding historical novelist of the American scene. His latest book is called "Day of Battle." It covers Vermont's heroic effort, following the fall of Ticonderoga in 1777, to equip an army to resist the British. A most devoted recruit to this cause was handsome Young Lieutenant Jeremy Shaw, homeward bound to York state from his term of service with the army. The story of the struggle to rout the British, told in terms of the people who worked and sacrificed so devotedly for its success, makes absorbing reading.

A fascinating story of the early Christian era is "The Wayward Heart" by Sallie Lee Bell. It is the story of beautiful Sherah and the two men who loved her and how she chose the hard but right course for her life. Miss Bell makes the heroic events of Bible history come alive in this story. A modern novel with a Louisiana setting is "Love in A Windy Space" by Wirt Williams. It has its setting in New Orleans and uses this fascinating city to make an exciting background for a story of modern youth.

"Angel" by Elizabeth Taylor is a strange and powerful novel. Her central character is Angelica Deverell, a precocious fifteen year old who became a successful novelist, without any real ability. Funny and sad at the same time Mrs. Taylor succeeds in winning our sympathy for a character who might easily have appeared too bizarre for us to care about her. Albert Camus is one of the most powerful of modern day writers, in fact he won the Nobel prize for literature in 1957. We have just added to our collection a book of his short stories called "Exile and the Kingdom." If you are interested in the marvelous mind you will surely want to read "Exile and the Kingdom."

Non-fiction this week offers a great variety of material. 'The Movies" by Richard Griffith and Arthur Mayer is one of the most interesting books that I have seen in a long time. It is a large book, beautifully done and contains a complete history of the motion picture industry. "Dew Line" by Richard Morenus is an account of distant early warning, America's first line of defense. It is a book which will make many of us feel better, when we think of the threat of foreign invasion.

Books on archeology are extremely popular. The latest one of this type is """Digging Up Jericho" by Kathleen Kenyon. This is a fascinating account of one of the earliest civilizations in the world. There is now a ervival of interest in accounts of adventure in World War II. Edgar D. Whitcomb has written an exciting and thrilling story of one of the most dramatic events of the war in "Escape from Corregidor." If you want to read a story of incredible bravery and determination don't miss this book.

A very fine picture of life in one of the countries of South America is "Chile Through Embassy Windows, 1939-1953" written by Claude G. Bowers who several years ago gave us "My Mission to Spain." This book adds much to our understanding of Latin America.

National library week called to your attention the importance of reading, we urge you to keep up the habit and truly "Wake Up and Read."

Reach Of Fear Excellent Book

THE REACH OF FEAR, a novel of suspense by D. L. Mathews (Rinehart & Company, $2.95.)

The unseen leading character in this adroit novel is fear itself — black, ugly, destructive fear which seeks into every house in a modern suburban "development" and warps, wrecks — and even kills — as it mushrooms out.

Despite all evidence to the contrary, the neighbors in the little suburban colony are determined to label the murder of thirteen - year - old Bruce Adams the work of a sex fiend. Convinced that a madman is loose among them, they allow fear to possess them and to poison their every action.

Neighbors that rarely spoke before exchange insultes; the local philanderer is flushed into the open; a marriage that has been preserved by patience flies apart; a past that should have remained a secret is tragically exposed.

Against the background of wild emotion, expert police work proceeds sanely and steadily, and, despite the confusion of false charges and misdirected suspicion, the surprising solution is revealed to a shattered community.

In this first novel, Mathews has brilliantly characterized her "development" dwellers and skillfully woven an absorbing story of the impact of murder.

Great Story Of Pope Pius XII

WITNESS OF THE LIGHT By Katherine Burton (Longmans, $4). This is the life story of Pope Pius XII, diplomat, scholar and spiritual leader.

Pope Pius XII is unquestionably one of the most sifinificant and adored men of our time. This biography not only covers in detail the life, thoughts and influence of this religious figure but is a human-interest story as well, replete with illustrations and anecdotes showing the very human, very great Pope Pius XII.

Mrs. Burton shows the Pope growing up in a devout family circle in a Rome torn by the dissensions between the papacy and the new kingdom of Italy. Devoted to the Church as a child, Eugenio Pacelli was ordained a priest in 1899. Then came training as a diplomat during the days of Leo XIII and appointment as under-secretary of state in 1912.

After receiving bishop's orders, Eugenio Pacelli was named nuncio to Bavaria during World War I. In spite of the troubled times and troubled conditions he concluded concordats with Bavaria, Prussia and later with Germany. Cardinal in 1929, papal secretary of state in 1930, he made trips to South America and the United States where he began his friendship with Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Cardinal Pacelli, elected Pope in 1939, took the name of his illustrious predecessor, Pius XI. A man of peace, Pope Pius XII strove to prevent World War II and worked constantly for peace during the conflict. Sponsoring a vigorous program for prisoners, at the war's end the Pope's heart went out to the many destitute and displaced persons and he worked hard and effectively for them. Speaking out against the tyranny of states over individuals and families, Pope Pius XII, a great leader of Catholic and Christian thought and teaching, has striven constantly for the betterment of the human race.

Love Story In Old France

UNDER THE WINTER MOON A love story set against the background of Medieval France and the first crusade by Teresa Brooke (Doubleday, $3.95).

" . . . This way," said Anne softly, and Denys followed her through the trees until they came to a sunlit clearing. A fallen trunk lay spread across the knee deep grass. Bees and crickets were clamoring among the bluebells and foxgloves.

"They call this the Elfin Glade," said Anne dreamily. 'Shall we rest a bit?" . . . She felt a moment of panic as he sat down beside her.

"God protect me," she thought hurriedly. "What on earth am I doing?" She caught her breath. The sense of that radiant young flesh close beside her left her with a feeling of vertigo: it was like standing on the edge of a cliff.

Then she said to herself calmly: "Never mind. Let come what may."

In a tiny woodland glade, dappled with sunlight, garlanded with flowers, a beautiful woman and her young lover found a few fleeting hours of happiness.

But for Lady Anne of Mezieres and Denys de Seconnet that happiness was to become as remote as a dimly remembered dream. There in that secluded hideaway they killed Geoffrey of Mezieres, who, as Anne's husband, had been the only obstacle to their love. Yet Geoffrey's death was to drive them still farther apart —Denys to do penance on a crusade to the Holy Land, and Anne to wait for his return until that day when she could bear their separation no longer and set - out herself to look for him.

Under the Winter Moon is an extraordinary story, as delicate as a tapestry, as passionate and direct as a ballad. Here is the pageantry and color of medievel France —a land of faith and poetry, sorcery and passion, recreated by a sensitive, gifted new writer.

Fine Dish Of Hughes, Some 500-Odd Pages

THE LANGSTON HUGHES READER. Braziller. $5.95.

This is a fine rich dish of Hughes — 500 pages from his voluminous writings, poems dated as early as 1926, short stories, some translations from French, some of the "Simple" pieces, some plays, speeches and autobiography.

There are many explanations for Hughes' popularity, such as his sure knack for telling a story, his ability to get five - syllable thoughts into one - syllable words. But best of all, I think, is the wonderful light touch; who is more serious among our writers, and who makes us enjoy it so much?

Al Smith And His America Is Top Work

AL SMITH AND HIS AMERICA. By Oscar Handlin. Library of American Biography —Little, Brown: $350.

Editor Handlin becoming happily author Handlin for this biography series he directs now does the 18th book in it, and easily one of the best.

Smith's rise on New York's East Side, his practical direct education at rallies, party meetings and legislative sessions, the development and growth of his liberalism, his willingness to compromise on little things but his admirable devotion to principle, his popular governorship, his campaign for the presidency and the fierce debate on the Catholic issue, his declining years with the rival Roosevelt the leader of party and nation — all this, short though the book is, comes through these pages with a fresh and foreceful significance.

The 3-cent U. S. International Geophysical Year commemorative will be placed on sale May 31 in Chicago. The design is based on a photograph of the sun and shows an area of intense solar activity. This phenomenon is being studied during the International Geophysical Year.

Superimposed above the solar disc is a portion of Michaelangelo's famous fresco "The Creation of Adam." Ervine Metzl is the stamp designer.

The new commemorative will be released in conjunction with Chicago's "Compex 1958" exhibition.

Stamp collectors desiring first day cancellations may send their addressed envelopes, together with money orders to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to Postmaster, Chicago 7, Ill.

The outside envelope should be endorsed "First Day Cover Geophysical Year Stamp."

The first day sale of the Forest Conservation commemorative stamp on Oct. 27 will be transferred from Washington, D. C., to Tuscon, Ariz.

OCCASIONAL HIT

British Theater Group Is Courting Failure

By NORMAN MOSS

LONDON (AP) — In the hotly competitive world of the London commercial theater, the English Stage Company is unique. It wants to make a lot of money to lose.

Operating away from London's bright lights center (a sort of British off - broadway), it has constantly run in the red by unswervingly following a policy of promoting new talent, new ideas and new trends in the drama.

It has been interested in harbingers more than hits, in serious purpose more than sell - outs. This policy has won it the accolade from one critic as the most influential theater group in Britain.

But when the red ink threatens to drown out the brave venture, the company reaches into a constantly changing repertoire and sends a likely looking production into the commerical theater for a fee. Often enough for survival, the emigrant scores a smash and the money comes rolling back from London's fashionable West End Theater, even from New York's Broadway.

The mainspring behind the success of the English Stage Company is George Devine, its shaggy - haired artistic director.

'The modern theater in this country bears almost no relation to modern life," he complained recently. "Look at it! How often do you see the moods of life today reflected in the theater?

"Compared with modern painting, modern music or modern poetry, our theater is like an old lady in a sunbonnet."

The English Stage Company was informed two years ago to combat this state of affairs. It took over the Royal Court Theater in Chelsea, a 485-seat playhouse with an illustrious history —the first plays of Bernard Shaw and Hendrik Ibsen were presented there to shocked and divided Edwardian audiences.

Rocket to Fame

Almost immediately the English Stage Company dropped a bombshell into British drama in the form of John Osborne. The 28-year-old playwright rapidly became the archetype of the "angry young man" currently raising the temperature of British letters.

The Royal Court put on his youthul, tempestuous and tormented "Look Back in Anger," rocketing him to fame. It is now packing a New York theater.

Sir Laurence Olivier saw "Look Back in Anger" and met the rebellious author in the theater lounge. "Wish you'd write a play for me to act in," he remarked over a drink.

The result was "The Entertainer," in which Sir Laurence played a bawdy, broken - down vaudevillian. He received only a fraction of his usual salary when the play was presented at the Royal Court.

Later "The Entertainer" was moved to a West End theater. Sir Laurence is now playing the role on Broadway, in the same production by the 28-year-old director, Tony Richardson.

Venturesome Trials

The English Stage Company has introduced some new American drama to Britain. A notable success was the much - praised play by the Nobel prize winner, William Faulkner, "Requiem for a Nun."

Another was the Broadway success, "A Member of the Wedding," by Carson McCullers.

The company stirred up controversy with a comedy mocking religion called "The Making of Moo," and with the works of the French dramatist Eugene Ionesco. The French playwright, who believes true communication is impossible, wrote a play for two characters and 24 chairs. This also went to New York via the Royal Court.

The Royal Court is a theater center as well as a playhouse. Young writers sending in their plays — and the company receives 30 a week — are encouraged or counselled.

So that aspiring dramatists can have more contact with the live theater, Devine has instituted a "writer's pass" which he gives to a chosen few. This gives the holder free run of the theatre, front-of-the-backstage.

In its first eight months, the company won the applause of the press and playgoers — and lost $23,000. This was a success it could not afford for long.

Money to Lose

Then the directors saw an opportunity to transfer some of its productions which had caught on with a large public to commercial theaters, at a profit. The first of these was not a new play at all, but a revival of a 17th century sex comedy called "The Country Wife," which later also transferred to New York.

"In transfers, I went out strictly for money," Devine says.

'We were having a hard time financially. I didn't want to have to choose plays here because they were going to pay. If I started doing that, there would be no point in our being here.

"So I said, 'Okay, let's make money in the West End and in New York. Let's make enough money there to lose here in Chelsea.'

"And that's what we've been doing."

TV notes

Barbara Bel Geddes and John Kerr will co - star in the April 10 "Playhouse 90" drama, "Rumors of Evening." It is a World War II story by F. E. Durkee Jr. about a love affair between an American pilot and an English girl.

The TV version of Victor Herbert's musical, "The Red Mill," will employ two narrators when presented on CBS April 19. Harpo Marx will be one of them but that doesn't mean he will talk at long last in a public performance. His "narration" will be through the harp, with little Evelyn ("Eloise") Rudie "translating" for him.

"Playhouse 90" for April 17 will offer Elizabeth Montgomery, Robert Middleton, Henry Hull, James Drury, Franchot Tone and Eva Le Gallienne in a filmed drama called "Bitter Heritage." The story is about community antagonism to Jesse James Jr. when he returns to the Kansas town where he was born. The former title of the work was "The Brand of Jesse James."

April 7-11 NBC's "Today" program will offer a week - long series entitled "The Threshold Years," devoted to the teenager. Dave Garroway will be in charge, as usual. Most of the series will be live, although some film will be used.

NBC's "Tic Tac Dough" is going to have a German counterpart over the Munich station beginning April 15. It will be called "Tick-Tack."

"Public Prosecutor," to be done on "U. S. Steel Hour" April 23, is a stage play produced in Britain and has been acquired by the Theater Guild for Broadway next season. Apparently the Guild wants to give it a pre - tryout tryout.

The very attractive and young Ann Helm, who won admiration from the critics when "Cloud Seven" played briefly on the Broadway stage this season, will have the title role in "The Sleeping Beauty" when it is done at a date still to be determined on NBC's "Shirley Temple's Storybook" program. This one will be on film.

The first show of the new "No Warning" series, to bow on NBC April 6 at 7:30 p. m. will be "Ashley and Son" and will star Everett Sloane.

"Kraft Television Theater" will do a two - parter in May. It will be a dramatization of Robert Penn Warren's novel, "All the King's Men." The first half will be seen May 7, the second on May 14.

SWEEPS AWARDS

Color Importance In Film Noted

The importance of color in motion picture production was demonstrated by the 30th annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

For the second time in two years, the "best picture" award went to a Technicolor picture.

Of the 21 production awards, 13 went to Technicolor pictures.

"The Bridge on the River Kwai (Horizon Pictures, Columbia), Technicolor, was voted "the best picture" of 1957. "Around the World in 80 Days" (United Artists, Michael Todd), Technicolor, won the "best picture" award for 1956.

"The Bridge on the River Kwai" won six awards in addition to the "best production" designation: actor, director, screen play, cinematography, film editing and music scoring.

A Technirama - Technicolor picture, "Sayonara" (William Goetz, Warners), took five awards: supporting actor, supporting actress, sound recording, art direction and set decoration.

The award for the best live action short subject went to "The Wetback Hound" (Disney, Buena Vista), a Technicolor picture.

The domination of color was also strongly illustrated by the award nominations.

In the fields of cinematography, costume design and art direction, all the nominations were in color. For cinematography, Technicolor pictures won three of the five nominations: "Bridge on the River Kwai," "Sayonara" and "Funny Face"; for costume design there were three Technicolor nominations: "Funny Face," "Pal Joey" and "Raintree County"; for art direction, four of the nominations were Technicolor: "Funny Face," "Pal Joey," "Raintree County" and "Sayonara."

Color pictures took, four of the five nominations for the best film editing. All were Technicolor pictures: "Bridge on the River Kwai," "Gunfight at the O. K. Corral," "Pal Joey" and "Sayonara."

Color's outstanding role in motion picture production is illustrated by polls and statistics from both boxoffice and artistic standpoints.

Variety's "top grossers of 1957" placed a Technicolor picture, "The Ten Commandments" (Paramount, DeMille) at the top of the list.

Film Daily's critics' poll for the past year gave first place to the Technicolor "Around the World in 80 Days." This picture also won the critics' poll of the Canadian Film Weekly.

Memories Made Of Many Things

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

Municipal memories are made of this:

A cannon on the courthouse lawn.

A Victorian horror of a house that people have somehow learned to love.

A pleasant little park where Gen. Grant once sunned himself.

A bird-specked statue, ugly and old, of some forgotten warrior or philanthropist, rendered nameless and featureless by wind and rain. It's lovely, nontheless, because it has stood in the same square for 75 years and Keokuk or Lansing would never be the same without it.

Man constantly strides into the future with the past tugging at his shoulder.

In the name of progress, he throws up skyscrapers of aluminum and glass, girds the hills with multilaned highways and paves the town common for a much needed parking lot.

But deep in his heart, where the fires of memory are ranked against progress, he mourns the gloomy granite post office that bowed down before the skyscraper, the cheery red barns that caught the morning sun before the new road went through, the frail spring flowers that will never push their heads through the tons of macadam on the covered-over common.

Sometimes, when change comes too rapidly and too frequently, when new sights threaten to rob old eyes of the familiar and nastalgic, man -- and more often woman — fights back. With fire in his eye and a lump in his throat, he marches down to City Hall or the state house and demands, pleads, prays that the favored old landmark be spared.

Woe unto the politican or city planner who fails to hear this prayer.

All over America this week, while jack hammers and bulldozers were pounding out a martial air of progress, man was at war with the future, angrily wrestling with official conscience to hold back the hands of time.

In Detroit, irate citizens ignored the adage that you can't fight City Hall and battled nobly to save theirs, an 86-year-old imitation French renaissance structure that Mayor Louis Miriani wanted to raze and replace with a park and underground garage.

"The sooner they tear down that old eyesore the better," argued Executive Vice President Harvey J. Campbell of the Greater Detroit Board of Commerce.

Both reckoned without the lovers of antiquity. When the uproar subsided, the 10-ton clock in the central tower of the old City Hall still smiled down on Cadillac Square and the mayor had to admit all plans were "in a most nebulous state."

Chicagoans demonstrated a delayed affection for Robie House, architect Frank Lloyd Wright's first venture into modern design which they denounced as unsightly 50 years ago. Now owned by Chicago Theological Seminary, it was to have been demolished to make room for married students' quarters until the hue and cry went up. A nine-man mayor's commission, headed by President Danier Catton Rich of the Art Institute of Chicago, was hastily formed to save this and other architectural landmarks in the city that claimed the world's first skyscraper and boasts some of the finest works of Louis Sullivan, Wright's predecessor and teacher.

In the prairie city of Fargo, N.D., the Pioneer Daughters and the Daughters of the American Revolution marched on the City Commission in behalf of a grassy, tree studded park, embracing a small pond, which surrounds the Northern Pacific depot. Merchants wanted it for a downtown parking lot.

"If business requires that we forget about old times, then go ahead and have a big city," snapped 92-year-old Mrs. Bella Webster, who recalled that Gen. Grant once stopped and enjoyed the park. Another senior citizen mentioned a seldom filled parking lot just a few blocks away and admonished city fathers: "If some of you men walked more, you wouldn't die so fast."

Los Angeles, which rebuilt Rome in a day and burned Atlanta on its movie sets, finally stirred itself to preserve and restore the Plaza area with its historic Olvera St. where the city was founded and christened by a little band of Spanish soldiers and friars in 1781.

A nationwide Associated Press survey turned up hundreds of examples of cities and towns struggling to save historic landmarks from the ravages of time and to maintain venerable, picturesque neighborhoods against the encroachments of parking lots, supermarkets, apartment houses and other unpretty but prosperous signs of progress.

New Yorkers worried about holding the line against time in arty Washington Square and fashionable Brooklyn Heights. Richmond took steps to protect its surviving 600 ante-bellum homes, after losing almost that many since the end of World War II.

Baltimore was embroiled once again in a struggle to keep a highway from encroaching on its famed "Pastel Block," a slum area that suddenly blossomed into an art colony when an artist redid one of the ramshackle homes in gaudy colors and other followed suit.

Tension prevailed in Tombstone, Ariz., over pizza houses and motels popping up amid restored frontier buildings.

An organization called Nature Conservancy went to bat to preserve the as yet unmarred wilderness of 16-acre dome island in Upstate New York's Lake George as a sanctuary for animal and plant life. In previous battles, Nature Conservancy helped save a bog in Connecticut, a swamp in Michigan, a forest in Pennsylvania and a great chasm, overhung with hoary hemlocks, in New York's suburban Westchester County.

Other societies and associations fought to preserve the red bricked purity of Boston's Beacon Hill, the lacy iron grillwork in New Orleans' famed French Quarter, the covered bridges of New Hampshire, Vermont and several other states, the old mansions of Rochester, N.Y., Charleston, S.C., and Annapolis, Md., the old plantation homes along the Mississippi River, the adobe architecture of old Santa Fe.

The Connecticut Antiquarian and Landmarks Society completed rehabilitation of Joshua Hamstead residence, where Nathan Hale left his silver shoebuckles and his watch before heading off on his fateful mission.

Washington, D. C., always conscious of its historical heritage, is inflamed over a proposal to tear down Alva Belmont House for a senatorial parking lot.

Nobody knows just how historic the house is. But all agree it stands on property that belonged to Lord Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore, and that from it land was taken to build the U.S. capitol.

Texans went to court to save Austin's "Honeymoon House," where William Sidney Porter, better known as O. Henry, took his bride. But the weather-beaten old homestead mysteriously burned one night and the legal point was rendered moot.

Successful in keeping "Old Betsy," a War of 1812 cannon, on the lawn of the Fremont, Ohio, public library, 80-year-old retired druggist B. B. Smith now keeps a watchful eye on the home of President Rutherford B. Hayes. It's no trouble, really. Smith's home is right across the street.

In rubber bridge scarcely any consideration is given to the gaining of the odd 20 or 30 points by the way of overtricks on undoubled contracts.

In match play duplicate, however, it is little comfort to make three no trump when every one else in the competition is scoring four or five. Obtaining the low score in this manner has precisely the same effect as though you had been defeated in your contract

The safety play, therefore, in that form of competition, is not given its fullest scope. The contract must at times be risked in an effort to make overtricks when the chances of success are very good. Today's hand provides an interesting study in contrasting attitudes between rubber bridge and duplicate play.

The queen of spades was opened and taken by the king. Obviously, diamonds must be attacked, and the two of diamonds was led. West followed with the eight. At rubber bridge declarer can obtain complete insurance coverage for his contract. The hand can be lost only if all four diamonds are in the same hand.

Since West might have them all, the surefire play is to permit the eight of diamonds to hold the trick. If East follows, the suit must break. If East shows out, the finesse of the jack is taken the next round and the rest of the suit run. Note that the semi-safety play of the jack of diamonds will not succeed in this case. On that play only three tricks can be cashed.

At match play, where overtricks are a prime consideration, declarer can hardly afford the deep safety play. Obviously, even though nine diamonds are held, the play for the break must not be made, since if the queen fails to drop, declarer winds up with practically no tricks at all. The sound play at duplicate is the jack of diamonds on the first round. This will lose only when all four diamonds are held by West. On the other hand, it will gain an extra trick where West holds the queen of diamonds twice guarded.

Memories Made Of Many Things

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

Municipal memories are made of this:

A cannon on the courthouse lawn.

A Victorian horror of a house that people have somehow learned to love.

A pleasant little park where Gen. Grant once sunned himself.

A bird-specked statue, ugly and old, of some forgotten warrior or philanthropist, rendered nameless and featureless by wind and rain. It's lovely, nontheless, because it has stood in the same square for 75 years and Keokuk or Lansing would never be the same without it.

Man constantly strides into the future with the past tugging at his shoulder.

In the name of progress, he throws up skyscrapers of aluminum and glass, girds the hills with multilaned highways and paves the town common for a much needed parking lot.

But deep in his heart, where the fires of memory are ranked against progress, he mourns the gloomy granite post office that bowed down before the skyscraper, the cheery red barns that caught the morning sun before the new road went through, the frail spring flowers that will never push their heads through the tons of macadam on the covered-over common.

Sometimes, when change comes too rapidly and too frequently, when new sights threaten to rob old eyes of the familiar and nastalgic, man — and more often woman — fights back. With fire in his eye and a lump in his throat, he marches down to City Hall or the state house and demands, pleads, prays that the favored old landmark be spared.

Woe unto the politican or city planner who fails to hear this prayer.

All over America this week, while jack hammers and bulldozers were pounding out a martial air of progress, man was at war with the future, angrily wrestling with official conscience to hold back the hands of time.

In Detroit, irate citizens ignored the adage that you can't fight City Hall and battled nobly to save theirs, an 86-year-old imitation French renaissance structure that Mayor Louis Miriani wanted to raze and replace with a park and underground garage.

"The sooner they tear down that old eyesore the better," argued Executive Vice President Harvey J. Campbell of the Greater Detroit Board of Commerce.

Both reckoned without the lovers of antiquity. When the uproar subsided, the 10-ton clock in the central tower of the old City Hall still smiled down on Cadillac Square and the mayor had to admit all plans were "in a most nebulous state."

Chicagoans demonstrated a delayed affection for Robie House, architect Frank Lloyd Wright's first venture into modern design which they denounced as unsightly 50 years ago. Now owned by Chicago Theological Seminary, it was to have been demolished to make room for married students' quarters until the hue and cry went up. A nine-man mayor's commission, headed by President Danier Catton Rich of the Art Institute of Chicago, was hastily formed to save this and other architectural landmarks in the city that claimed the world's first skyscraper and boasts some of the finest works of Louis Sullivan, Wright's predecessor and teacher.

In the prairie city of Fargo, N.D., the Pioneer Daughters and the Daughters of the American Revolution marched on the City Commission in behalf of a grassy, tree studded park, embracing a small pond, which surrounds the Northern Pacific depot. Merchants wanted it for a downtown parking lot.

"If business requires that we forget about old times, then go ahead and have a big city," snapped 92-year-old Mrs. Bella Webster, who recalled that Gen. Grant once stopped and enjoyed the park. Another senior citizen mentioned a seldom filled parking lot just a few blocks away and admonished city fathers: "If some of you men walked more, you wouldn't die so fast."

SWEEPS AWARDS

Color Importance In Film Noted

The importance of color in motion picture production was demonstrated by the 30th annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

For the second time in two years, the "best picture" award went to a Technicolor picture.

Of the 21 production awards, 13 went to Technicolor pictures.

"The Bridge on the River Kwai (Horizon Pictures, Columbia), Technicolor, was voted "the best picture" of 1957. "Around the World in 80 Days" (United Artists, Michael Todd), Technicolor, won the "best picture" award for 1956.

"The Bridge on the River Kwai" won six awards in addition to the "best production" designation: actor, director, screen play, cinematography, film editing and music scoring.

A Technirama - Technicolor picture, "Sayonara" (William Goetz, Warners), took five awards: supporting actor, supporting actress, sound recording, art direction and set decoration.

The award for the best live action short subject went to "The Wetback Hound" (Disney, Buena Vista), a Technicolor picture.

The domination of color was also strongly illustrated by the award nominations.

In the fields of cinematography, costume design and art direction, all the nominations were in color. For cinematography, Technicolor pictures won three of the five nominations: "Bridge on the River Kwai," "Sayonara" and "Funny Face"; for costume design there were three Technicolor nominations: "Funny Face," "Pal Joey" and "Raintree County"; for art direction, four of the nominations were Technicolor: "Funny Face," "Pal Joey," "Raintree County" and "Sayonara."

Color pictures took, four of the five nominations for the best film editing. All were Technicolor pictures: "Bridge on the River Kwai," "Gunfight at the O. K. Corral," "Pal Joey" and "Sayonara."

Color's outstanding role in motion picture production is illustrated by polls and statistics from both boxoffice and artistic standpoints.

Variety's "top grossers of 1957" placed a Technicolor picture, "The Ten Commandments" (Paramount, DeMille) at the top of the list.

Film Daily's critics' poll for the past year gave first place to the Technicolor "Around the World in 80 Days." This picture also won the critics' poll of the Canadian Film Weekly.

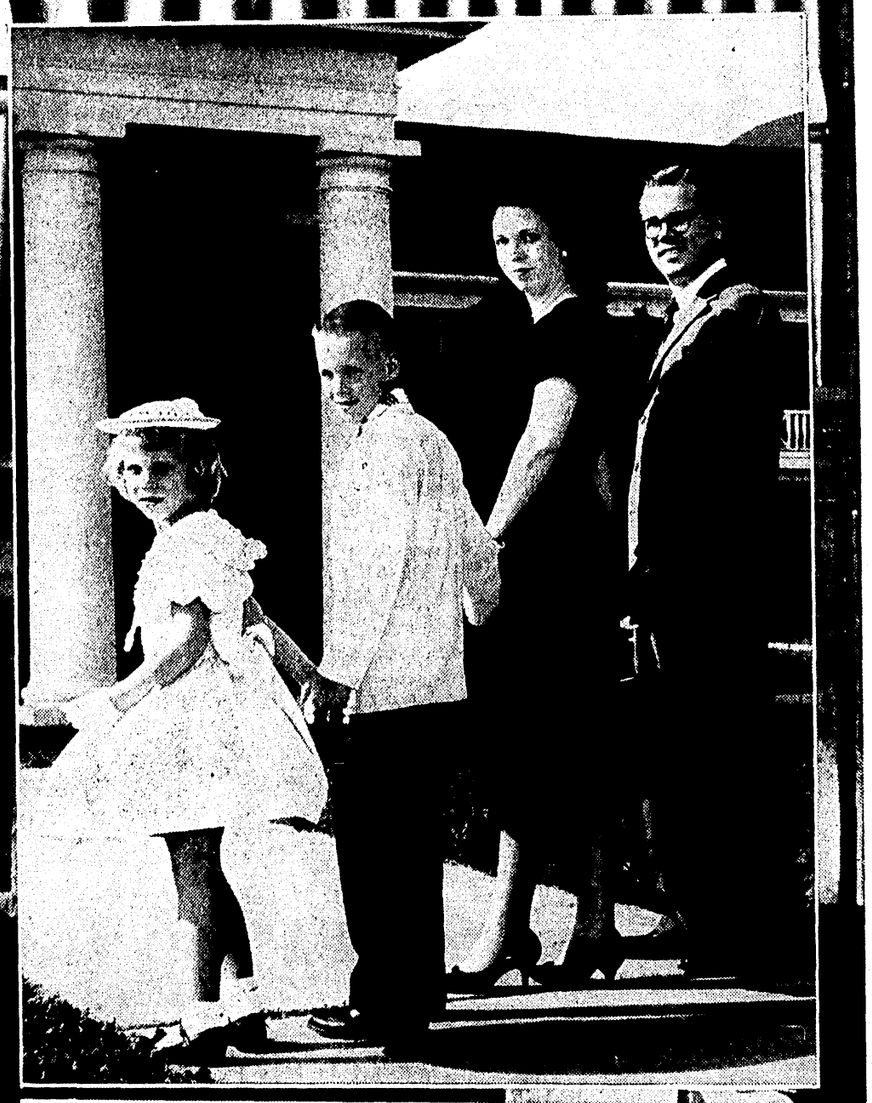
By, for, and about WOMEN

Monroe Morning World
April 6, 1958

Big plans are in the making, as the families of our community enjoy to the fullest this very special day. The W. J. Riley Jrs. with children, left to right, Bill, Pattie and Paul, prepare to leave for early Mass, with the traditional Easter egg hunt planned later in the day.

Family worship in the true spirit of Christ is one of the basis of our religions. The Paul C. Betts with children, Paula, Stephen and Bruce, are shown at the altar.

Another familiar scene that will be seen today, will be the family group leaving the church, after a morning of worship. Pictured here are the Leo F. Terzia Jrs. with children, Cynthia, and Buddy.



Many family scenes, such as this one of the J. A. Foucetts with children, left, Leslie and Jimmy, about to enter church for Easter Sunday Service, will be seen throughout our city this morning.

The marriage of Miss Pamela Catherine Dexheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dexheimer of Somerset, Kentucky to Mr. William Barlow Inabnet Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow Inabnet of Monroe, Louisiana, was solemnized at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening in the First Christian Church at Somerset.

The Rev. Lee Davis Fisher officiated. Preceding the ceremony a program of nuptial music, including the traditional wedding marches, was presented by Miss Ouida Ann Farmer, organist, and Mr. William H. Ramsey III, soloist. Mr. Ramsey sang "I Love Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The altar was banked with ferns, interspersed with tall baskets of white gladioli and tapers in cathedral candelabra. The vows were exchanged beneath an arch entwined with southern smilax, white satin ribbon and white chrysanthemums. The family pews were marked with clusters of white chrysanthemums and white satin bows.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a Bianchi original gown of French silk-taffeta with Alencon lace. The yoke of lace and cap sleeves were re-embroidered with seed pearls and sequins. She wore a circlet of white flowers in her hair, and carried a cascade bouquet of white flowers with satin streamers.

Miss Jane Graybeal, Los Angeles, Miss Euphemia Patton of Somerset and Miss Ann Marie Gandolfo of New Orleans, were bridesmaids. They wore emerald green taffeta dresses and circlets of flowers similar to the honor attendant's. Their cascade bouquets of white flowers were tied with satin streamers in contrasting shades of green.

Dexheimer, Vallejo, Calif., brother of the bride; James E. Weilbaecher, New Orleans, La.; Glynne Couvillion and Walter Cockerham, Baton Rouge, La.; and Larry K. Page, Rayville, La.

A reception was held immediately folloing the ceremony in the crystal ballroom at the Hotel Beecher. Decorating Tips

A few fundamentals and do-it-yourself decorating can be simple and rewarding. You can have all the fun of planning and executing a home with none of the expense -- and the ideas will be your very own. But before you decide on contemporary or colonial or provincial, before you jump in where angels fear to tread, consider these suggestions:

Large rooms — bold wallpaper designs and striking colors can be used successfully in a large room and add to its coziness. If a spacious effect is desired, plain - color walls and plain fabrics are by far the best.

Small rooms — Use only one or two colors in the room, and plain fabric and rug. Busy patterns make a small room tiny.

Narrow rooms — A stripe on the floor — either a rug or vinyl tile — running across the width of the room will create the optical illusion of more space. A striated pattern will do the same job. The fewer the colors in a small or narrow room the better.

Dual - purpose rooms — If the need is to make one room do the work of two, paint walls two different colors. For example, a dining area can be set off from a kitchen by using darker walls and floor in the dining section, lighter walls and flooring in the kitchen.

Kitchens and bathrooms — If small, paint one wall a bright shade, the other three walls a neutral color. If you are selecting flooring, choose something cheerful.

Dark areas and sunless rooms— Light colors do wonders for dark hallways; shades of red and yellow are especially good in a room with a northern exposure.

Sunny rooms — Your home may have all - season air conditioning, but if the sun streams in making rooms look hot, use off shades of blue and green.

Hard-frozen roasts are said to need about one-third to one-half again as much cooking time per pound as do corresponding fresh roasts.

Miss Virginia Pohlman, J. M. Edminston Jr. Exchange March Vows

St. Pascal's Catholic Church in West Monroe was the scene of an informal afternoon ceremony on March 14, which united in marriage Virginia Marie Pohlman and Madison Edmiston of West Monroe. The Reverend Father Vitus Daschansky officiated at the double ring ceremony, before a background of altar baskets filled with gladioli, stock and fern.

MRS. JAMES MADISON EDMISTON

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a princess styled pale blue sheer, fashioned with an insert of lace on the bodice and caught with a bow in the back which fell to the hemline. She wore a matching feather capulet and carried a white orchid encircled with maline and white satin streamers mounded on a white Prayer Book.

Accompanying the bride to the altar were Miss Patricia Graham of Monroe and Miss Kay McMillan of West Monroe. They wore dresses of deeper hues of blue.

Serving the groom as best man was Edward J. Pohlman III, the brother of the bride, with Ronny Gallian as groomsman and Lawrence McCarthy Jr. as usher.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents at 1612 Lexington Avenue. The bride's table was overlaid with a white linen cut work cloth and bore the crystal punch service at one end. Placed at the opposite end of the table was the three tiered pink wedding confection, which was encircled with white camellias. Mrs. Jerry Johnston served the cake, while Mrs. Joe Haddad and Mrs. L. J. Carter alternated at the punch service. Miss Betty Rose Haddad presided at the guest book.

The bride chose for her wedding trip to New Orleans, a rose printed dress and matching linen coat ensemble, accented by her bridal orchid, with black accessories. The couple now resides at 201 E. Arizona Avenue, Ruston.

What could be more suitable than dogwood in full bloom for Easter? The lovely tree seems to come out a little earlier on the south of town and move north, with even a few blocks making a difference in timing. There's a dogwood in the library yard on Jackson street which bloomed nearly a week before the one at the corner of North Third and Arkansas—surely one of Monroe's chief glories, that tree. . . . In the little park on Pargoud Boulevard, where some gardener with rare imagination planted a white and pink dogwood together, the white blooms are just at their height, and the pink branches will come out within the week. . . . Not dogwood, but lovely, is the unbelievably pink tree in the DEWITT MOORE yard on Downey Lane.

Monroyans traveling and visitors coming are keeping the social calendar filled. The JIM SPARKS sailed Wednesday on the Queen Elizabeth for a five weeks tour of Europe. About thirty couples gathered before their departure at a farewell party hosted by the KINK STUBBS. Decorations were hyacinths and other spring flowers used with Easter eggs. . . . A spring bouquet, also, to LILY THOMPSON who will be looking after her grandsons, JIM and TOMMY SPARKS, while their parents are gone.

NANCY SCHMID of Birmingham is the guest of HELEN THEUS during the Easter recess of the University of Alabama. . . . Home from Newcomb are ANN JARRELL and DIANA CUTLER. . . . Not coming home for Easter is SUE STUBBS. This lucky lassie flew from Sweetbriar to Bermuda for College Week. The JIM EWINGS have as their guest Leila's mother, MRS. W. M. LANE of Jacksonville, Fla. She will be here about three weeks. . . . MRS. T. L. M'COY of Corpus Christi, Tex., is visiting the N. J. MOORES on Stubbs avenue. . . . SYDNIE and ARTHUR SMITH are spending the Easter week end in Baton Rouge as the guests of relatives there. . . . MRS. F. J. BRENNAN is in Oceanside, Calif., visiting LT. and MRS. ERWIN WARD. Mrs. Ward, of course, is the former Dorothy Brennan.

Twenty - one Monroe ladies went to Baton Rouge last week for the festivities in connection with the state flower show, lasting from Friday until Sunday. They attended tours, luncheons, and breakfasts. At the banquet Saturday night, special awards were presented to MRS. NORMAN JARDINE and MRS. JOHN M'CARTER.

Outstanding spring parties every year are the flyer shoots held at the Bancroft Camp. Sportsmen from near and far attend the all-day affair, which is followed by a barbecue supper for several hundred persons. Hosts are the TOBY BANCROFTS, SR., the DERWOOD CANNS, the TOBY BANCROFTS, JR., and SPEED BANCROFT. Spring flowers and camellias were used on the three serving tables and on the mantels. The menu included marvelous barbecued chicken, ribs, and beef, and all the trimmings. Vada Bancroft was wearing a white tie silk with pink polka dots and all pink accessories. Joan Bancroft also chose white, printed in yellow roses. . . . JEAN GIFFEN was in the latest black and white checked chemise. . . . NORA MARIE INABNET wore red ribbon knot . . . Lovely in a light blue leather two piece dress was JANE SHERROUSE. . . . Red silk faille was the choice of LENA SCHLOSSER. . . . NODIE THATCHER'S squaw dress was of tangerine georgette with silver braid. . . . MARY FRANCES PERRY wore white wool jersey with fringe. In the group around the record player in one end of the room were CAROL LAYTON PARSONS in a green and aqua warp printed silk. . . . ELEANOR CAMMACK in a beige basket weave linen with matching duster. . . . ZO SNYDER of Winnsboro in green chiffon. . . . and SALLIE OLIVER, wearing a wide black patent belt around the hipline of her checked chemise.

'Twas good to see the MORRIS WRIGHTS in town this week, passing through after their dream cruise to the Caribbean. They made stopovers in Venezuela, Trinidad, and Jamaica . . . They were here to pick up the children and went on to Eunice to spend the weekend with Morris' mother. Next week they will complete the move into their lovely new home, complete with swimming pool, on Bertha Drive in Lake Terrace, New Orleans.

Spied lunching at the Lotus club during the past week were HAZEL JOSEPH of Rayville, in a smart navy and white ensemble; FLORA POTTS with "MRS. MAC" M'WILLIAMS of Memphis; Mrs. C. P. GRAY, SR.; MRS. WALTER ANDERS in a biege beaded straw cloche; DOT MASUR and ANN GARNER of Dallas; MRS. HENRY BERNSTEIN, SR.; and MRS. SAM SMITH in a green straw hat bound in shaded green chiffon.

LOUISE KLAM says she wants no apples this year, so she did a pink table loaded with sprays of apple blossoms when she and Naj entertained at a small supper party Saturday night. Six couples enjoyed a game dinner of doves with wild rice and asparagus in Hollandaise sauce. Rum cream pie was dessert . . . An Italian dinner with lasagna, green salad, and garlic bread was the fare when the O. C. RODDEYS had three couples in on Friday. Jeannette's cranberry crunch cake with ice cream drew raves . . . Aren't these menus enough to make you hungry? Sherwood Forest was set up in Forsythe Park Friday morning when DEAN FORTENBERRY celebrated his sixth birthday at a Robin Hood party. Fifty children enjoyed the lunch of sandwiches, ice cream, and cake. The Merry Men decorated the cake, and favors were Robin Hood hats, and bow and arrow sc . . . JACKIE MEHL marked her ninth birthday by inviting a group of girl friends to go to the movies. The group returned to the Mehl home for games, cake, and ice cream after the show.

For our Easter poem, here is John Donne's "Holy Sonnet":

Death, be not proud, though some have called thee
Mighty and dreadful, for thou art not so;
For those whom thou think'st thou dost overthrow
Die not, poor Death, nor yet canst thou kill me.
From rest and sleep, which but thy picture be,
Much pleasure; then from thee much more must flow;
And soonest our best men with thee to do —
Rest of their bones and souls' delivery!
Thou', slave to fate, chance, kings, and desperate men,
And dost with poison, war, and sickness dwell;
And po- - - charms can make us sleep as well
And better than thy stroke. Why swell'st thou then?
One short sleep past, we wake eternally,
And Death shall be no more: Death, thou shalt die!

SCRATCHES

Tiny surface scratches can mar the looks of a floor and destroy the well - kept look that every good housekeeper wants to maintain. Use a liquid polishing wax on such marks, and rub the wood with the grain. If the scratches are deep it will be necessary to refinish the floor.

Miss Virginia Pohlman, J. M. Edminston Jr. Exchange March Vows

St. Pascal's Catholic Church in West Monroe was the scene of an informal afternoon ceremony on March 14, which united in marriage Virginia Marie Pohlman and James Madison Edmiston Jr. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Pohlman Jr. and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Madison Edmiston of West Monroe. The Reverend Father Vitus Duschinsky officiated at the double ring ceremony, before a background of altar baskets filled with gladioli, stock and fern.

MRS. JAMES MADISON EDMISTON

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a princess styled pale blue sheer, fashioned with an insert of lace on the bodice and caught with a bow in the back which fell to the hemline. She wore a matching feather capulet and carried a white orchid encircled with maline and white satin streamers mounded on a white Prayer Book.

Accompanying the bride to the altar were Miss Patricia Graham of Monroe and Miss Kay McMillan of West Monroe. They wore dresses of deeper hues of blue.

Serving the groom as best man was Edward J. Pohlman III, the brother of the bride, with Ronny Gallian as groomsman and Lawrence McCarthy Jr. as usher.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents at 1612 Lexington Avenue. The bride's table was overlaid with a white linen cut work cloth and bore the crystal punch service at one end. Placed at the opposite end of the table was the three tiered pink wedding confection, which was encircled with white camellias. Mrs. Jerry Johnston served the cake, while Mrs. Joe Haddad and Mrs. L. J. Carter alternated at the punch service. Miss Betty Rose Haddad presided at the guest book.

The bride chose for her wedding trip to New Orleans, a rose printed dress and matching linen coat ensemble, accented by her bridal orchid, with black accessories. The couple now resides at 201 E. Arizona Avenue, Ruston.

MILK STAINS

If someone spills milk on your well kept floor, don't cry over it, wipe it up immediately. If liquid milk products are allowed to remain on a lacquered or varnished surface any length of time permanent damage can result. An easy-to-use product which comes packaged in a tube can be used to remove such stains. Squeeze a little on a clean soft cloth folded into a pad and nnapply to the stain. Let it stand a minute then rub with the grain of the wood.

LIQUID WAX

A liquid wax that cleans as it polishes will remove marks caused by rubber heels, composition casters, chrome furniture and crayons. If the spots are a little stubborn rub them with fine steel wool.

FOR CORK FLOORS

One of the first things to do with a new cork floor is to determine whether it has been pre-finished by the manufacturer. If so, it can be maintained with a self-polishing wax or a liquid or paste polishing wax. If the floor has not been pre-finished, then it must be sealed before it can be maintained with wax.

Even efficient housekeepers sometimes forget to clean the spouts of teapots. Keep a package of pipe cleaners handy in a cabinet drawer for this important task. Rinse the teapot, insert a doubled pipe cleaner in the spout and carefully turn to remove tannin stains. You may have to do this once more but this method usually leaves the spout spotlessly clean.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD JOE RUNNELS

A Candlelight Ceremony Unites O. Grove Couple

Of interest in Oak Grove was a candlelight wedding of Miss Peggie Joyce Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. J. B. Hamilton of Kilbourne, to Richard Joe Runnels son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Runnels of Bodcau, Ark., at 7 p. m. in the Omega Baptist Church.

The wedding vows were exchanged before a background of greenery, white gladiolas and candelabras holding white tapers. The Reverend Clyde Coulter performed the double ring ceremony.

Miss Kirk Hays, at the piano presented music selections, "Because" and "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina length gown of white lace over silk with a fitted bodice, long sleeves and a full gathered skirt. Her shoulder length veil was attached to a bandeau of white roses with green leaves. She carried a white Bible topped with a corsage of white carnations and Easter lilies.

Miss Jo Ann Hamilton was maid of honor and her sister's only attendant, she wore a ballerina length gown of lavendar net over taffeta.

Chad Gretis was best man. Ushers were James Hamilton, brother of the bride, and Gene Johnson. They also served as candle lighters.

Serving at the reception in the church parlor were: Misses Charlotte and Betty Joyce Lewis. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of daffodils with green candles in single crystal holders.

Miss Jeanell Runnels, sister of the groom, had charge of the bride's book. After a short honeymoon trip the couple are at home in Oak Grove.

MELLOW PATINA

If you want your wood floors to develop a mellow patina similar to that which characterizes a valuable antique, maintain them with a polishing wax. To get the wax well into the wood of a new or newly sanded floor buff the wax into the "raw" wood to which no sealer has been applied. Use an electric polisher for the buffing and give the floor another coat of wax whenever needed.

MISS MARY NELL EAGER'S engagement to Airman Lawrence Ernest Margan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Morgan of Shreveport is announced by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Merwyn A. Eager of Start. The Rev. Joe Mongle will hear the vows at the Start Baptist Church April 15, at six o'clock in the evening.

MRS. THOMAS JOSEPH MARTIN JR.

Miss Dubuisson And T. J. Martin Jr. Pledge Vows In Shreveport Ceremony

The home of Dr. and Mrs. Peachy R. Gilmer on Drexel Drive was the setting last evening for the marriage of their niece, Miss Olive Reily Dubuisson, and Thomas Joseph Martin, Jr., of Lexington, Ky. Her parents are Mrs. William Carmouche Gilmer and the late John Francis Dubuisson of Opelousas and he is the son of Mrs. Thomas Joseph Martin and the late Mr. Martin of New Orleans.

The beautiful home of the Gilmers was bright with flowers and diffused candlelight for this occasion, and while the guests were assembling, Miss Laura Twist played on the harp "I Love Thee" by Grieg, "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, "Interezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana, and Mendelssohn's "Recessional."

Miss Betsy Payne, the bride's cousin, wearing pale topaz silk organdie etched with gold, lighted the white tapers in the tall rosewood pedestal candelabra on each side of the drawing room mantel. These with balanced arrangements of calla lilies and jade leaves and calla lilies and interspersing candles massed on the chests flanking the mantelpiece, formed an altar - like background for the bridal party as they took their places before the Rev. J. Lawrence Plumley, who officiated at the ceremony.

In the entrance hall, twin pier tables held identical French glass vases filled with Madonna lilies and single white cathedral candles under hurricane shades. On the garden room mantel, Chinese vases held tall spikes of yellow gladioli and iris, accentuating the color in this charming room, and in the planter before the large picture window, tropical plants and lilies were a-bloom. Through the window, azaleas in pink and red shades could be glimpsed on the patio side.

First to enter after the bridegroom and his cousin and best man, E. Newton Kearny of New Orleans, was Miss Rosemary Dubuisson, bridesmaid, followed by Miss Ann Dubuisson, maid of honor, both sisters of the bride. They were lovely in buttercup yellow silk organza, the bouffant barrel-shaped skirts trimmed with large bows at the front hemline. Each carried a bouquet of pale yellow cymbidium orchids.

To the swelling strains of the Bridal Chorus, the bride, on the arm of her father, William Carmouche Gilmer, descended the stairs, her patrician dark-haired beauty enhanced by her gown of pure white silk satin, the long skirt, slim in front, falling from deep released pleats in the back to form a slight train. The bodice was edged at the wide round neckline with Brussels lace embroidered with seed pearls, and her short veil of illusion fell mistily from a pearl-encrusted lace cap. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, centered with a yellow - throated white orchid.

At The Reception

At the reception which followed the ceremony, guests were welcomed at the door by William Gilmer and Mrs. Tinsley Gilmer, who invited them into the drawing room where the hostess received with the feminine members of the bridal party, the mothers of the newly-wed couple and Miss Elizabeth Martin and Miss Stephanie Martin, sisters of the bridegroom. Mrs. William Gilmer's sheath of champagne silk taffeta, with lace-trimmed bodice, was complemented by a corsage of green cymbidium orchids and Mrs. Martin's short lace dress of herb Saint green was worn with a white orchid.

On the polished bride's table in the dining room, the gleam of lighted white tapers in a five-branched silver candelabrum and a crystal and silver epergne of white hyacinths, Dutch iris and sprays of delicate bridal wreath were mirrored in a long footed Georgian reflector at the center. At one end was the wedding ring cake, decorated with miniature molded calla lilies and edged with a ruche of tulle. White tapers also burned in branched candelabra and the same white flowers used in silver champagne coolers on serving tables and commodes the whole a lovely picture against the pale jade color in the French window draperies, with Chinese Tree of Life design. Serving the cake were Mrs. Herbert Castille of Opelousas and Mrs. Francis Payne. Mrs. Vincent Moseley of Opelousas and Mrs. Ford Currier ladled punch on the terrace from a silver bowl on a table centered with wands of white plum blossoms and bridal wreath. Assisting in hostess courtesies were Mrs. E. Rupert Campbell, Miss Martha Means, Miss Louise Lee, and Mrs. Edward J. Seymour Jr.

When later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Martin left on their honeymoon trip, she was wearing a spring - weight wool suit of Wedgewood blue, with small blue hat and navy accessories.

They will be at home in Lexington, Ky.

Household Hints

Colorado State University reports that unironed sheets wear longer than ironed ones. If you prefer sheets ironed, use the proper temperature. Even the mildest scorch greatly weakens cotton.

For crisper celery stalks, float them in cold water in which a teaspoon of sugar has been dissolved.

Don't throw away the wax paper in which bread is wrapped. It will do a slick job of polishing a teakettle or nickel on a stove.

When possible, save time and fuel by cooking vegetables in the bottom of a double boiler while you make the cream sauce for them in the upper pan.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD JOE RUNNELS

A Candlelight Ceremony Unites O. Grove Couple

Of interest in Oak Grove was a candlelight wedding of Miss Peggie Joyce Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. J B. Hamilton of Kilbourne, to Richard Joe Runnels son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Runnels of Eudora, Ark., at 7 p. m. in the Omega Baptist Church.

The wedding vows were exchanged before a background of greenery, white gladiolas and candelabras holding white tapers. The Reverend Clyde Coulter performed the double ring ceremony.

Miss Kirk Hays, at the piano presented music selections, "Because" and "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina length gown of white lace over silk with a fitted bodice, long sleeves and a full gathered skirt. Her shoulder length veil was attached to a bandeau of white roses with green leaves. She carried a white Bible topped with a corsage of white carnations and Easter lilies.

Miss Jo Ann Hamilton was maid of honor and her sister's only attendant, she wore a ballerina length gown of lavendar net over taffeta.

Claud Griffis was best man. Ushers were James Hamilton, brother of the bride, and Gene Johnson. They also served as candle lighters.

Serving at the reception in the church parlor were: Misses Charlotte and Betty Joyce Lewis. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of daffodils with green candles in single crystal holders

Miss Jeanell Runnels, sister of the groom, had charge of the bride's book. After a short honeymoon trip the couple are at home in Oak Grove.

MELLOW PATINA

If you want your wood floors to develop a mellow patina similar to that which characterizes a valuable antique maintain them with a polishing wax. To get the wax well into the wood of a new or newly sanded floor buff the wax into the "raw" wood to which no sealer has been applied. Use an electric polisher for the buffing and give the floor another coat of wax whenever needed.

MISS MARY NELL EAGER'S engagement to A/1c Lawrence Ernest Margan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Morgan of Shreveport is announced by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Merwyn A. Eager of Start. The Rev. Joe Mongle will hear the vows at the Start Baptist Church April 15, at six o'clock in the evening.

MRS. THOMAS JOSEPH MARTIN JR.

Miss Dubuisson And T. J. Martin Jr. Pledge Vows In Shreveport Ceremony

The home of Dr. and Mrs. Peachy R. Gilmer on Drexel Drive was the setting last evening for the marriage of their niece, Miss Olive Reily Dubuisson, and Thomas Joseph Martin, Jr., of Lexington, Ky. Her parents are Mrs. William Carmouche Gilmer and the late John Francis Dubuisson of Opelousas and he is the son of Mrs. Thomas Joseph Martin and the late Mr. Martin of New Orleans.

The beautiful home of the Gilmers was bright with flowers and diffused candlelight for this occasion, and while the guests were assembling, Miss Laura Twist played on the harp "I Love Thee" by Grieg, "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, "Interezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana, and Mendelssohn's "Recessional."

Miss Betsy Payne, the bride's cousin, wearing pale topaz silk organdie etched with gold, lighted the white tapers in the tall rosewood pedestal candelabra on each side of the drawing room mantel. These with balanced arrangements of calla lilies and jade leaves and calla lilies and interspersing candles massed on the chests flanking the mantelpiece, formed an altar - like background for the bridal party as they took their places before the Rev. J. Lawrence Plumley, who officiated at the ceremony.

In the entrance hall, twin pier tables held identical French glass vases filled with Madonna lilies and single white cathedral candles under hurricane shades. On the garden room mantel, Chinese vasesheld tall spikes of yellow gladioli and iris, accentuating the color in this charming room, and in the planter before the large picture window, tropical plants and lilies were a-bloom. Through the window, azaleas in pink and red shades could be glimpsed on the patio side.

First to enter after the bridegroom and his cousin and best man, E. Newton Kearny of New Orleans, was Miss Rosemary Dubuisson, bridesmaid, followed by Miss Ann Dubuisson, maid of honor, both sisters of the bride. They were lovely in buttercup yellow silk organza, the bouffant barrel-shaped skirts trimmed with large bows at the front hemline. Each carried a bouquet of pale yellow cymbidium orchids.

To the swelling strains of the Bridal Chorus, the bride, on the arm of her father, William Carmouche Gilmer, descended the stairs, her patrician dark-haired beauty enhanced by her gown of pure white silk satin, the long skirt, slim in front, falling from deep released pleats in the back to form a slight train. The bodice was edged at the wide round neckline with Brussels lace embroidered with seed pearls, and her short veil of illusion fell mistily from a pearl-encrusted lace cap. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, centered with a yellow - throated white orchid.

At The Reception

At the reception which followed the ceremony, guests were welcomed at the door by William Gilmer and Mrs. Tinsley Gilmer, who invited them into the drawing room where the hostess received with the feminine members of the bridal party, the mothers of the newly-wed couple and Miss Elizabeth Martin and Miss Stephanie Martin, sisters of the bridegroom. Mrs. William Gilmer's sheath of champagne silk taffeta, with lace-trimmed bodice, was complemented by a corsage of green cymbidium orchids and Mrs. Martin's short lace dress of herb Saint green was worn with a white orchid.

On the polished bride's table in the dining room, the gleam of lighted white tapers in a five-branched silver candelabrum and a crystal and silver epergne of white hyacinths, Dutch iris and sprays of delicate bridal - wreath were mirrored in a long footed Georgian reflector at the center. At one end was the wedding ring cake, decorated with miniature molded calla lilies and edged with a ruche of tulle. White tapers also burned in branched candelabra and the same white flowers used in silver champagne coolers on serving tables and commodes the whole a lovely picture against the pale jade color in the French window draperies, with Chinese Tree of Life design. Serving the cake were Mrs. Herbert Castille of Opelousas and Mrs. Francis Payne. Mrs. Vincent Moseley of Opelousas and Mrs Ford Currier ladled punch on the terrace from a silver bowl on a table centered with wands of white plum blossoms and bridal wreath. Assisting in hostess courtesies were Mrs. E. Rupert Campbell, Miss Martha Means, Miss Louise Lee, and Mrs. Edward J. Seymour Jr.

When later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Martin left on their honeymoon trip, she was wearing a spring - weight wool suit of Wedge wood blue, with small blue hat and navy accessories.

They will be at home in Lexington, Ky.

Household Hints

Colorado State University reports that unironed sheets wear longer than ironed ones. If you prefer sheets ironed, use the proper temperature. Even the mildest scorch greatly weakens cotton.

For crisper celery stalks, float them in cold water in which a teaspoon of sugar has been dissolved.

Don't throw away the wax paper in which bread is wrapped. It will do a slick job of polishing a teakettle or nickel on a stove.

When possible, save time and fuel by cooking vegetables in the bottom of a double boiler while you make the cream sauce for them in the upper pan.

Fashionettes

In a season of fashion controversy over the chemise, the famous New York designer, Sophie, has this to say: "Fashion should be changeable—should have newness. But at the same time it must be flattering to the wearer."

"If not flattering," she said, "I don't consider it good fashion.

"It seems to me interesting to note that year after year, the women listed as the best - dressed . . . are those women who have found what is most flattering to them and are consistent in their selection of silhouette. Newness in this instance, being expressed primarily in color, fabric and detail."

"Extremely higher heels and shorter skirts are like oil and water — they just don't mix," says the National Shoe Institute. It called the combination "awkward and unflattering." So, with hemlines going up, the Institute said that heels are going down in height. Favorite for daytime — the slim, mid - heel.

This spring, hats sound more for eating than for wearing.

New shades include orange, lemon and lime, plus such other fruit tones as apricot, peach, pineapple, avocado, watermelon strawberry, and blueberry.

Jewelry fashions are going around in circles. Hoop earrings are back, reports the Fashion Coordination Institute They go well with the deep, head - hugging hats and hairdos which tend to cover most of the ear. The hoops range in size from tiny, delicate circlets to big, gypsy - like bangles.

To make skillets easy to clean, put detergent and a little water in the bottom before starting your dish - washing.

Cleaning Wool Trim On A Leather Jacket

By BETH BLAIR

Choose casual clothes that you wear a lot in fabrics and materials that require but a minimum of care. Even leather is included in the easy - to - care - for category for new finishes make it washable. Check tags before you purchase new items so be sure you can keep them fresh and attractive with little effort. A reader writes:

Dear Miss Blair:

What can be done to clean the knitted wool sleeves and collar of a washable leather jacket. The jacket itself is all right — only the sleeves and collar are soiled.

Treat them as you would any wool sweater. Wash the sleeves and collar in cold water using the powder especially designed for this purpose Follow the directions on the package. When you finish the washing job — lay the jacket on a flat surface on a bath towel and smooth the sleeves and colar back to shape. Do not hang the jacket up while it is wet or the sleeves will stretch out of shape. Do not worry about any water that splashes on the leather. Wipe them off with a soft cloth. Since it is washable it should dry without showing any marks.

Dear Miss Blair:

Several years ago when sailor hats were popular I wore such a style on the back of my heal. I'm nearing forty—could I still wear this style in the same fashion?

More than a few years have passed since you wore the part sailor type hat and you will probably find it more becoming posed straight on your head or just about an inch back of the hairline. Many of the sailor hats in spring collections have high crowns and are worn in this fashion.

Like Russian Dressing on hearts of lettuce and other salads? You can whip it up by mixing a half cup of mayonnaise with a half cup of tomato catchup and adding pimiento-stuffed green olives, chives, parsley, celery (all minced).

Deveined canned shrimp varies in saltiness — so add extra salt to a dish in which the shrimp is used with a careful hand until you've tasted.

Tailors Scorn 'Toreadors' For Women

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Some tailors of America have very clear opinions of the tight-fitting toreador trousers worn by many women.

Some of the sentiments expressed by men attending a recent association meeting:

"When I see them coming, I cross to the other side of the street." — Walter Zank, Lake Worth, Fla.

"Frankly, they look like heck. Horrible. No excuse for them."—H. Glenn McNair, Atlanta, Ga.

"I'm not a straight - laced puritan. But really, they are vulgar. They are a state of undress." — Earl Sattler, Passiac, N. J.

"I like my women dressed like women." — S. Tommaso, Montreal, Canada.

What should women wear?

"Dresses," the tailors agreed.

ASPHALT TILE

If you have an asphalt tile floor use only a self - polishing wax on it. The solvent content in the polishing type of wax will tend to soften the composition of the tile.

Hint to menu-makers: Do not repeat flavors when you plan a meal. If your main course is to be spaghetti with meat balls and tomato sauce, do not include tomatoes in an appetizer or salad. If your dessert is to feature fruit, do not start off with a fruit cup.

Put unsweetened chocolate to be melted in a custard cup, then place the cup in a strainer over a teakettle of boiling water—lid removed from the kettle, of course.

Cooking vegetables in a small amount of water helps keep their fresh flavor. You can cook snap beans that are Frenched, for instance, in one-half cup of boiling water if you use a heavy saucepan and maintain simmering with low heat.

Crack the shells of hard-cooked eggs the moment they are cooked; place the eggs in cold water. This helps in removing the shell.

Entry Form Helpful In Evaluating

Whether your living room trim is chipped or you'd like to install a master switch to control all lights from your bedside, the entry blank for the "How's Your Home?" contest will help you evaluate your home's needs and organize your improvement program.

Ingeniously devised to make family fun out of the homeowner's occasional dilemma, the blank requires thorough examination of the adequacy of everything in, on and around the home — and will provide a basis for undertaking projects most needed in order of their importance.

The blank will also give the entrant dozens of ideas on making his home more comfortable, more convenient, more useful. For example, the ever - present problem of sufficient storage space is considered for every room. Do you need an enlarged coat closet near the entrance the family uses most? Have you ever considered building into your bedroom walls ample storage for luggage, out-of-season clothes and bedding? Does your garage have tool storage facilities? Would your living room be less cramped with built-in furniture that provides still more storage area?

What about the outside? Do you need off - street parking for your guests? Or wiring to light the patio? Is the roof water - tight?

And the inside — are walls put to work with "hang - up' material boards? Are work areas made quiet with acoustical materials?

These are only a few of the 117 items suggested by the contest sponsor, the Home Improvement Council, in one of the most comprehensive checklists ever devised.

Wrought Iron Can Be Used In Many Ways

Ornamental wrought iron railings and columns find many uses, both inside and outside, on old and new structures.

Wrought iron railings may be used on both exterior and interior staircases and balconies, around porches, stoops, landings and platforms, "airing porches," swimming pools, etc., wherever an added touch of beauty is desired or danger of falls exists.

Columns are manufactured in flat and corner types, the latter consisting of two flat columns at right angles to each other with a common corner "leg." Properly constructed, wrought iron columns have ample strength to permit their use as structural members for supporting porch roofs, breezeways, balconies, canopies, door awnings, patio covers, etc.

Wrought iron columns, like railings, are gaining increasing popularity in interior decorative and structural applications such as balcony supports, room dividers, planter supports, etc.

Most manufacturers of wrought iron railings and columns offer a choice of a number of designs from which the homeowner or architect may select a style to harmonize with the architecture of the structure and to suit his personal preference and budget.

Some manufacturers have given great care to the development of designs to insure authenticity and to harmonize with every popular style of architecture from the very simple to the most ornate. In most instances, the homeowners' personal preference will dictate the selection of a suitable style and very frequently the salesman will have made a study of the suitability of the various styles and will be able to offer helpful suggestions if called upon.

Use Wallpaper To Plan Girl's Room

Your own room—especially if you're a young lady, 12-18—is a very special place.

Pretty playthings needn't be shoved into a catchall room just because you've grown into your teens.

Here for example is an attractive way to keep your doll collection in a special niche. A small bookcase lined with wallpaper, either in the same pattern as the walls of your room—or in a paper with a harmonizing color leftover from one of the other rooms in the house.

If you are especially energetic, you can cover the sides and top of the bookcase too — especially if you've selected paper that has vinyl impregnated colors — all of which means it can be scrubbed —and rather energetically too. And the rubbing and scrubbing can be done over and over without any harm to the paper. The only "do" in this little venture—do be sure that the manufacturer's directions that came with the wallpaper say that the paper can be scrubbed.

Wallpaper can make a small, unimportant window into a beautiful show - off. Use one or two, or even three, stripes of an interestingly designed paper such as key border paper. Outline the entire window with this border. Colors such as larkspur blue with white insets and sharp black outlines make a dramatic contrast to sidewalls covered with blue and white stripes. This could be in a small sitting room, in a foyer, or your own bedroom. With blue and white dominating the paper—try pink cafe curtains to give a sharp color contrast.

Nearly everyone loves the idea of a fireplace. Maybe your room doesn't have one — and you'd like to make a "pretend" fireplace. Here's how to "build" a fireplace with wallpaper — but don't expect any smoke. Use a picture frame molding the size of the open area of the fireplace where the logs go. Paper the back of this area with a charcoal or maroon colored wallpaper. The molding can be painted white. Border this smaller frame with another "frame" of wallpaper in, for example, a mosaic design resembling tile or brick, and outline it with a large picture molding the size of an actual fireplace. The walls of the room should be in a design and color harmonizing with the beautiful but non-working fireplace. For instance, if you like music, get a paper showing a collection of instruments such as a concert piano, French horn, violin, trombone, flute, harp and mandolin. Or, if you are a golfer, one with various clubs, and golf balls.

One good way to transform a dull wall in a windowless room into a pretty picture-wall is to use a colorful scenic type wallpaper. This paper comes in regular rolls of wallpaper and the scenic design is repeated strip after strip, showing, for example, a beautiful landscape, a lovely harbor or an Oriental garden. To make the picture wall, place three or four strips of wallpaper in the center of the wall, allowing about three feet at the bottom and at the top for the wallpaper frame. To make the wallpaper frame, use, for instance, one of the papers with a grille - work design. One or two strips will do, depending upon the size of the wall.

Here's what to do if there is an unsightly steam pipe in the corner of the living room. Get your father to make a three fold screen that reaches from the ceiling to the floor. It can be made out of plywood or any light weight wood, and the three panels hinged together. Cover both sides of the screen with the same paper that covers the walls of the living room. The screen will look like an extension of the wall.

If there is paper left over after the walls of your room have been wallpapered, here's a way to add color to your glass-topped vanity table. Cut the wallpaper to fit the top of the table, then remove the glass top and fit the paper to the top of the dresser. If your room happens to be papered with a solid color in a texture or embossed paper and there is paper left over from another room in the house that harmonizes in colorings—use the leftover bit for prettying up your vanity.

Medicine Cabinet Is Important In Safety Aid

Since accidental poisoning kills more young children than polio, dipitheria and scarlet fever combined, it is important to select a sufficiently large medicine cabinet when planning to remodel your bathroom.

The medicine cabinet should be large enough to sore all dangerous products out of the reach of small children. Standard cabinets are available with storage capacity ranging up to 1919 cubic inches, and capacity can be doubled or tripled through the use of twin or triple cabinet installations, joined together by simple joiner strips.

A special folder on this subject has been prepared by the F. H. Lawson Co., Cincinnati 4, Ohio.

Carport Addition Is Simple Process

A 40-foot by 14-foot addition, including both a screened-in porch and a carport, was added to this typical postwar home at little expense.

Here's the formula: 2x6 plates were bolted to cement-block footings, with 4x4 uprights placed on 3-foot centers to support the roof. Roof joists used were 4x6, with 2x4's between them to provide greater rigidity and to tie in the ½-inch plywood sheets used as the roof base. The plywood was covered with 3 layers of roll roofing material.

And that was that.

Contest Rules Are Outlined For You

NEW YORK — Officials of the Home Improvement Council, whose "How's Your Home?" contest this newspaper is offering to its readers, today assured the Monroe Morning World that there are no strings attached in this unusual public service project.

"Homeowners who enter HIC's unprecedented contest," Executive Director Don Moore said, "are not required to make any product purchases, nor will any salesman call as a result of the entry. The main purpose of our 'How's Your Home?' contest is to acquaint the homeowner with his specific repair - remodel needs and help him organize his home improvement program. Names of contest entrants will remain in the Council's confidential files, and will not be released to anyone. Helpful hints for improvements will be mailed to all who enter."

This contest was devised, he said, as part of HIC's program to better America's living through home improvement. A total of $125,000 in cash prizes will be awarded, with a first prize of $25,000 and 1,002 cash awards. The contest closes June 30 and will be followed by a second contest requiring completion of a home improvement project with the aid of a local Council member. Entrants in the first contest need not enter the second to be eligible for the cash awards, Moore said.

Happy Easter to all of you! Easter today remains our most beautiful and joyous holiday; a time for expressing love in worship and in our daily lives. Easter coincides with spring, the time of rebirth of crops. It's the hour of spiritual rebirth.

Pruning Does It

There's no longer any doubt that severe pruning of the pearl bush will rejuvenate the plant and bring out the blossoms. Last year, two pearl bushes in our garden had reached immense proportions. They were beautiful while in bloom but were just too big for that spot in the garden. After they finished blooming, believe me, we gave them a trimming, not only cutting out some of the oldest canes, but shortening the long limbs. They're a gorgeous sight, now. They're much thicker and look like a bank of snow. I cut several branches and used them in a large urn and it was simply magnificent. If any of you would like some stems for your church, give me a ring

More Beauty

If you want a lovely arrangement, use two or three stems of red bud, with just a few large leaves of some kind to hide the holder. The effect is simple but effective.

Every summer when the seed pods fall and causes so much work we vow we'd never plant another red bud. Then when spring comes and they bloom, we apologize to the poor helpless tree. After all, every sweet has its bitter. It's a short - life tree; fourteen years is a long life. There's one in our garden twenty - two years old, but that is an exception. Jane Sherrouse boasts a red bud older than mine, but we're both expecting to lose them anytime.

Have you noticed the Alexandrina Japanese magnolia in bloom? My, it's lovely! The buds are long and pointed and the color, a luscious, pinkish lavender. Really, though, I don't see much difference in the many varieties. The Nigra is very, very dark, almost black, and the denutata, white. Other than that, the others are very much alike The weather damaged these and they haven't been as pretty as usual. One or two stems of these magnolias also makes a breathtaking arrangement.

Jes' Gardening

Well, the Burgomaster yellow daffodils are still holding their own in size after the third year in the ground. It's a lot like the King Alfred, but the cup is a little lighter shade of yellow. The King Alfred blossoms get smaller every year, so it's pleasing to know there's a variety that doesn't deteriorate in size, like the Burgomaster.

One nursery tells me they have the candle trees ordered, plenty of them and are expecting them soon. These will be planted in buckets Jo Evans sent me some seed with the address of the nursery that sells them. If you would like this address, call me, I'll plant them when the ground warms up a trifle. Jo says the botanical name is Cassia Alota.

Reading over previous years' "Home Shifts" for March, I realize just how late our gardens are. The third week in March last year the Lady Banksia rose was in full bloom, and not a blossom has opened, yet. The azaleas are blooming rather spotted, just one here and one there. There's one azalea in our garden that is in full bloom on one side; on the other side of the plant, it is still in bud. The weather can really cause freaks.

Lawn Grasses

The cheapest grass is the St. Augustine because you can get sprigs from your neighbor. And neighbors are generous people, kind of nice, too. This grass grows well in the shade and sun

Centipede is a satisfactory grass. The blades are not quite as wide as the St. Augustine, and it is not quite as green. A lawn of Centipede can be seen at the Fred R. Mitchell home, 1306 North Second St., Monroe This grass is a little more expensive to buy than St. Augustine, but it does not have to be mowed as often. It also grows in shade or sun.

Zoysia Matrella looks like velvet with very fine blades; it is slow spreading and more expensive than the other two named. A lawn of this in spring and summer is a gorgeous sight. The Tom Davis' garden is sod with this Matrella, a shade or sun-loving grass. The address is 106 Glenmar, Monroe.

Some people like Bermuda, but believe me, you are planting a sneak thief when you put this out. Bermuda will send long runners under the ground that will wind themselves around and around roots of plants. Of course, this chokes them and they die. A very large crepe myrtle in my own garden was killed in this manner, so naturally Bermuda is no friend of mine. However, it will grow in the full sun and spread rapidly.

Carpet grass is very beautiful expensive, and the seeds are not always available.

Unique Ideas Spark Show

By MARY M. JARDINE

Many gardeners from the Fifth District enjoyed the beautiful State Flower Show and Convention in Baton Rouge this weekend. The staging was beautifully planned and executed and all the arrangements were skillfully interpreted. The horticulture was exceptionally fine and ribbons were well distributed throughout the state The Fifth District brought home many ribbons. Due to the heavy crowds it was impossible to get a complete listing Some that I noted were blue ribbon to Mrs. Dave Kaufman, Tallulah Home Gardeners in Class I, for "Light Out of Darkness"; honorable mention to Mrs. C. E. McKenzie and Mrs John Lewis for their interpretation of "Creatures Beneath the Waters"; red ribbon to Mrs. R. A. Brown and Mrs. H. A. Cruce, Wisner, for "Abundance"; yellow ribbon, Mrs. Job Tolar, College Heights, for "Fruits of Creation"; yellow ribbon to Mrs. M. M. Ward, Ferriday for her interpretative design, "Anger," Mrs John McCarter, Bayou DeSiard Garden Club, "Red for "Eternity."

Sprig and Twig Exhibits

The garden center was filled with beauty this week with exhibits from the Sprig and Twig Garden Club of Monroe

Mrs. J W. Keller designed a lovely open crescent arrangement with a color scheme of yellow and green. The container was a leaf shaped bowl in dark green. The line of the crescent was created with pine branches, showing the pine flowers and stripped of the needles. The line was enhanced with large cup daffodils in white with yellow centers. The center of interest was three yellow callas backed by arum italicum. This is the arum which grows so well for us, sending up beautiful green and white foliage in the winter and followed by red berries in summer.

Mrs. R. F. Wilson created a lovely arrangement featuring iris. A low rectangular bowl of dark green was a perfect foil for the plant material. Although the pattern was vertical, by placement on the left side of the container it gave the impression of a triangular design which also made it more interesting and distinctive.

Folded canna leaves were placed in a vertical pattern along the left, followed by a vertical line of white iris buds graduating into full blown flowers. Three purple iris were placed at the base, backed by furled canna. Looped ribbon grass in green and white was tucked behind the iris for depth and interest.

Mrs. J A. Coleman's Hogarth curve arrangement was a real conversation piece! The container, executed in blue ceramic, was in the shape of a pair of blue jeans In this "different" container Mrs. Coleman created a Hogarth line (line of beauty, the lazy S curve) with the golden forsythia and bright yellow calendulas in the focal area. The calendulas were so placed that the arrangement could be viewed from all sides, thus making it ideal for a large coffee table.

Mrs. John Lewis of the Arrangers Circle presented a lovely design featuring Oriental Magnolias. The container was a small black compote on a carved silver stem. This was set on a teakwood base. The arrangement was triangular in design created with the lovely branches of the purple magnolia. Dark red canna leaves were placed low in the design emphasizing the linear pattern. In the focal area a bloom of the magnolia was framed by ruffly foliage of the Chinese mustard. This is a delightful foliage plant of light ruffled green with the stems and veins of purple or violet. It is grown as a winter plant. The gardens on the campus of Southwestern at Lafayette have wonderful plantings of this winter vegetable.

Cleanest City Contest

All over the state of Louisiana this month the Cleanest City in Louisiana Contest is on. Towns and cities over the state are vying for the title and the trophy. A magnificent rotating trophy will be awarded to the state winner with each yearly winner receiving a smaller permanent championship award. The names of each yearly winner shall be engraved on the statue. The other seven district winners will each receive an appropriate trophy, which will be presented to the mayor and the sponsoring garden club representatives Trophies will become the honor award of the respective city, and would remain in the respective City Hall, on permanent display.

Let's all strive to make our community, the one in which we live, the cleanest city in Louisiana Property owners will please canvass their neighborhood in an all - out campaign and cooperate with your local city officials in litter - prevention. Lets carry a litter - bag in our cars and not be litter-bugs!

Eliminate Step

Are you ironing nylons and other synthetics after removing from the dryer? You're doing extra — and unnecessary — work. A good rule to remember: take everything out of the dryer while still a little damp before creases set. They will dry as they are flipped and folded. Synthetic garments can finish their drying on hangers, may need touch - up with iron, but very little.

Only Touch Up

Do you think an electric dishwasher is "just as much trouble" as washing dishes by hand? Chances are you can eliminate a step. Unless you do all your dishes just once a day, in which case it's best not to let food harden, you do not need to rinse the plates; just scrape lightly with a rubber spatula, load the machine and turn it on. The process takes only minutes and a whole tableful of dishes is washed and dried while you turn to another chore.

Garden Work Is Therapy

By AUDREY DAWSON

Easter Sunday is a wonderful day for everyone and Easter hats are lovelier than ever this year. If you read this column before you attend the church of your choice take a second look at hats today. You will see large hats, small hats draped and shaped to make every woman look her best. The fabrics and straws are soft and drapable and the colors are just irresistible.

To me the Easter season reminds me that it is really gardening time and it is only right that the Easter season and flowers are closely connected because flowers are the unverbal gift of affection, friendship to good will. Just to look upon flower in a garden encourages and uplifts the spirit and that's truly Easter. Life looks so much brighter to me after an hour of digging or planting in the yard. I've found it to be an excellent and cheap therapy when I'm tired or worried. So to you who have the urge, here are some jobs that you can do in your garden.

Prune spring flowering shrubs that have finished blooming Spray your roses once a week for leaf spot and aphids. A good formula is one tablespoon Captan, one tablespoon Malathion to one gallon water.

Sprig St. Augustine grass.

Divide and resent chrysanthemums.

Be sure to leave bulb foliage. I do not cut until entirely dead. If you just can't bear to look at the foliage (because sometimes it does make our yard have an unkept appearance) take a few minutes and plait the foliage

Spray camellias and azaleas with oil emulsion or malathion for scale and aphids.

Plant caladiums to add color to your garden. Candidum variety is the white leaf; Crimson Wave is deep red; Lord Derby is pink; Mrs. W. B. Holdeman variety is pink and green.

Clothing Workshop

Our thanks are in order to the eight Home Demonstration 4-H leaders who took time out from their busy schedule to take a two day training in clothing last week They were: Mrs. J. R. Lee and Mrs. James Pender from Bosco Home Demonstration Club; Mrs. J. C. Taylor, Mrs. Eunice Griggs from Liberty; Mrs. J. R. Agin, Drew; Mrs. Donald Tolbird, Okaloosa; Mrs. Cleburne White, Cadeville; Mrs. J. C. Raynor, Watson Club.

These leaders will each teach eight junior club girls the beginning lessons in sewing. Betty Jane Hodgkings, Associate Home Demonstration agent, is in charge of this 4-H Club work.

Hints to Homemakers

Unless your refrigerator has air space, allow at least 2½ inches between back of refrigerator and wall, about 12 inches between the top and cabinet above.

Before laundering men's washable ties, run a basting thread through them length wise to the lining will stay in place and not wrinkle when washed.

Close your refrigerator door on a new dollar bill, if bill pulls out easily there is too much air leakage. Have door adjusted or gasket replaced. Keep gasket clean and free of grease to prolong its life.

Always defrost refrigerator before the frost on the freezing unit is ¼ inch thick.

When you find it necessary to put two card tables together to form one long table, you can keep them from separating by placing two large rubber bands over a leg of each table.

Thermos bottle corks that have become too small from repeated use can be brought back to normal size by boiling them in water in a covered pan.

Scissors may be sharpened by cutting through fine sand paper several times.

Grafting Camellias

Mr. Joyce, our county agent, asked me to remind you that John A. Cox and Don Spurlock, horticulturist specialist from LSU agricultural extension, will give two demonstrations on grafting camellias at the agricultural building in West Monroe Friday, April 11 at 2 p. m. and 7:30 p. m.

"Is the Color Fast?"

That's what many a homemaker asks when buying summer clothes and fabrics. There are different kinds of colorfastness to light, to perspiration, to washing to dry cleaning and to crocking (rubbing off of color when fabric is dry.) Fastness to perspiration is important for all garments for warm weather wear, particularly for work and play clothes. Homemakers often ask how they can judge colorfastness. The sure way to tell how satisfactory the color will be is to have a guarantee from the manufacturer printed on a label on the garment. If there's a label on any clothing or fabric you consider buying, it pays to read it.

A Thought

Jumping at conclusions is not half as good as digging for facts.

Louver shutters of ponderosa pine installed on the inside of windows serve double duty both as a decorating material and functioning blinds.

The louvers block out light and give complete privacy to a room, yet permit air to enter. The rich texture of the louvers adds charm to practically any decorating scheme.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Rid Daffodils Of Diseases

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The few pests that bother daffodils are usually brought in, inside the bulbs when we first plant them in the garden. There are some bulb diseases, too, that affect daffodils, but we usually bring these on ourselves with too rich fertilizing and bad drainage.

Keep your eye out for blank spaces in your new plantings of daffodils. If the bulbs fail to come up in some places, dig them up and investigate. When the leaves look peculiar, the bulbs should be lifted and destroyed. Very expensive new varieties may be worth curing, but ordinary varieties ought to be burned.

The large narcissus fly sometimes comes to us from bulbs raised in colder climates than we have here in the South. There is, also a smaller fly. Both of these flies crawl under the surface and lay eggs in the neck of bulbs or at the bases of the leaves of members of the Amaryllis family. Daffodils, amaryllis, and other bulbs in the Amaryllis family, and also hyacinths, cape hyacinths and other bulbous plants are sometimes attacked. Apparently our hot climate is not to the liking of these pests, but burn any bulbs that come with grubs in them just to be sure about this. The insects of the large Narcissus Bulb Fly look sort of like bumble bees. They come in summer and are hairy, yellow and black. Those of us who love the pink Hall's amaryllis (really a pink spiderlily) will not soon forget the time some years back, when nearly the entire stock of this bulb was destroyed in a nursery in the south.

Use Chemicals

Basal rot of daffodils is usually brought on by using chemical fertilizers high in nitrogen or animal manures that are too rich. Only very well rotted manures should be used in the soil in which manures were mixed. Plant bulbs four to six inches above this soil. Many bulb specialists never allow manures to be used in their soil. They rely upon very rich soil and bone meal, for the most part.

The basal ring from which the roots arise is affected by basal rot. Be sure that your bulbs are not growing in poorly drained soil. This sort of location can induce basal rot.

If, when you cut through a bulb, you find brown rings in the layers of the tissue, you probably have mematodes in your bulbs. The commerical bulb dealers and raisers have to resort to cooking bulbs with "Stem and Bulb Nematodes" in order to kill the pests. Standard treatment is to Keep the bulbs at almost exactly 110 degrees Fahrenheit for three hours. You can see that this is impossible for amateur gardners. Burn the bulbs, and get some more. Better still, send them back to the dealer.

Coronation is no longer a part of Norway's royal ceremonial, but King Olav V (who succeeded his father King Haakon VII last year) will head the rare ceremony of The Blessing at Trondheim's ancient cathedral in late June.

THE HOME SHIFT

Choose Own Type Grass

By MILDRED SWIFT

Happy Easter to all of you! Easter today remains our most beautiful and joyous holiday: a time for expressing love in worship and in our daily lives. Easter coincides with spring, the time of rebirth of crops. It's the hour of spiritual rebirth.

Pruning Does It

There's no longer any doubt that severe pruning of the pearl bush will rejuvenate the plant and bring out the blossoms. Last year, two pearl bushes in our garden had reached immense proportions They were beautiful while in bloom but were just too big for that spot in the garden. After they finished blooming, believe me, we gave them a trimming, not only cutting out some of the oldest canes, but shortening the long limbs. They're a gorgeous sight, now. They're much thicker and look like a bank of snow. I cut several branches and used them in a large urn and it was simply magnificent. If any of you would like some stems for your church, give me a ring

More Beauty

If you want a lovely arrangement, use two or three stems of red bud, with just a few large leaves of some kind to hide the holder. The effect is simple but effective.

Every summer when the seed pods fall and causes so much work we vow we'd never plant another red bud. Then when spring comes and they bloom, we apologize to the poor helpless tree. After all, every sweet has its bitter. It's a short - life tree; fourteen years is a long life. There's one in our garden twenty - two years old, but that is an exception. Jane Sherrouse boasts a red bud older than mine, but we're both expecting to lose them anytime.

Have you noticed the Alexandrina Japanese magnolia in bloom? My, it's lovely! The buds are long and pointed and the color, a luscious, pinkish lavender. Really, though, I don't see much difference in the many varieties. The Nigra is very, very dark, almost black, and the denutata, white. Other than that, the others are very much alike The weather damaged these and they haven't been as pretty as usual. One or two stems of these magnolias also makes a breathtaking arrangement.

Jes' Gardening

Well, the Burgomaster yellow daffodils are still holding their own in size after the third year in the ground. It's a lot like the King Alfred, but the cup is a little lighter shade of yellow. The King Alfred blossoms get smaller every year, so it's pleasing to know there's a variety that doesn't deteriorate in size, like the Burgomaster.

One nursery tells me they have the candle trees ordered, plenty of them and are expecting them soon. These will be planted in buckets Jo Evans sent me some seed with the address of the nursery that sells them. If you would like this address, call me. I'll plant them when the ground warms up a trifle. Jo says the botanical name is Cassia Alota.

Prune spring flowering shrubs that have finished blooming Spray your roses once a week for leaf spot and aphids. A good formula is one tablespoon Captan, one tablespoon Malathion to one gallon water.

Sprig St. Augustine grass.

Divide and resent chrysanthemums.

Be sure to leave bulb foliage. I do not cut until entirely dead. If you just can't bear to look at the foliage (because sometimes it does make our yard have an unkept appearance) take a few minutes and plait the foliage.

Spray camellias and azaleas with oil emulsion or malathion for scale and aphids.

Plant caladiums to add color to your garden. Candidum variety is the white leaf; Crimson Wave is deep red; Lord Derby is pink; Mrs. W. B. Holdeman variety is pink and green.

Clothing Workshop

Our thanks are in order to the eight Home Demonstration 4-H leaders who took time out from their busy schedule to take a two-day training in clothing last week. They were: Mrs. J. R. Lee and Mrs. James Pender from Bosco Home Demonstration Club; Mrs. J C. Taylor, Mrs. Eunice Griggs from Liberty; Mrs. J. R. Agin, Drew; Mrs. Donald Tolbird, Okaloosa; Mrs. Cleburne White, Cadeville; Mrs. J. C. Raynor, Watson Club.

These leaders will each teach eight junior club girls the beginning lessons in sewing. Betty Jane Hodgkings, Associate Home Demonstration agent, is in charge of this 4-H Club work.

Hints to Homemakers

Unless your refrigerator has air space, allow at least 2½ inches between back of refrigerator and wall, about 12 inches between the top and cabinet above.

Before laundering men's washable ties, run a basting thread through them length wise to the lining will stay in place and not wrinkle when washed.

Close your refrigerator door on a new dollar bill, if bill pulls out easily there is too much air leakage. Have door adjusted or gasket replaced. Keep gasket clean and free of grease to prolong its life.

Always defrost refrigerator before the frost on the freezing unit is ¼ inch thick.

When you find it necessary to put two carl tables together to form one long table, you can keep them from separating by placing two large rubber bands over a leg of each table.

Thermos bottle corks that have become too small from repeated use can be brought back to normal size by boiling them in water in a covered pan.

Scissors may be sharpened by cutting through fine sand paper several times.

Grafting Camellias

Mr. Joyce, our county agent, asked me to remind you that John A. Cox and Don Spurlock, horticulturist specialist from LSU agricultural extension, will give two demonstrations on grafting camellias at the agricultural building in West Monroe Friday, April 11 at 2 p. m. and 7:30 p. m.

"Is the Color Fast?"

That's what many a homemaker asks when buying summer clothes and fabrics. There are different kinds of colorfastness to light, to perspiration, to washing to dry cleaning and to crocking (rubbing off of color when fabric is dry.) Fastness to perspiration is important for all garments for warm weather wear, particularly for work and play clothes. Homemakers often ask how they can judge colorfastness. The sure way to tell how satisfactory the color will be is to have a guarantee from the manufacturer printed on a label on the garment. If there's a label on any clothing or fabric you consider buying, it pays to read it.

A Thought

Jumping at conclusions is not half as good as digging for facts.

Louver shutters of ponderosa pine installed on the inside of windows serve double duty both as a decorating material and functioning blinds.

The louvers block out light and give complete privacy to a room, yet permit air to enter. The rich texture of the louvers adds charm to practically any decorating scheme.

Eliminate Step

Are you ironing nylons and other synthetics after removing from the dryer? You're doing extra — and unnecessary — work. A good rule to remember: take everything out of the dryer while still a little damp before creases set. They will dry as they are flipped and folded. Synthetic garments can finish their drying on hangers, may need touch - up with iron, but very little.

Only Touch Up

Do you think an electric dishwasher is "just as much trouble" as washing dishes by hand? Chances are you can eliminate a step. Unless you do all your dishes just once a day, in which case it's best not to let food harden, you do not need to rinse the plates; just scrape lightly with a rubber spatula, load the machine and turn it on. The process takes only minutes and a whole tableful of dishes is washed and dried while you turn to another chore.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Rid Daffodils Of Diseases

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The few pests that bother daffodils are usually brought in, inside the bulbs when we first plant them in the garden. There are some bulb diseases, too, that affect daffodils, but we usually bring these on ourselves with too rich fertilizing and bad drainage.

Keep your eye out for blank spaces in your new plantings of daffodils. If the bulbs fail to come up in some places, dig them up and investigate. When the leaves look peculiar, the bulbs should be lifted and destroyed. Very expensive new varieties may be worth curing, but ordinary varieties ought to be burned.

The large narcissus fly sometimes comes to us from bulbs raised in colder climates than we have here in the South. There is, also a smaller fly. Both of these flies crawl under the surface and lay eggs in the neck of bulbs or at the bases of the leaves of members of the Amaryllis family. Daffodils, amaryllis, and other bulbs in the Amaryllis family, and also hyacinths, cape hyacinths and other bulbous plants are sometimes attacked. Apparently our hot climate is not to the liking of these pests, but burn any bulbs that come with grubs in them just to be sure about this. The insects of the large Narcissus Bulb Fly look sort of like bumble bees. They come in summer and are hairy, yellow and black. Those of us who love the pink Hall's amaryllis (really a pink spiderlily) will not soon forget the time some years back, when nearly the entire stock of this bulb was destroyed in a nursery in the south.

Use Chemicals

Basal rot of daffodils is usually brought on by using chemical fertilizers high in nitrogen or animal manures that are too rich. Only very well rotted manures should be used in the soil in which manures were mixed. Plant bulbs four to six inches above this soil. Many bulb specialists never allow manures to be used in their soil. They rely upon very rich soil and bone meal, for the most part.

The basal ring from which the roots arise is affected by basal rot. Be sure that your bulbs are not growing in poorly drained soil. This sort of location can induce basal rot.

If, when you cut through a bulb, you find brown rings in the layers of the tissue, you probably have mematodes in your bulbs. The commerical bulb dealers and raisers have to resort to cooking bulbs with "Stem and Bulb Nematodes" in order to kill the pests. Standard treatment is to Keep the bulbs at almost exactly 110 degrees Fahrenheit for three hours. You can see that this is impossible for amateur gardners. Burn the bulbs, and get some more, Better still, send them back to the dealer.

Coronation is no longer a part of Norway's royal ceremonial, but King Olav V (who succeeded his father King Haakon VII last year) will head the rare ceremony of The Blessing at Trondheim's ancient cathedral in late June.

TRAPPED IN BEDROOM

10 Persons Die In House Fire

JERSEY SHORE, Pa. (UP) — A fire raced through a 50-year-old, two-story frame house Saturday, killing eight children and their father and grandmother.

The victims were trapped in a bedroom by a chest of drawers that blocked their escape through a window.

The only survivor of the tragedy was the mother of the children, who ran screaming from the house with her hair and clothing in flames.

Firemen said the blaze, apparently was set off by an exploding heater. They were hampered in fighting the fire because there were no fire hydrants near the home. Hoses had to be strung 2,000 feet, and by the time the first sprays of water were turned on the house it was engulfed by flames.

The dead, some of them so badly burned they could not be identified, were Torrance Flook, 40, the father, Mrs. Maude Blair, 63, the grandmother, and Harry, 16, Bonnie, 12, Terry, 10, Sudan, 9, Kenneth, 7, Ruth, 5 Dick, 4, and Billy, 1.

The bodies of two of the children were huddled in their father's arms. His body was slumped over a chest of drawers that had been pushed in front of a window. Mrs. Blair's body was found slumped over another windowsill. The other bodies were nearby.

Mrs. Mabel Flook, who was on the first floor when the fire broke out at 2:30 a.m., ran out the back door. Neighbors beat out her flaming hair and clothing. She was treated for severe shock, but her burns were not serious.

Neighbors made heroic efforts to rescue the trapped family by raising ladders to upstairs windows. They were beaten back by the flames.

Norman White, a neighbor, said he was awakened by an explosion and then saw the fire.

"All I could hear was the flames crackling and children screaming," he said.

He raced from his house 50 yards away, with an extension ladder. He raised the ladder to a window and managed to grasp Mrs. Blair where she lay slumped over a windowsill. But he lost his grip and was beaten back by the flames.

Herman Sechrist, another neighbor, raised a ladder to another window. He tried to pull Flook out but his efforts were blocked by the chest of drawers.

Ike's Golf Game Takes Bad Turn

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UP) — President Eisenhower got in a round of golf at the local country club Saturday before buckling down to a study of legislation which Congress left for his signature or veto

On a chilly, overcast day that was far from ideal golfing weather, the President toured the course with his son, Maj. John Eisenhower, a neighbor, Brig. Gen. Arthur Nevins, and his physician Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder.

In the beginning, at least, the President's golf game was as unsatisfactory as the weather. He had to hit three drives off the first tee before he got one to stay in the fairway. And it was shorter than his usual drives.

Eisenhower quit after nine holes because of the chilly weather.

He put on a cloth golfing jacket before getting into a White House limousine to return to the farm.

His game apparently didn't improve much after the shaky start. It was learned that he shot a 40 for the nine holes Friday. He said he didn't do as well today.

He and Mrs. Eisenhower planned to attend Easter services at the Gettysburg Presbyterian Church Sunday.

Hospital Stands As Important Symbol Of Healing

Physical, Spiritual Elements Tested

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff Writer

A city within itself — where hope, grief and joy merge in its streets of corridors . . . The Hospital.

Each hospital, including the three in Monroe, is a refuge for the sick, a haven for the emergency cases, a place of healing for bodies shattered by accident or gnawed at by disease.

On this Easter Sunday, The Hospital, a symbol for physical birth and healing, stands side by side with the image of the Cross and the Resurrection, symbols for rebirth and healing of souls.

The sun slants through the blinds and penetrates the windows — alerting the patients and nurses to the start of another day of life.

In the large, modern kitchen, dieticians are preparing the first of three well-balanced meals for this particular day. Special diets — the housewife's plague — are a normal thing here.

Work in the business office is also underway . . . a hospital must have correct accounts if it is to continue "in business."

Time moves past briskly. The receptionist opens her office to those waiting to be admitted as patients. A brief time is devoted to writing down some information on each patient.

Information Desk

The information desk opens . . . and the lady assigned to this duty begins her never-ending task of filing new cards, removing those of patients who are discharged, maintaining cards according to religion, so ministers will know which rooms to visit.

Visitors step through the lobby to her desk, ask the room number of a friend or relative and then leave her to continue sorting mail for patients.

Outside the operating rooms is the schedule of today's surgery. The names, type of ease, surgeon and time of operation is outlined. Doctors begin the day early — the first operation may start before 7 a.m. . . . and the last conclude in mid-afternoon.

The scrub nurses in their cool, green uniform and the white walk rapidly through the corridor to prepare the operating room, or assist in the surgery.

Emergency Room

Nearby is the emergency room — where the victims of sudden injury or pain are rushed for the start of treatment.

Down the corridor come two nurses, guiding the stretcher, keeping careful check on the bottle of glucose which is giving new strength to the post-surgery patient. In that small bottle of clear liquid draining into the veins of the patient is one of the keys to fast recovery after an operation.

The elevator door glides open, the patient is wheeled inside, and sped back to his room.

Throughout the day, a constant stream of patients flow into The Hospital. Physicians call to make sure room is available for a patient who is coming in to be admitted. Surgeons call the emergency room desk, to set up the time for an operation . . . or to change the time already scheduled to an earlier one.

Emergencies come through the swinging doors of the surgery section...and nurses hastily put aside their work of preparing the operating room to begin a swift, calm treatment of the accident victim, the burn case, the person who has been bitten by an insect or animal.

The Hospital can be a place of grief. Here, where life begins, it may also slip quietly out into eternity.

And here, near-miracles also occur.

The little girl, burned over 60 per cent of her body recovers . . . usually, burns on 40 per cent prove fatal.

The man, suffering uncounted fractures from the auto wreck, pulls through.

Life Saved

The child who drank poisonous liquid survives — after his stomach is pumped and he is given a "coating" liquid to drink.

The infant born a "blue baby" is given a complete blood transfusion. . . . Each drop of his own blood, filled with death-dealing corpuscles, is gradually drained out, as whole, healthy blood is given him in several transfusions. He lives.

The mother of three children, suffering from an illness termed "Deadly" 50 years ago, is saved through new drugs.

And the little-known miracles continue daily.

Visitors surge through the corridors in the afternoon and early at night. The rooms and halls are a buzz of low conversation, the lilt of music from a bedside radio, the crackle of TV sets.

Here and there is the room with the closed door . . . the "No Visitors" sign . . . the small notepaper pack fastened to the door, for those who came to visit, but could merely sign their name.

Then the stream of visitors becomes a trickle . . . the halls and rooms are cleared . . . the corridor, room and lobby lights are dimmed.

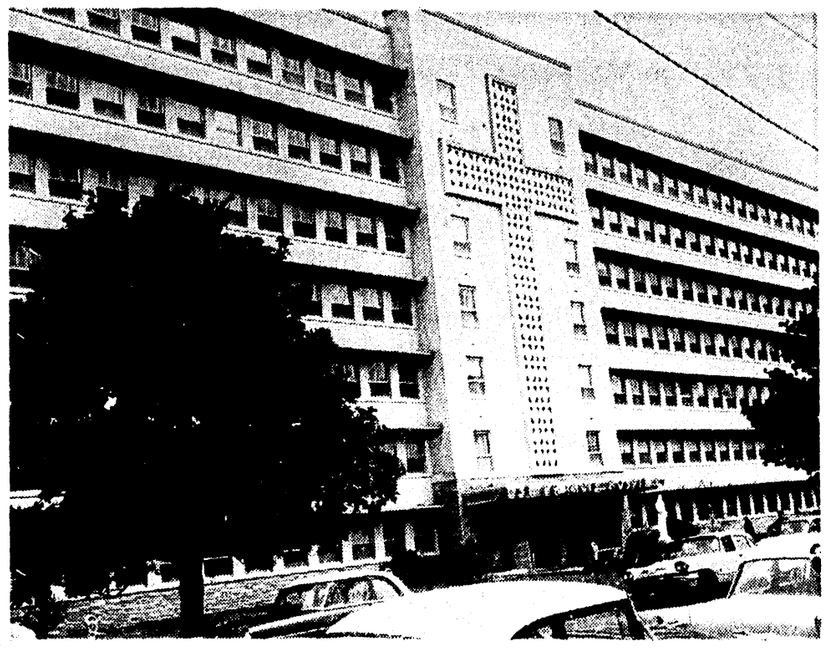
It is a sleeping city.

The woman at the switchboard answers the calls coming in, the nurses on night duty walk swiftly through the corridors, medicine is given on regular interval.

Outside is the blackness of night. In The Hospital is the dimly-lit warmth of a secure home.

The night passes calmly for some, restlessly for others.

Dawn again edges through the blinds, a new day begins . . . the healing continues.



SYMBOL OF HEALING — The Hospital, where birth and healing of the body take place, stands today with the Cross, symbol of the Easter rebirth and healing of souls. St. Francis hospital, one of the three in Monroe, is typical of the haven where health is regained. Other hospitals here include Wright-Bendel clinic and Conway Memorial hospital. Aly Khan Turning Into Top Diplomat At U.N.

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — When Aly Khan was named Pakistan's chief delegate to the United Nations, eyebrows arched around the world.

What, inquired many a diplomat and ordinary citizen alike, are his qualifications? His love of fast horses? Fast cars? Beautiful women? Parties?

But after a few weeks in his new post, the consensus along the East River is that he is a hard-working, serious-minded ambassador whose earnestness, industry and intelligence are impressive.

He has largely withdrawn from the glitter of the international set, spends long hours at his job, and has learned to be smoothly non-committal with all the bland good humor of a man who has spent his life in diplomacy.

The day he arrived, early last month, he told reporters:

"I don't want to say anything."

By the next day, however, he had mellowed sufficiently to say that he found his new post "most interesting."

More lately he has made pronouncements such as these:

"How do you like your job?"

"I love it."

"What do you think of the U. N.'s future?"

"It is the only future. There is no future outside it."

A typical day for Aly Khan might include a couple of morning conferences; a session with Agha Shahi, a minister from the Washington Embassy who had been serving as acting U.N. representative since the resignation in December of Ghulam Ahmed; lunch with U.S. Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge; a three-hour session on a committee studying the French-Algerian - Tunisian problem; dinner; then back to his office, loaded with documents to work until 9:30 or so.

Aly's first appearance at a diplomatic party found him surrounded by curious women the moment he stepped inside the door. He left 10 minutes later without finishing his drink.

His own first embassy party drew a turnout of 1,000 guests—including Lodge and Soviet Ambassador Arkady Sobolev.

Aly Khan is single now, but he has been married twice. His first wife was Joan Yarde-Buller Guinness, daughter of an English nobleman. His second was actress Rita Hayworth. Both marriages ended in divorce.

Since Rita, he has been seen with a succession of beautiful women, including actresses Gene Tierney and Joan Fontaine, and the French model Bettina.

But it takes more than charm to get along at U.N. Diplomats were more interested in how he handled himself professionally.

One of them, Ambassador Djalal Abdoh of Iran, who has watched him at committee meetings, said:

"He showed forbearance, wisdom and courage, which is a great deal for a beginner. I was impressed equally by his approach of moderation and conciliation."

Another diplomat puts it this way:

"He seems very earnest about his job. He seems to be extremely good at grasping things. His evaluation of things that he has seen, of the conferences he has attended, has been extremely perceptive, acute and intelligent."

He has made several short talks at committee sessions, speaking in English with a bit of a French accent. He speaks fluent French, and some Arabic.

Aly's father was Imam, or spiritual leader, of the Ismaili sect of the Shiah branch of Islam, estimated variously to number from three to 20 million believers in India, Pakistan, Iran, Syria, East Africa and elsewhere.

When the Aga Khan died last summer at 79, Aly was passed over as the new Imam in favor of his 20-year-old son, Karim, then a Harvard student.

The old Aga Khan five times headed India's delegation to the League of Nations Assembly. In 1937, he was president of the Assembly.

People are wondering how far Aly will go in his father's diplomatic footsteps.

THE BARNSTORMERS

Still A Few Of Them Left But Number Dropping

By WES COOK
Associated Press Writer

Four brightly painted single-engine planes dropped out of a stormy summer sky and into a stubby field near Bellevue, Ohio.

"We're on our way to Utica, N.Y., for an exhibition," pilot Duane Cole nonchalantly informed the astonished farmer on whose field the planes had landed.

The time was now, but it was like something out of another decade, when barnstorming aviators dropped in on county fairs, carnivals, picnics, anywhere they could gather a crowd, stage an aerial exhibition and pass the hat.

The barnstormer was a novelty on the American scene in the early 1920s, when man first sprouted wings. And he is still a novelty today, for about the same reason, because he is so rare.

"Flying was new in the 20s," says Cole, who at 43 still plies the ancient trade. "It's novel today because only a handful of airmen continue to make their living that way.

"We work from March to November. Our itinerary usually starts in the Deep South and may take us to both coasts and from the Gulf to Canada before the end of the season."

Cole's troupe, the only remaining one still dependent on barnstorming for a livelihood, includes three pilots, a parachute jumper and a lady wing walker.

Bad weather had forced them down into the pasture.

"Our planes aren't equipped with radios and other instruments necessary for flying in such conditions," he explained. "The violence of the aroebatics we perform is so damaging to instruments that we are obliged to fly without them."

Cole, from Kewanee, Ill., has been a test pilot, Air Force instructor and airport operator at various times during his 23-year career aloft. But barnstorming is his first and fondest love.

"The greatest contribution the early barnstormer made to aviation was to sell the public on flying," he says. "He also pioneered new equipment, set new speed and altitude records, and proved the safety and dependability of aircraft."

Beverly (Bevo) Howard, once one of the nation's highest paid exhibition flyers and now an instructor of air cadets at Spence Air Force Base, Moultrie, Ga., thinks the daredevil tradition lives on in many phases of aviation.

"The agricultural pilot, tornado and hurricane hunters and test pilots have inherited a large part of the role played by the barnstormer," says Howard, who also sees a parallel in the exhibitions staged by Navy and Air Force precision jet flying teams.

What sort of men pilot aircraft only inches above the ground, hedge-hop over trees and under power lines while spraying insecticide or fertilizer; buck 70 to 120 mile an hour winds to fly into the eye of a hurricane or on the fringe of a tornado funnel, and seek new avenues of space and speed in experimental flights?

Like their barnstorming predecessors, they have a healthy regard for life and yet know that their work is often dangerous. But they do not consider it in the daredevil or stunt class. In fact, they object to this identification. They maintain their work involves no more risk than most people take in driving to and from work.

The typical aerobatic, hurricane, tornado and test pilot spends hundreds of hours devising procedures to protect both lives and equipment.

Lt. Cmdr. John J DeMayo, a 33-year-old native of Hamden, Conn., is a Navy hurricane hunter pilot stationed at Jacksonville, Fla.

He is married and the father of two young daughters, but doesn't regard his job as particularly risky. He volunteered for it.

"While the rest of the Navy shadow boxes in preparation for an enemy they hope they never have to meet, we perform a mission against our particular enemy and see the fruits of our action in the papers the next day," DeMayo says.

Before the Joint Hurricane Warning Service was organized in 1946, 40 persons lost their lives for every 10 million dollars in property damage caused by a tropical storm. Today that figure has been reduced to three deaths for the same amount of damage.

Jim Cook, 34, is part-time rancher from Jacksboro, Tex., who today flies the only tornado plane in existence.

Donald House, head of the Weather Bureau's severe local weather warning system, says, "Cook hates to be regarded as some kind of a stunt pilot. He considers himself sort of a pilot with a scientific temperament."

Previous to his work with the Weather Bureau, Cook was a "hail suppressor" in the Nebraska Panhandle. He flew head on into storms, seeding the clouds with silver iodide crystals.

What kind of money do the modern-day barnstormers make?

The hurricane pilot receives base Navy plus flight pay which all service pilots receive.

The tornado pilot receives $50,000 for 300 hours of flying or about $170 an hour but has to furnish his own aircraft, among other expenses.

The test pilot draws a salary ranging from base and flight pay for service personnel according to his individual rank to $30,000 for civilian test pilots.

Insurance rates vary little from those paid by anyone else. In certain areas of flying, an additional fee is charged but it amounts to only a few dollars a year.

Barnstorming has come a long way since the 1920s.

As one airman put it: "I suppose that men who have spent thousands of hours looking over the tops of clouds just do not look backward. They must look forward and that is why at least the spirit of barnstorming will always be with us."

Special Grave Ceremonies Set For Next Month

The L. B. Fauk Post No. 13 of the American Legion will hold its annual grave decoration ceremonies May 25 to honor veterans buried in local cemeteries, it was announced here yesterday.

Miniature flags are placed on veteran's graves in the Riverside, City, Catholic, Swartz, Loch Harbor and Memorial cemeteries.

Milton W. Ford, post commander, has asked for information about veterans buried in graves without markers indicating that they were servicemen. This information is necessary, he explained, in order to order the correct number of flags.

At Monday's Legion meeting plans will be made and committees appointed for the fifth district spring conference to be held here April 27.

IN 100 MET MATINEES

Teeners Show They Dig Grand Opera

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — The rock 'n' roll generation digs grand opera too.

As a result, a strange long-run experiment in cultural education is celebrating a notable milestone: a hundred juvenile matinees at the Metropolitan Opera.

It's been a lively "century" of shows.

"Teen - age audiences are some of the best informed and most appreciative of all," sums one official of the sponsoring Metropolitan Opera Guild.

Altogether, 300,000 youngsters from 450 public, parochial and private schools in Connecticut, New Jersey and New York have participated.

For most of them, the visit to the Met is a first formal brush with Bizet, Verdi and Wagner.

Sometimes the results have been surprising.

There was, for example, the case of the nervous teacher. The mentor dreaded escorting an especially troublesome trio of lads to one of the matinees. He feared the worst but at the end of "La Boheme" discovered the three unashamedly wiping tears from their eyes.

Other youngsters have gotten a career lift. Two current members of the Met company, Soprano Regina Resnik and Basso Norman Scott saw their first opera performance at one of the student sessions.

Another high school boy submitted a three - dimensional setting which so intrigued a noted scenic designer that he took the youngster on as an apprentice.

An afternoon at the opera with the teen - agers is a study in contrasts for anyone familiar only with the jeans - and - jukebox mood of youth. Nobody talks loud, pushing is taboo and the dressed-up visitors solemnly study programs or stare up at the five-tiered, maroon - and - gilt vastness.

The youngsters display high familiarity with score and story. (Most of them have studied the work in music appreciation classes.) Applause erupts for arias, the entrance of a major character shoots an electric hum of expectancy through the hall.

The project, always sure of a sellout for the 3,000 seats, has grown from a single experimental performance 22 years ago to its present pace of seven performances a year. Further expansion is chiefly limited by the difficulties of integrating more performances into the cumbersomely vast complex which is an opera company.

The youngsters get their tickets at half price, and enjoy a couple of other advantages over their seniors. They get a look behind the scenes when the curtain stays up between acts to expose all the complex of stage machinery and some are granted a visit to the pit during intermissions.

"One thing sure," commented one usher, "no one in these audiences ever falls asleep."

R-R-R-R RIP

Describes Flight In Supersonic Jet

By JOHN T. ALEXANDER
Kansas City Star Reporter

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "R-r-r-r-rip!"

You have probably heard that screech of supersonic, rocket-shaped jet airplanes cutting through the sky so fast that they are gone before you can turn your head to see them.

You have probably wondered what it would be like to go up in one of those hot planes.

I wondered too — and found out.

I went up in an F102A fighter-interceptor as a personal guest of the pilot, Maj. Gen. Jarred V. Crabb, commander of the Central Air Defense Command, whose planes are on guard day and night over 21 states.

Gen. Crabb told me afterward I was the first newspaperman in the United States to break the sound barrier in one of these planes. I'll take his word for it.

The F102A is almost 70 feet long and stands almost 20 feet high. The wing span is only 38 feet.

I climbed up an orange-painted steel ladder and stepped into the cockpit. Between my flying suit, oxygen mask and parachute, I felt loaded down and awkward.

Gen. Crabb climbed up the steel ladder on his side of the plane. It occurred to me that for a man of 55 he was a mighty wiry, nimble person.

It was a perfect day for a ride, he said. There was hardly a cloud in the sky. The sunlight reflected brilliantly from the snow.

Something started whirring in the huge Pratt & Whitney J57 engine

"Compressed air starts the turbine turning," Gen. Crabb said through the intercom. "Then we hit the hot spark ignition. Now we move the throttle forward and we get the fuel in there."

The plane was whining now. We taxied to the south end of the runway.

My two-star pilot flicked a lever or two and we started our takeoff run rather gradually. When the afterburner came on, it gave me the feeling we had received a mighty "boot" directly in the rear of the plane.

The field fell away as the nose of the plane tilted up. Suddenly we were climbing in something not far from an almost vertical angle.

Hardly a moment passed before the general told me to look down. The plane had leveled out. It seemed to me we were sitting up there on a feather. No bumps. No roar. Just a soft rustle of wind on the sleek gray plane surfaces.

Peering out through the plastic canopy, I saw a gray patch below. That was Kansas City — all of it — and I was seeing it in one glance.

At almost eight miles up, the great Missouri River was only a thin thread encased in the rough corduroy pattern of the adjoining bluffs. The snowscape of the open country was almost a blank white, except for the black-veined tracery made by every creek and stream. Farm ponds glittered like flakes of mica.

The general pulled straight ahead and somewhat down. He said we were going to go through the speed of sound. About 12 miles a minute.

Soon the general said, "We are better than Mach 1.1; we are going about 850 miles an hour."

There had been hardly a tremor as we passed through the sound barrier. Now the ride was smoother than any commercial plane ride I have ever had.

The general let me take the controls for a few minutes. The plane responded to only the gentlest of pressures on the stick.

"Power steering," Gen. Crabb said.

We were now above St. Joseph — which I might have overlooked if Gen. Crabb had not pointed it out to me. It, too, was a gray patch amid the snow.

Farther out, we could see Kansas City, Lawrence, Topeka.

The sky was the darkest purple-blue. It dissolved in brighter hues toward the horizon. It paled out to a faint ice-blue where it joined the outward edge of the snow line.

We rode out to the Peka area. Then we turned slowly and went back over the air base. The 14-ton plane touched down as delicately as a rubber ball rolled in on a floor.

WELL-KEPT ANTIQUE — This 1911 Cadillac touring car, stored in Windsor's Garage in Mer Rouge, hasn't been driven since 1920 but is well preserved.

1911 Cad Interesting Antique In Mer Rouge

By MRS. SHELBY WHITE
And
MRS. JERALD JORDAN
(Morehouse Parish Correspondents)

MER ROUGE (Special) — In a mood of dignified anticipation, the residents of the aristocratic town of Mer Rouge promenaded the railroad platform.

The year was 1911 and the occasion was the arrival of a new car — a Cadillac touring car.

"The crowd stood, admiring its sheer beauty, caressing its sleek upholstery, reveling in the elegance of its brass trim and listening enraptured as Papa proudly demonstrated the sweet music of its idling motor," Mrs. Shelby Rolfe White, daughter of the owner, J. S. Rolfe, recalls.

With the car came a driving instructor, as was the practice until about 1925, but Mr. Rolfe was an experienced driver, having owned a Ford purchased the year before.

The Series Thirty Cadillac was the 13th car in Morehouse Parish. The neighboring parish of Ouachita could only boast of 12 cars.

The car was the pride of the Rolfe family and the source of many pleasant memories, Mrs. White reminisced.

The Cadillac had a Klaxon horn, which blew by squeezing a big rubber bulb placed near the driver's seat and "everyone within a half mile knew the Cadillac was coming when the Klaxon blew."

"Almost every afternoon we would take a drive after work was done, up the Fluker Lane, out by Mr. Lawson's pond, on by Graballs, then south of the main Oak Ridge - Mer Rouge road back home. It was easier to keep going than to turn around."

In 1911 cars were ordered from the factory and shipped directly to the purchaser by box cars. The purchaser had to go to the station and unload his car.

Here is a description of the mechanism, supplied by Ellis and Windsor: "The car has a twin ignition system with two spark plugs on each cylinder. One operates from the battery and the other operates from the magneto. Each system is independent of the other. The original ignition switch has been bypassed."

Ellis explained that this often happened, since he doubted if the original switch was very satisfactory, even when the car was new.

The Cadallic has no oil pan, instead there is an oil injector. The driver, in those days, adjusted his oil — how many drops per minute depending on the speed he expected to run.

The car has a right hand drive with the shift three speeds, low, intermediate and high) being on the right fender. Next to the shift is the emergency brake.

Ellis established that it was a 1911 model from the serial and motor numbers the fact that it has front doors (1910 did not) and the fact that the fenders are rounded (1910 had flat fenders).

The car is black, as all cars were in those days, the inside was covered with red leather which has an appearance of patent. It has brass decorated doors, handles and lamps and brass frames the windshield. The light for the dash and tail lights is gas operated. The tank to keep these lights burning were located on the right side fender.

The car set so high from the ground you could drive over a car and never scrape the bottom, which Mr. Rolfe did once.

The original tires were 33x4-inch clincher tires. The 1911 model was the last model Cadillac made before the self - starter was used. This is a hand-crank model.

Carbide lights sit near the windshield.

The Cadillac, according to Ellis is in good condition with all lights and top bows intact and the woodwork well preserved.

The Cadillac house" and is viewed each year by a number of antique auto dealers.

Mr. Rolfe drove it until 1920, and had dreams of getting it in running condition again. The exact cause of breakdown was not given but during its lifetime it was serviced by John Wright Martin, who now operates a gun repair shop in Monroe. In those days when a car was in need of repairs it was driven into a garage where a pit had been dug underneath the engine giving the mechanic room to work.

Antique car fanciers from many states have bid for the well-kept car but the family hasn't parted with it.

To them the car reflects a trait of the families in Mer Rouge and elsewhere in the old south — the desire to cherish memories and keep them alive with tangible possessions.

Surgeons call the emergency room desk, to set up the time for an operation . . . or to change the time already scheduled to an earlier one.

Emergencies come through the swinging doors of the surgery section...and nurses hastily put aside their work of preparing the operating room to begin a swift, calm treatment of the accident victim, the burn case, the person who has been bitten by an insect or animal.

The Hospital can be a place of grief. Here, where life begins, it may also slip quietly out into eternity.

And here, near-miracles also occur.

The little girl, burned over 60 per cent of her body recovers . . . usually, burns on 40 per cent prove fatal.

The man, suffering uncounted fractures from the auto wreck, pulls through.

Life Saved

The child who drank poisonous liquid survives — after his stomach is pumped and he is given a "coating" liquid to drink.

The infant born a "blue baby" is given a complete blood transfusion. . . . Each drop of his own blood, filled with death-dealing corpuscles, is gradually drained out, as whole, healthy blood is given him in several transfusions. He lives.

The mother of three children, suffering from an illness termed "Deadly" 50 years ago, is saved through new drugs.

And the little-known miracles continue daily.

Visitors surge through the corridors in the afternoon and early at night. The rooms and halls are a buzz of low conversation, the lilt of music from a bedside radio, the crackle of TV sets.

Here and there is the room with the closed door . . . the "No Visitors" sign . . . the small notepaper pack fastened to the door, for those who came to visit, but could merely sign their name.

Then the stream of visitors becomes a trickle . . . the halls and rooms are cleared . . . the corridor, room and lobby lights are dimmed.

It is a sleeping city.

The woman at the switchboard answers the calls coming in, the nurses on night duty walk swiftly through the corridors, medicine is given on regular interval.

Outside is the blackness of night. In The Hospital is the dimly-lit warmth of a secure home.

The night passes calmly for some, restlessly for others.

Dawn again edges through the blinds, a new day begins . . . the healing continues.

SYMBOL OF HEALING — The Hospital, where birth and healing of the body take place, stands today with the Cross, symbol of the Easter rebirth and healing of souls. St. Francis hospital, one of the three in Monroe, is typical of the haven where health is regained. Other hospitals here include Wright-Bendel clinic and Conway Memorial hospital. Aly Khan Turning Into Top Diplomat At U.N.

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — When Aly Khan was named Pakistan's chief delegate to the United Nations, eyebrows arched around the world.

What, inquired many a diplomat and ordinary citizen alike, are his qualifications? His love of fast horses? Fast cars? Beautiful women? Parties?

But after a few weeks in his new post, the consensus along the East River is that he is a hard-working, serious-minded ambassador whose earnestness, industry and intelligence are impressive.

He has largely withdrawn from the glitter of the international set, spends long hours at his job, and has learned to be smoothly noncommittal with all the bland good humor of a man who has spent his life in diplomacy.

The day he arrived, early last month, he told reporters:

"I don't want to say anything."

By the next day, however, he had mellowed sufficiently to say that he found his new post "most interesting."

More lately he has made pronouncements such as these:

"How do you like your job?"

"I love it."

"What do you think of the U. N.'s future?"

"It is the only future. There is no future outside it."

A typical day for Aly Khan might include a couple of morning conferences; a session with Agha Shahi, a minister from the Washington Embassy who had been serving as acting U.N. representative since the resignation in December of Ghulam Ahmed; lunch with U.S. Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge; a three-hour session on a committee studying the French-Algerian - Tunisian problem; dinner; then back to his office, loaded with documents to work until 9:30 or so.

Aly's first appearance at a diplomatic party found him surrounded by curious women the moment he stepped inside the door. He left 10 minutes later without finishing his drink.

His own first embassy party drew a turnout of 1,000 guests—including Lodge and Soviet Ambassador Arkady Sobolev.

Aly Khan is single now, but he has been married twice. His first wife was Joan Yarde-Buller Guinness, daughter of an English nobleman. His second was actress Rita Hayworth. Both marriages ended in divorce.

Since Rita, he has been seen with a succession of beautiful women, including actresses Gene Tierney and Joan Fontaine, and the French model Bettina.

But it takes more than charm to get along at U.N. Diplomats were more interested in how he handled himself professionally.

One of them, Ambassador Djalal Abdoh of Iran, who has watched him at committee meetings, said:

"He showed forbearance, wisdom and courage, which is a great deal for a beginner. I was impressed equally by his approach of moderation and conciliation."

Another diplomat puts it this way:

"He seems very earnest about his job. He seems to be extremely good at grasping things. His evaluation of things that he has seen, of the conferences he has attended, has been extremely perceptive, acute and intelligent."

He has made several short talks at committee sessions, speaking in English with a bit of a French accent. He speaks fluent French, and some Arabic.

Aly's father was Imam, or spiritual leader, of the Ismaili sect of the Shiah branch of Islam, estimated variously to number from three to 20 million believers in India, Pakistan, Iran, Syria, East Africa and elsewhere.

When the Aga Khan died last summer at 79, Aly was passed over as the new Imam in favor of his 20-year-old son, Karim, then a Harvard student.

The old Aga Khan five times headed India's delegation to the League of Nations Assembly. In 1937, he was president of the Assembly.

People are wondering how far Aly will go in his father's diplomatic footsteps.

THE BARNSTORMERS

Still A Few Of Them Left But Number Dropping

By WES COOK
Associated Press Writer

Four brightly painted single-engine planes dropped out of a stormy summer sky and into a stubby field near Bellevue, Ohio.

"We're on our way to Utica, N.Y., for an exhibition," pilot Duane Cole nonchalantly informed the astonished farmer on whose field the planes had landed.

The time was now, but it was like something out of another decade, when barnstorming aviators dropped in on county fairs, carnivals, picnics, anywhere they could gather a crowd, stage an aerial exhibition and pass the hat.

The barnstormer was a novelty on the American scene in the early 1920s, when man first sprouted wings. And he is still a novelty today, for about the same reason, because he is so rare.

"Flying was new in the 20s," says Cole, who at 43 still plies the ancient trade. "It's novel today because only a handful of airmen continue to make their living that way.

"We work from March to November. Our itinerary usually starts in the Deep South and may take us to both coasts and from the Gulf to Canada before the end of the season."

Cole's troupe, the only remaining one still dependent on barnstorming for a livelihood, includes three pilots, a parachute jumper and a lady wing walker.

Bad weather had forced them down into the pasture.

"Our planes aren't equipped with radios and other instruments necessary for flying in such conditions," he explained. "The violence of the aroebatics we perform is so damaging to instruments that we are obliged to fly without them."

Cole, from Kewanee, Ill., has been a test pilot, Air Force instructor and airport operator at various times during his 23-year career aloft. But barnstorming is his first and fondest love.

"The greatest contribution the early barnstormer made to aviation was to sell the public on flying," he says. "He also pioneered new equipment, set new speed and altitude records, and proved the safety and dependability of aircraft."

Beverly (Bevo) Howard, once one of the nation's highest paid exhibition flyers and now an instructor of air cadets at Spence Air Force Base, Moultrie, Ga., thinks the daredevil tradition lives on in many phases of aviation.

"The agricultural pilot, tornado and hurricane hunters and test pilots have inherited a large part of the role played by the barnstormer," says Howard, who also sees a parallel in the exhibitions staged by Navy and Air Force precision jet flying teams.

What sort of men pilot aircraft only inches above the ground, hedge-hop over trees and under power lines while spraying insecticide or fertilizer; buck 70 to 120 mile an hour winds to fly into the eye of a hurricane or on the fringe of a tornado funnel, and seek new avenues of space and speed in experimental flights?

Like their barnstorming predecessors, they have a healthy regard for life and yet know that their work is often dangerous. But they do not consider it in the daredevil or stunt class. In fact, they object to this identification. They maintain their work involves no more risk than most people take in driving to and from work.

The typical aerobatic, hurricane, tornado and test pilot spends hundreds of hours devising procedures to protect both lives and equipment.

Lt. Cmdr. John J DeMayo, a 33-year-old native of Hamden, Conn., is a Navy hurricane hunter pilot stationed at Jacksonville, Fla.

He is married and the father of two young daughters, but doesn't regard his job as particularly risky. He volunteered for it.

"While the rest of the Navy shadow boxes in preparation for an enemy they hope they never have to meet, we perform a mission against our particular enemy and see the fruits of our action in the papers the next day," DeMayo says.

Before the Joint Hurricane Warning Service was organized in 1946, 40 persons lost their lives for every 10 million dollars in property damage caused by a tropical storm. Today that figure has been reduced to three deaths for the same amount of damage.

Jim Cook, 34, is part-time rancher from Jacksboro, Tex., who today flies the only tornado plane in existence.

Donald House, head of the Weather Bureau's severe local weather warning system, says, "Cook hates to be regarded as some kind of a stunt pilot. He considers himself sort of a pilot with a scientific temperament."

Previous to his work with the Weather Bureau, Cook was a "hail suppressor" in the Nebraska Panhandle. He flew head on into storms, seeding the clouds with silver iodide crystals.

What kind of money do the modern-day barnstormers make?

The hurricane pilot receives base Navy plus flight pay which all service pilots receive.

The tornado pilot receives $50,000 for 300 hours of flying or about $170 an hour but has to furnish his own aircraft, among other expenses.

The test pilot draws a salary ranging from base and flight pay for service personnel according to his individual rank to $30,000 for civilian test pilots.

Insurance rates vary little from those paid by anyone else. In certain areas of flying, an additional fee is charged but it amounts to only a few dollars a year.

Barnstorming has come a long way since the 1920s.

As one airman put it: "I suppose that men who have spent thousands of hours looking over the tops of clouds just do not look backward. They must look forward and that is why at least the spirit of barnstorming will always be with us."

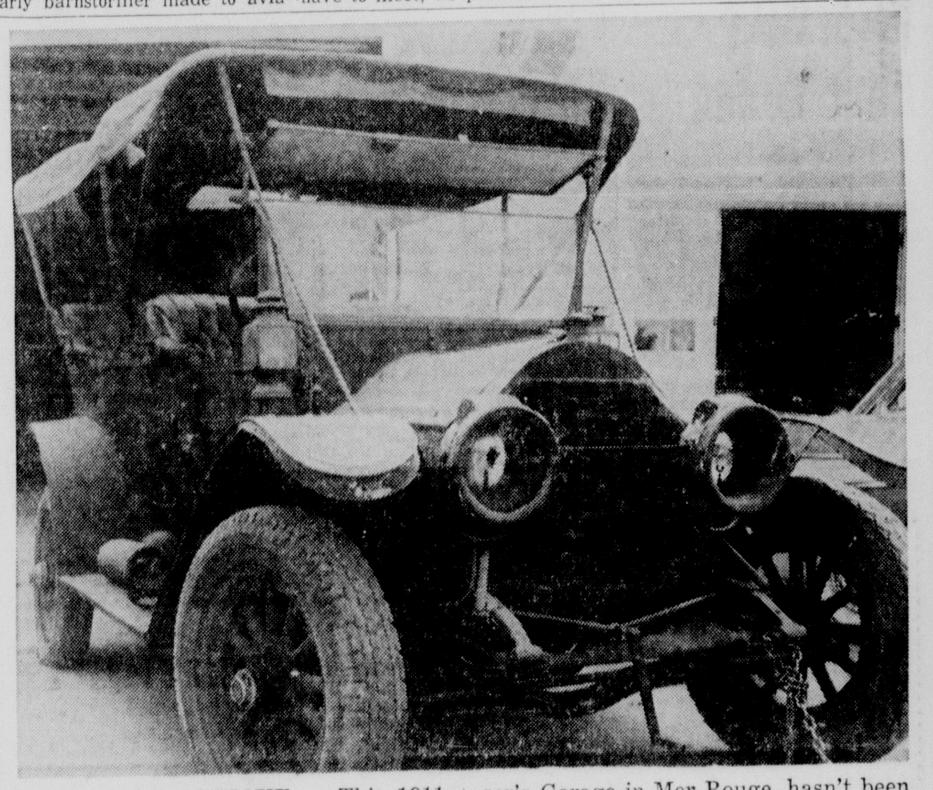
Special Grave Ceremonies Set For Next Month

The L. B. Faulk Post No. 13 of the American Legion will hold its annual grave decoration ceremonies May 25 to honor veterans buried in local cemeteries, it was announced here yesterday.

Miniature flags are placed on veteran's graves in the Riverside, City, Catholic, Swartz, Loch Harbor and Memorial cemeteries.

Milton W. Ford, post commander, has asked for information about veterans buried in graves without markers indicating that they were servicemen. This information is necessary, he explained, in order to order the correct number of flags.

At Monday's Legion meeting plans will be made and committees appointed for the fifth district spring conference to be held here April 27.



WELL-KEPT ANTIQUE — This 1911 Cadillac touring car, stored in Windsor's Garage in Mer Rouge, hasn't been driven since 1920 but is well preserved.

1911 Cad Interesting Antique In Mer Rouge

By MRS. SHELBY WHITE
And
MRS. JERALD JORDAN
(Morehouse Parish Correspondents)

MER ROUGE (Special) — In a mood of dignified anticipation, the residents of the aristocratic town of Mer Rouge promenaded the railroad platform.

The year was 1911 and the occasion was the arrival of a new car — a Cadillac touring car.

"The crowd stood, admiring its sheer beauty, caressing its sleek upholstery, reveling in the elegance of its brass trim and listening enraptured as Papa proudly demonstrated the sweet music of its idling motor," Mrs. Shelby Rolfe White, daughter of the owner, J. S. Rolfe, recalls.

With the car came a driving instructor, as was the practice until about 1925, but Mr. Rolfe was an experienced driver, having owned a Ford purchased the year before.

The Series Thirty Cadillac was the 13th car in Morehouse Parish. The neighboring parish of Ouachita could only boast of 12 cars.

The car was the pride of the Rolfe family and the source of many pleasant memories, Mrs. White reminisced.

The Cadillac had a Klaxon horn, which blew by squeezing a big rubber bulb placed near the driver's seat and "everyone within a half mile knew the Cadillac was coming when the Klaxon blew."

"Almost every afternoon we would take a drive after work was done, up the Fluker Lane, out by Mr. Lawson's pond, on by Graballs, then south of the main Oak Ridge - Mer Rouge road back home. It was easier to keep going than to turn around."

In 1911 cars were ordered from the factory and shipped directly to the purchaser by box cars. The purchaser had to go to the station and unload his car.

Here is a description of the mechanism, supplied by Ellis and Windsor: "The car has a twin ignition system with two spark plugs on each cylinder. One operates from the battery and the other operates from the magneto. Each system is independent of the other. The original ignition switch has been bypassed."

Ellis explained that this often happened, since he doubted if the original switch was very satisfactory, even when the car was new.

The Cadallic has no oil pan, instead there is an oil injector. The driver, in those days, adjusted his oil — how many drops per minute depending on the speed he expected to run.

The car has a right hand drive with the shift three speeds, low, intermediate and high being on the right fender. Next to the shift is the emergency brake.

Ellis established that it was a 1911 model from the serial and motor numbers the fact that it has front doors (1910 did not) and the fact that the fenders are rounded (1910 had flat fenders).

The car is black, as all cars were in those days, the inside was covered with red leather which has an appearance of patent. It has brass decorated doors, handles and lamps and brass frames the windshield. The light for the dash and tail lights is gas operated. The tank to keep these lights burning were located on the right side fender.

The car set so high from the ground you could drive over a car and never scrape the bottom, which Mr. Rolfe did once.

The original tires were 33x4-inch clincher tires. The 1911 model was the last model Cadillac made before the self - starter was used. This is a hand-crank model.

Carbide lights sit near the windshield.

The Cadillac, according to Ellis is in good condition with all lights and top bows intact and the woodwork well preserved.

It sits in the garage, generally known as the "Cadillac house" an is viewed each year by a number of antique auto dealers.

Mr. Rolfe drove it until 1920, and had dreams of getting it in running condition again. The exact cause of breakdown was not given but during its lifetime it was serviced by John Wright Martin, who now operates a gun repair shop in Monroe. In those days when a car was in need of repairs it was driven into a garage where a pit had been dug underneath the engine giving the mechanic room to work.

Antique car fanciers from many states have bid for the well-kept car but the family hasn't parted with it.

To them the car reflects a trait of the families in Mer Rouge and elsewhere in the old south — the desire to cherish memories and keep them alive with tangible possessions.

IN 100 MET MATINEES

Teeners Show They Dig Grand Opera

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — The rock 'n' roll generation digs grand opera too.

As a result, a strange long-run experiment in cultural education is celebrating a notable milestone: a hundred juvenile matinees at the Metropolitan Opera.

It's been a lively "century" of shows.

"Teen - age audiences are some of the best informed and most appreciative of all," sums one official of the sponsoring Metropolitan Opera Guild.

Altogether, 300,000 youngsters from 450 public, parochial and private schools in Connecticut, New Jersey and New York have participated.

For most of them, the visit to the Met is a first formal brush with Bizet, Verdi and Wagner.

Sometimes the results have been surprising.

There was, for example, the case of the nervous teacher. The mentor dreaded escorting an especially troublesome trio of lads to one of the matinees. He feared the worst but at the end of "La Boheme" discovered the three unashamedly wiping tears from their eyes.

Other youngsters have gotten a career lift. Two current members of the Met company, Soprano Regina Resnik and Basso Norman Scott saw their first opera performance at one of the student sessions.

Another high school boy submitted a three - dimensional setting which so intrigued a noted scenic designer that he took the youngster on as an apprentice.

An afternoon at the opera with the teen - agers is a study in contrasts for anyone familiar only with the jeans - and - jukebox mood of youth. Nobody talks loud, pushing is taboo and the dressed-up visitors solemnly study programs or stare up at the five-tiered, maroon - and - gilt vastness.

The youngsters display high familiarity with score and story. (Most of them have studied the work in music appreciation classes.) Applause erupts for arias, the entrance of a major character shoots an electric hum of expectancy through the hall.

The project, always sure of a sellout for the 3,000 seats, has grown from a single experimental performance 22 years ago to its present pace of seven performances a year. Further expansion is chiefly limited by the difficulties of integrating more performances into the cumbersomely vast complex which is an opera company.

The youngsters get their tickets at half price, and enjoy a couple of other advantages over their seniors. They get a look behind the scenes when the curtain stays up between acts to expose all the complex of stage machinery and some are granted a visit to the pit during intermissions.

"One thing sure," commented one usher, "no one in these audiences ever falls asleep."

R-R-R-R RIP

Describes Flight In Supersonic Jet

By JOHN T. ALEXANDER
Kansas City Star Reporter

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "R-r-r-r-rip!"

You have probably heard that screech of supersonic, rocket-shaped jet airplanes cutting through the sky so fast that they are gone before you can turn your head to see them.

You have probably wondered what it would be like to go up in one of those hot planes.

I wondered too — and found out.

I went up in an F102A fighter-interceptor as a personal guest of the pilot, Maj. Gen. Jarred V. Crabb, commander of the Central Air Defense Command, whose planes are on guard day and night over 21 states.

Gen. Crabb told me afterward I was the first newspaperman in the United States to break the sound barrier in one of these planes. I'll take his word for it.

The F102A is almost 70 feet long and stands almost 20 feet high. The wing span is only 38 feet.

I climbed up an orange-painted steel ladder and stepped into the cockpit. Between my flying suit, oxygen mask and parachute, I felt loaded down and awkward.

Gen. Crabb climbed up the steel ladder on his side of the plane. It occurred to me that for a man of 55 he was a mighty wiry, nimble person.

It was a perfect day for a ride, he said. There was hardly a cloud in the sky. The sunlight reflected brilliantly from the snow.

Something started whirring in the huge Pratt & Whitney J57 engine.

"Compressed air starts the turbine turning," Gen. Crabb said through the intercom. "Then we hit the hot spark ignition. Now we move the throttle forward and we get the fuel in there."

The plane was whining now. We taxied to the south end of the runway.

My two-star pilot flicked a lever or two and we started our takeoff run rather gradually. When the afterburner came on, it gave me the feeling we had received a mighty "boot" directly in the rear of the plane.

The field fell away as the nose of the plane tilted up. Suddenly we were climbing in something not far from an almost vertical angle.

Hardly a moment passed before the general told me to look down. The plane had leveled out. It seemed to me we were sitting up there on a feather. No bumps. No roar. Just a soft rustle of wind on the sleek gray plane surfaces.

Peering out through the plastic canopy, I saw a gray patch below. That was Kansas City — all of it — and I was seeing it in one glance.

At almost eight miles up, the great Missouri River was only a thin thread encased in the rough corduroy pattern of the adjoining bluffs. The snowscape of the open country was almost a blank white, except for the black-veined tracery made by every creek and stream. Farm ponds glittered like flakes of mica.

The general pulled straight ahead and somewhat down. He said we were going to go through the speed of sound. About 12 miles a minute.

Soon the general said, "We are better than Mach 1.1; we are going about 850 miles an hour."

There had been hardly a tremor as we passed through the sound barrier. Now the ride was smoother than any commercial plane ride I have ever had.

The general let me take the controls for a few minutes. The plane responded to only the gentlest of pressures on the stick.

"Power steering," Gen. Crabb said.

We were now above St. Joseph — which I might have overlooked if Gen. Crabb had not pointed it out to me. It, too, was a gray patch amid the snow.

Farther out, we could see Kansas City, Lawrence, Topeka.

The sky was the darkest purple-blue. It dissolved in brighter hues toward the horizon. It paled out to a faint ice-blue where it joined the outward edge of the snow line.

We rode out to the Peka area. Then we turned slowly and went back over the air base. The 14-ton plane touched down as delicately as a rubber ball rolled in on a floor.

MASS NEGRO MEETING

Reinforcements Ordered In Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UP) — State and city authorities Saturday ordered police reinforcements to prevent possible violence at a mass meeting of Negroes Sunday in front of the Alabama capitol.

The city became "tense" after someone smeared "KKK" symbols in white paint on every highway leading into Montgomery and on the capitol grounds before dawn.

"We don't expect any trouble... but we don't want any," William Lyerly, state safety director, said.

"This meeting is very ill-advised," he said. "We asked them to hold the meeting at Alabama State College (a Negro school) where they have room but they refused."

Report Hours Early

Police commissioner Clyde Sellers said he ordered the second shift of the police force to report to duty two hours early.

"We're going to let them (the Negroes) have their meeting but we are taking all necessary precautions," he said.

City workmen began painting over the "KKK" symbols after burning the white paint away with blow torches. Police said they did not know who painted the signs. Twenty - five to 30 signs, about three feet high, were stenciled on city streets. Eight were painted on streets surrounding the capitol grounds in the heart of the city. One appeared a block from the state highway patrol.

A capitol guard saw the men painting but thought they were marking off traffic lines.

Unsigned Leaflets

Unsigned leaflets calling for the protest demonstration were distributed in Montgomery last Thursday. The leaflets urged Negroes throughout the state to meet "in orderly, dignified protest against legal miscarriage of justice where Negroes are concerned."

The circulars charged that a white man was not arrested for raping a Negro girl the day before Jeremiah Reeves Jr., 22, was electrocuted at Kilby Prison for the rape of a white Montgomery housewife.

Detective Capt. E. P. Brown said a rape incident was reported around March 19-20 but that no warrant was signed because investigation proved the complaint "completely unfounded."

Reb Cuban Army Cut Off-Army

HAVANA (AP)—The Cuban army General Staff proclaimed Saturday night that troops roving the Sierra Maestra mountains have isolated the main group of rebels personally led by Fidel Castro.

The announcement came only 18 hours after Castro had declared total war against President Fulgencio Batista.

A communique said the rebel contingents were fleeing deeper into the mountains under pursuit by the soldiers.

The army gave no details as to how the reported isolation of the Castro-led group was accomplished or exactly where in the mountains it had gone.

The army declared, however, that saboteurs Castro had sent into various zones of easternmost Oriente Province to wreck highway and railway transport had been decisively beaten.

There was no announcement as to how many saboteurs were involved or any casualties.

The communique discounted Castro's claims that two rebel columns had advanced, one along the northern coast and the other in the south, toward Santiago, the provincial capital, and the port of Manzanillo.

"The rebels never had a chance to advance toward Santiago and Manzanillo, much less to occupy them," the communique said. "Both cities are now enjoying complete tranquility like the rest of those in the republic."

Castro's declaration of total war had turned out to be a war of nerves. Some suporters of the rebel caders began to grumble.

Havana was quiet. A check of potential trouble centers elsewhere in Cuba showed no unusual rebel activity.

A skirmish was reported in the mountains near Trinidad. Dispatches said two soldiers and 10 rebels were killed. But such incidents have been common for months.

Castro had announced from his Sierra Maestra hideout that "total, implacable war" would begin at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. He said his forces already were on the move.

As the hours passed, however, and nothing happened, disappointment arose among Castro's civilian supporters and sympathizers. Some complained that the time had come for deeds not words. They feared that unless Castro fought his all-out war, he would lose the confidence of Batista's enemies.

The 38,000 members of Cuba's armed forces are still deployed at strategic points to meet Castro's armed bands or to quell a general strike if one breaks out.

Castro has not indicated when he will call for a general strike, but he is counting on it to help his guerrilla fighters pin down government forces.

The government has authorized workers to kill anyone who urges them to leave their jobs. The powerful Cuban Confederation of Labor also has promised to help break a general strike. Two strikes called by Castro failed last year.

Havana's streets, night spots and hotels were almost deserted Friday night and Saturday. Easter religious processions were called off. More police were seen on patrol.

Despite Castro's announcement that the final stage of the battle against Batista was beginning, many Cubans believe the big push will not get under way until Easter holidays end Monday morning.

Rebel sources say Castro does not want to antagonize the Roman Catholic Church and may be anxious to avoid attacks during religious celebrations.

Dust Cloud Blown To East Texas

By UNITED PRESS

High winds blew a dust cloud from far West Texas into East Texas Saturday and visibility dropped as low as half a mile.

Winds gusted as high as 60 miles an hour around Lubbock in the afternoon and gusted at 52 in Fort Worth. Winds subsided slightly after nightfall but shifted to northerly in the Panhandle, dropping visibility to one and a half miles at Dalhart and two miles at Amarillo.

Visibility was as low as half a mile at Lubbock but after sundown improved to two and a half miles.

The dust cloud covered an area from around Childress and Dalhart southwestward through Lubbock to north of Midland and then eastward to south of Fort Worth and Dallas over to Tyler. Dust covered the sky above Sherman but none was reported at Longview.

Waco had six miles visibility at 7 p. m. From Fort Worth and Dallas west to Abilene visibility ranged from one and a half to two miles.

The dust was expected to settle slowly, the weather bureau said, around Fort Worth and Dallas Saturday night and drift south and eastward into southeast Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Winds Sunday were not expected to be strong enough to pick up dust, ranging from 15 to 25 miles an hour. No rain was expected.

Temperatures Saturday ranged from 87 at Corpus Christi to 61 at El Paso.

WOMAN KILLED

FAIRFIELD, Tex. (UP) — A woman was killed and seven other persons injured early Friday in a headon collision on U.S. 84. The dead woman was Mrs. Nellie Frances Welch, 29, of Port Arthur.

SAILOR

Says He Killed Cleanup Leader

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—A sailor told police Friday night he killed the man whose death touched off the 1954 vice cleanup at Phenix City, Ala. But officers said that after a night in jail Donald Turner said he couldn't remember making the statement.

Turner, 27, of Birmingham, Ala., was quoted by police chief George Gomez as saying he shot A. L. Patterson, attorney general nominee of Alabama. Patterson, a Democrat almost certain to win election, had sworn to rid Phenix City of gambling and prostitution.

Gomez said the sailor also told officers he killed a high school coach at Birmingham with a knife last June.

At Phenix City, Sheriff Lamar Murphy said Turner's statements appear to be a hoax. He said his office has received confessions in the Patterson case from as far away as California.

Alabama highway patrol chief Joe Smelly left by plane tonight for Key West. Birmingham police commissioner Eugene Connor said Smelly would contact him after talking with Turner.

When called from his jail cell today for more questioning, Turner said he couldn't remember making the statements.

The police chief said Turner gave revenge as his reason for killing Patterson. Turner was quoted as saying he was mad because he had been arrested while hitchhiking in Phenix City.

The sailor said he stabbed coach William V. Long with a knife on a Birmingham street last year and took $850 from the body.

Turner said his wife, Opal, lives in Birmingham.

Albert Fuller, former chief deputy sheriff of Phenix City, was convicted of the Patterson slaying. He is serving a life prison term.

The 1954 slaying of Patterson touched off a vice cleanup of the former gambling mecca of Phenix City in which National Guardsmen were called out for about six months to maintain a partial military rule.

Gomez said Turner, being transferred by the Navy to Key West from Charleston, S. C., called police from the Key West Airport. They arrested him in the airport cocktail lounge.

The sailor said he had had several drinks in Miami and more drinks in Key West, according to Gomez. Turner said he was in the Navy from 1950 to 1954 and recently enlisted again.

Long, former Phillips High School baseball coach in Birmingham, was found murdered beside his car near a cafe June 8. Investigators said he had been known to carry large sums of money with him, but his wallet has never been found. No arrests have been made.

Dam Project Statement Is Questioned

LUFKIN, Tex. (UP)— Gus Whiteman, president of the Neches River conservation district, Saturday protested that a statement about the feasibility of a McGee Bend dam project by the Corps of Engineers was "contrary to findings."

Whiteman said "in 1954 the Army Engineers completed a detailed study of the McGee Dam project and filed a report with Congress.

"This report pointed out that a water conservation and flood control dam would return $1.69 for every dollar invested but if the money-losing hydro- electric power feature was included in the project the rate of return would be lowered to only $1.39 for every dollar invested. This document referred to the power feature as 'economically unfeasible' and proposed it be eliminated.

Whiteman said since the Engineers said in their official findings that a smaller, non - power dam would be 'more feasible' than the hydro - electric feature, that the "statement to a southeast Texas newspaper that the corps believes the smaller dam would be uneconomical is an extremely unusual position and deserves explanation."

Whiteman said a hydro-electric unit at McGee Bend dam would require 60,000 acres of valuable land, cost 22 million dollars to build and block basin-wide development. However, he said a gas-fueled generating plant of the same capacity would cost less than $6 million and require virtually no land.

Malaria Fight Being Waged

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Reporter

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The leopard got up and charged me. I held my gun in front of me and we went down, the cat falling off me.

"The cat was on me two or three times more, and each time I kicked it off. . . . As the leopard started to come on again, I grabbed my revolver and shot it four times. Finish.

"I was clawed around the right side of the head and the left jaw; bitten along the left arm and on the right leg. . . . My wounds are mostly healed now and I am very happy to be alive."

Epistle of a big game hunter? Not at all. The writer is a sanitation engineer for the World Health Organization, a man accustomed to struggling with even deadlier foes. The leopard episode was just a melodramatic interlude in the steady warfare against malaria in the tiny Asian kingdom of Nepal, between India and Red China.

The organization works to prevent infectious diseases, to train health workers, improve sanitary conditions in more than 100 countries, warn of outbreaks of epidemic disease anywhere in the world and recommend international standards for drugs and vaccines.

What is WHO's record?

Says Director General M. G. Candau: the member nations' action "has already brought a number of benefits to all. Rapid pooling of information and experience makes it simpler to contend with diseases like influenza and poliomyelitis, to meet the threat to mental health that grows from modern conditions to life, to adapt medical education to changing needs, and to study emerging problems like that of the hereditary effect of radiations."

WHO officials cite these examples of world health progress in which their organization played a significant part:

1. A phenomenal decline in mortality throughout the world, attributable mainly to advances in sanitation and disease control.

2. There has been a decline in pestilential diseases such as cholera, typhus, smallpox, plague, relapsing fever and yellow fever. In fact, cholera now is a problem only in India and Pakistan.

Yellow fever declined about 50 per cent between 1950 and 1955.

3. Whereas malaria, up to 1948, attacked 300 million people throughout much of the world each year, killing three million, these totals have been cut 30 per cent by 10 years of antimalaria campaigns.

The disease, however, still presents a huge international problem, says WHO.

4. Tuberculosis is killing relatively fewer people each year, but still remains the greatest killer of all infectious and parasitic diseases.

RUSSIAN PROPOSAL

Cold Water Is Dashed On Plan

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The White House dashed cold water Easter Eve on Russia's latest proposal for ending nuclear tests.

An announcement relayed to White House correspondents covering President Eisenhower on his Easter weekend here said of the new Russian note: "It is nothing but a repetition of (Soviet Foreign Minister) Gromyko's announcement. The secretary of state has discussed it by telephone with the President and there will be no comment at this time."

Presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty telephoned the statement from Washington.

Hagerty said the latest Soviet note was translated and given to Dulles earlier Saturday.

Khrushchev had written the President Friday asking the United States and Britain to follow the Soviet example and announce an end to nuclear weapons tests.

If they don't Khrushchev said, the Soviet Union will have to consider itself free to resume its testing.

The Khrushchev letter served the formal diplomatic purpose of notifying the United States officially of Pussia's announced decision to suspend atomic testing. It also served the purpose of promoting Soviet propaganda on this issue which probably explains why it took the form of a letter from Premier Khrushchev to the President rather than of a note from the Foreign Office to the State Department.

May Use Expert On War

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower may bring a psychological warfare expert into the top levels of government soon in an effort to turn the propaganda tide against Russia and win some victories.

Many highly placed officials are badly worried about a decline of United States prestige throughout the world. In fact some of them are gripped by a deep feeling of defeatism about this country's ability to outwit or outmaneuver Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in psychological warfare.

This sense of fighting a lost battle was conveyed to many of his hearers at a news conference Tuesday by Secretary of State Dulles. He conceded the Soviet Union had won a propaganda victory with what he considered its phony gesture of announcing a suspension of atomic tests without international inspection and with a built-in escape clause. He then heavily emphasized disadvantages which, he said, make it difficult for the United States to compete effectively with the Soviet Union in propaganda.

Dulles, who has just turned 70, is Eisenhower's chief—and probably on many issues exclusive—adviser in the field of foreign policy strategy and tactics, including propaganda. Career diplomat George Allen, head of the U.S. Information Agency, is Eisenhower's operating chief when it comes to spreading propaganda. However, he has little voice in top level policy making of the kind necessary to wage an effective propaganda campaign against Khrushchev.

Tex. Forest Fire Rages Through Park

BASTROP, Tex. (UP) — A raging forest fire, started by a forgotten ember from a campfire and whipped by high winds, roared through the Lost Pines of Bastrop State Park Saturday.

Fire - fighters sweated in the heat of the inferno to keep it away from the cabin area of the park. At last report, the front of the fire was 400 yards from the cabins and had consumed 800 to 900 acres of the park woods.

Mrs. G. M. Marbury, wife of the park manager, said a bulldozer was on the scene trying to cut fire lanes around the cabins. There are 12 cabins at the park, which is 30 miles east of Austin, and four of them were occupied, she said.

The fire started, she said, when one of the occupants of the cabin took his sons into the woods to show them how to make a camp fire. After making the fire, the man poured dirt on it and covered it with rocks and thought it was out. However, Mrs. Marbury said pine needles in the area were extremely hard to put out once afire and apparently some were not extinguished.

Home

"Doc" West, that genial chap who seems to love everybody and who is ever doing something to make those around him happy, is back home after many weeks in St. Francis hospital. He was removed there when he had a slight heart attack.

Now he expects to be all right again. When hospitalized all company was forbidden. Now at his home he can receive callers and he is pleased to have them come once again. His home is on highway 80 east, about six miles from downtown Monroe.

Easter

Today is Easter and we hope the churches of all denominations will be filled to the limit. Some we hear go to church but twice a year, on Christmas and at Easter. This is not nearly enough, but it at least does give them a sprinkling of real religion.

We in Monroe have some fine churches and ministers who give of their time and ability for the great cause of Religion. Choirs are at their best for Easter and many a Cantata will be rendered. Go to church and really worship! It is the duty of all mankind!

Hollywood Is Shocked By Tragedy

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Lana Turner tragedy has shocked Hollywood to its roots in a manner that hasn't been seen since the scandalous 20s.

Scandal and sudden death have haunted Hollywood since its beginnings. The darkest period came in the years 1920-23, when a series of sensational news events aroused moral protests throughout the United States. So great was the clamor that a frightened industry enlisted ace politico Will Hays to clean up the town as movie czar.

In 1921, film actress Virginia Rappe died in comic Fatty Arbuckle's hotel suite in San Francisco. He was charged with manslaughter. After two hung juries, Arbuckle was acquitted but his film career was ruined.

Early in 1922, the suave director, William Desmond Taylor, was found shot to death. The murder case was kept alive for months, and love letters from Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand to Taylor helped ruin the careers of the two stars. The slaying was never solved.

The third scandal arose from the death of all-American boy Wallace Reid in 1923. Headlines revealed that the star's once athletic body had been wasted away by whisky and narcotics.

In 1932, Hollywood was shocked by the suicide of Paul Bern, MGM executive who had recently taken Jean Harlow as his bride. The reason for his death was never disclosed.

Another sensational death came on Dec. 15, 1935, when Thelma Todd was found poisoned with carbon monoxide in the garage of her home. The ignition key of her car was turned on and the heavy garage doors were closed.

Was it murder? Police investigated for months, but concluded it was accidental death.

A more recent scandal involving gunplay occurred Dec. 13, 1951. Distinguished film producer Walter Wanger accosted Jennings Lang, agent of his wife Joan Bennett, in a parking lot. Wanger shot Lang in the groin and told police, "I shot him because he was breaking up my home."

Wanger was sentenced to four months and served 102 days at the Los Angeles County honor farm. He has since returned to producing and his marriage to Miss Bennett is intact.

Now Hollywood has been rocked by another real life tragedy as dramatic as any that has been portrayed on the screen.

MASS NEGRO MEETING

Reinforcements Ordered In Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UP) — State and city authorities Saturday ordered police reinforcements to prevent possible violence at a mass meeting of Negroes Sunday in front of the Alabama capitol.

The city became "tense" after someone smeared "KKK" symbols in white paint on every highway leading into Montomery and on the capitol grounds before dawn.

We' don't expect any trouble... but we don't want any," William Lyerly, state safety director, said.

"This meeting is very inadvised," he said. "We asked them to hold the meeting at Alabama State College (a Negro school) where they have room but they refused."

Report Hours Early

Police commissioner Clyde Sellers said he ordered the second shift of the police force to report to duty two hours early.

"We're going to let them (the Negroes) have their meeting but we are taking all necessary precautions," he said.

City workmen began painting over the "KKK" symbols after burning the white paint away with blow torches. Police said they did not know who painted the signs. Twenty - five to 30 signs, about three feet high, were stenciled on city streets. Eight were painted on streets surrounding the capitol grounds in the heart of the city. One appeared a block from the state highway patrol.

A capitol guard saw the men painting but thought they were marking off traffic lines.

Unsigned Leaflets

Unsigned leaflets calling for the protest demonstration were distributed in Montgomery last Thursday. The leaflets urged Negroes throughout the state to meet "in orderly, dignified protest against legal miscarriage of justice where Negroes are concerned."

The circulars charged that a white man was not arrested for raping a Negro girl the day before Jeremiah Reeves Jr., 22, was electrocuted at Kilby Prison for the rape of a white Montgomery housewife.

Detective Capt. E. P. Brown said a rape incident was reported around March 19-20 but that no warrant was signed because investigation proved the complaint "completely unfounded."

Reb Cuban Army Cut Off–Army

HAVANA (AP)—The Cuban army General Staff proclaimed Saturday night that troops roving the Sierra Maestra mountains have isolated the main group of rebels personally led by Fidel Castro.

The announcement came only 18 hours after Castro had declared total war against President Fulgencio Batista.

A communique said the rebel contingents were fleeing deeper into the mountains under pursuit by the soldiers.

The army gave no details as to how the reported isolation of the Castro - led group was accomplished or exactly where in the mountains it had gone.

The army declared, however, that saboteurs Castro had sent into various zones of easternmost Oriente Province to wreck highway and railway transport had been decisively beaten.

There was no announcement as to how many saboteurs were involved or any casualties.

The communique discounted Castro's claims that two rebel columns had advanced, one along the northern coast and the other in the south, toward Santiago, the provincial capital, and the port of Manzanillo.

"The rebels never had a chance to advance toward Santiago and Manzanillo, much less to occupy them," the communique said. "Both cities are now enjoying complete tranquility like the rest of those in the republic."

Castro's declaration of total war had turned out to be a war of nerves. Some suporters of the rebel leaders began to grumble.

Havana was quiet. A check of potential trouble centers elsewhere in Cuba showed no unusual rebel activity.

A skirmish was reported in the mountains near Trinidad. Dispatches said two soldiers and 10 rebels were killed. But such incidents have been common for months.

Castro had announced from his Sierra Maestra hideout that "total, implacable war" would begin at 12:01 a.m. Saturday. He said his forces already were on the move.

As the hours passed, however, and nothing happened, disappointment arose among Castro's civilian supporters and sympathizers. Some complained that the time had come for deeds not words. They feared that unless Castro fought his all-out war, he would lose the confidence of Batista's enemies.

The 38,000 members of Cuba's armed forces are still deployed at strategic points to meet Castro's armed bands or to quell a general strike if one breaks out.

Castro has not indicated when he will call for a general strike, but he is counting on it to help his guerrilla fighters pin down government forces.

The government has authorized workers to kill anyone who urges them to leave their jobs. The powerfu Cuban Confederation of Labor also has promised to help break a general strike. Two strikes called by Castro failed last year.

Havana's streets, night spots and hotels were almost deserted Friday night and Saturday. Easter religious processions were called off. More police were seen on patrol.

Despite Castro's announcement that the final stage of the battle against Batista was beginning, many Cubans believe the big push will not get under way until Easter holidays end Monday morning.

Rebel sources say Castro does not want to antagonize the Roman Catholic Church and may be anxious to avoid attacks during religious celebrations.

SAILOR

Says He Killed Cleanup Leader

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—A sailor told police Friday night he killed the man whose death touched off the 1954 vice cleanup at Phenix City, Ala. But officers said that after a night in jail Donald Turner said he couldn't remember making the statement.

Turner, 27, of Birmingham, Ala., was quoted by police chief George Gomez as saying he shot A. L. Patterson, attorney general nominee of Alabama. Patterson, a Democrat almost certain to win election, had sworn to rid Phenix City of gambling and prostitution.

Gomez said the sailor also told officers he killed a high school coach at Birmingham with a knife last June.

At Phenix City, Sheriff Lamar Murphy said Turner's statements appear to be a hoax. He said his office has received confessions in the Patterson case from as far away as California.

Alabama highway patrol chief Joe Smelly left by plane tonight for Key West. Birmingham police commissioner Eugene Connor said Smelly would contact him after talking with Turner.

When called from his jail cell today for more questioning, Turner said he couldn't remember making the statements.

The police chief said Turner gave revenge as his reason for killing Patterson. Turner was quoted as saying he was mad because he had been arrested while hitchhiking in Phenix City.

The sailor said he stabbed coach William V. Long with a knife on a Birmingham street last year and took $850 from the body.

Turner said his wife, Opal, lives in Birmingham.

Albert Fuller, former chief deputy sheriff of Phenix City, was convicted of the Patterson slaying. He is serving a life prison term.

The 1954 slaying of Patterson touched off a vice cleanup of the former gambling mecca of Phenix City in which National Guardsmen were called out for about six months to maintain a partial military rule.

Gomez said Turner, being transferred by the Navy to Key West from Charleston, S. C., called police from the Key West Airport. They arrested him in the airport cocktail lounge.

The sailor said he had had several drinks in Miami and more drinks in Key West, according to Gomez. Turner said he was in the Navy from 1950 to 1954 and recently enlisted again.

Long, former Phillips High School baseball coach in Birmingham, was found murdered beside his car near a cafe June 8. Investigators said he had been known to carry large sums of money with him, but his wallet has never been found. No arrests have been made.

Dam Project Statement Is Questioned

LUFKIN, Tex. (UP)— Gus Whiteman, president of the Neches River conservation district, Saturday protested that a statement about the feasibility of a McGee Bend dam project by the Corps of Engineers was "contrary to findings."

Whiteman said "in 1954 the Army Engineers completed a detailed study of the McGee Dam project and filed a report with Congress.

"This report pointed out that a water conservation and flood control dam would return $1.69 for every dollar invested but if the money-losing hydro- electric power feature was included in the project the rate of return would be lowered to only $1.39 for every dollar invested. This document referred to the power feature as 'economically unfeasible' and proposed it be eliminated.

Whiteman said since the Engineers said in their official findings that a smaller, non - power dam would be 'more feasible' than the hydro - electric feature, that the "statement to a southeast Texas newspaper that the corps believes the smaller dam would be uneconomical is an extremely unusual position and deserves explanation."

Whiteman said a hydro-electric unit at McGee Bend dam would require 60,000 acres of valuable land, cost 22 million dollars to build and block basin-wide development. However, he said a gas-fueled generating plant of the same capacity would cost less than $6 million and require virtually no land.

It also served the purpose of promoting Soviet propaganda on this issue which probably explains why it took the form of a letter from Premier Khrushchev to the President rather than of a note from the Foreign Office to the State Department.

May Use Expert On War

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower may bring a psychological warfare expert into the top levels of government soon in an effort to turn the propaganda tide against Russia and win some victories.

Many highly placed officials are badly worried about a decline of United States prestige throughout the world. In fact some of them are gripped by a deep feeling of defeatism about this country's ability to outwit or outmaneuver Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in psychological warfare.

This sense of fighting a lost battle was conveyed to many of his hearers at a news conference Tuesday by Secretary of State Dulles. He conceded the Soviet Union had won a propaganda victory with what he considered its phony gesture of announcing a suspension of atomic tests without international inspection and with a built-in escape clause. He then heavily emphasized disadvantages which, he said, make it difficult for the United States to compete effectively with the Soviet Union in propaganda.

Dulles, who has just turned 70, is Eisenhower's chief—and probably on many issues exclusive—adviser in the field of foreign policy strategy and tactics, including propaganda. Career diplomat George Allen, head of the U.S. Information Agency, is Eisenhower's operating chief when it comes to spreading propaganda. However, he has little voice in top level policy making of the kind necessary to wage an effective propaganda campaign against Khrushchev.

Tex. Forest Fire Rages Through Park

BASTROP, Tex. (UP) — A raging forest fire, started by a forgotten ember from a campfire and whipped by high winds, roared through the Lost Pines of Bastrop State Park Saturday.

Fire - fighters sweated in the heat of the inferno to keep it away from the cabin area of the park. At last report, the front of the fire was 400 yards from the cabins and had consumed 800 to 900 acres of the park woods.

Mrs. G. M. Marbury, wife of the park manager, said a bulldozer was on the scene trying to cut fire lanes around the cabins. There are 12 cabins at the park, which is 30 miles east of Austin, and four of them were occupied, she said.

The fire started, she said, when one of the occupants of the cabin took his sons into the woods to show them how to make a camp fire. After making the fire, the man poured dirt on it and covered it with rocks and thought it was out. However, Mrs. Marbury said pine needles in the area were extremely hard to put out once afire and apparently some were not extinguished.

Negro Injured In Bike Mishap

RUSTON (Special) — A 22-year-old Negro suffered a fractured ankle when his motorbike collided with a car at 4:30 p.m. here yesterday.

City Police who investigated reported that Joe Louis Johnson, 22, was injured when a car driven by Irma McHenry, Negro, collided with his bike.

The woman was traveling on U. S. 80, and Johnson was headed south on Trenton Street.

No charges were filed, officers said. Johnson was treated at the Ruston Hospital.

Every good Methodist who realizes the need that this fine home faces at this time should donate in the collection plate as it is passed in Methodist churches today.

Home

"Doc" West, that genial chap who seems to love everybody and who is ever doing something to make those around him happy, is back home after many weeks in St. Francis hospital. He was removed there when he had a slight heart attack.

Now he expects to be all right again. When hospitalized all company was forbidden. Now at his home he can receive callers and he is pleased to have them come once again. His home is on highway 80 east, about six miles from downtown Monroe.

Easter

Today is Easter and we hope the churches of all denominations will be filled to the limit. Some we hear go to church but twice a year, on Christmas and at Easter. This is not nearly enough, but it at least does give them a sprinkling of real religion.

We in Monroe have some fine churches and ministers who give of their time and ability for the great cause of Religion. Choirs are at their best for Easter and many a Cantata will be rendered. Go to church and really worship! It is the duty of all mankind!

Hollywood Is Shocked By Tragedy

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Lana Turner tragedy has shocked Hollywood to its roots in a manner that hasn't been seen since the scandalous 20s.

Scandal and sudden death have haunted Hollywood since its beginnings. The darkest period came in the years 1920-23, when a series of sensational news events aroused moral protests throughout the United States. So great was the clamor that a frightened industry enlisted ace politico Will Hays to clean up the town as movie czar.

In 1921, film actress Virginia Rappe died in comic Fatty Arbuckle's hotel suite in San Francisco. He was charged with manslaughter. After two hung juries, Arbuckle was acquitted but his film career was ruined.

Early in 1922, the suave director, William Desmond Taylor, was found shot to death. The murder case was kept alive for months, and love letters from Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand to Taylor helped ruin the careers of the two stars. The slaying was never solved.

The third scandal arose from the death of all-American boy Wallace Reid in 1923. Headlines revealed that the star's once athletic body had been wasted away by whisky and narcotics.

In 1932, Hollywood was shocked by the suicide of Paul Bern, MGM executive who had recently taken Jean Harlow as his bride. The reason for his death was never disclosed.

Another sensational death came on Dec. 15, 1935, when Thelma Todd was found poisoned with carbon monoxide in the garage of her home. The ignition key of her car was turned on and the heavy garage doors were closed.

Was it murder? Police investigated for months, but concluded it was accidental death.

A more recent scandal involving gunplay occurred Dec. 13, 1951. Distinguished film producer Walter Wanger accosted Jennings Lang, agent of his wife Joan Bennett, in a parking lot. Wanger shot Lang in the groin and told police, "I shot him because he was breaking up my home."

Wanger was sentenced to four months and served 102 days at the Los Angeles County honor farm. He has since returned to producing and his marriage to Miss Bennett is intact.

Now Hollywood has been rocked by another real life tragedy as dramatic as any that has been portrayed on the screen.

DOG LEAVES MARK, DISAPPEARS — Three-year-old Patrick Schiro gets fresh bandage on knee nipped by a dog identified as Lady who has since disappeared from his New Orleans neighborhood. Applying bandage is his sister, Pamela Ann age 5. Patrick faces antirabies shots because of last Sunday's wound unless the dog can be found for observation. (AP Wirephoto)

4 Killed In Wreck In Miss.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — A three-car collision near here Friday night killed four men and injured three other persons, but five children in one of the vehicles were unhurt.

Dead are Jeffie Hankins, 33, of Jackson, O. B. McQueen, 26, of Taylorsville, Jack Anderson, 28, of Taylorsville, and Jean Speed Richardson 27, of Pensacola, Fla.

The injured are Mrs. Richardson, William A. Brown, 42, of Hattiesburg, and his 15-year-old daughter, Billie Mae.

Brown and six children were returning from a play at a nearby school, the highway patrol said, when the crash occurred. His two sons, Taswell, 13, and Wayne, 11, and three brothers, Sidney Earl Malone, 14, Bennie Ray Malone, 11, and Charles Wayne Malone, 10, escaped injury.

Richardson, a chemical engineer for Chemstrand Corp., at Pensacola, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H Richardson of Atlanta. Survivors also include two brothers, Joseph H. Richardson Jr., of Arabi, La., and James P. Richardson, of Augusta, Ga. Funeral arrangements were incomplete, but members of the family indicated burial would be in Atlanta.

Double funeral servies will be held for Hankins and Anderson, brothers-in-law, Monday in Laurel.

Funeral arrangements for McQueen were incomplete.

More Work On Defense Is Planned

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States decided against halting atomic tests primarily because the President and his advisers feel more work needs to be done to improve the West's nuclear defenses against Soviet attack.

President Eisenhower and the National Security Council, it is understood, agreed unanimously within the past two weeks or so that this country must continue testing to develop a more versatile supply of nuclear weapons, including anti-missile rockets.

Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles disclosed this week that the United States had considered and rejected a possible halt in nuclear testing to beat Russia to the propaganda punch.

Neither the President nor Dulles publicly spelled out the reasons behind the U.S. decision. The President said it was decided a test halt would not "be good for the United States at this time." He denounced the Soviet test suspension as a propaganda "gimmick."

Dulles said the United States believes it must go ahead and develop so-called "clean" nuclear defensive weapons until the Soviets agree to a cheat-proof inspection of a test ban and to some plan of cutting down and eventually eliminating nuclear weapons from international arsenals.

Although the United States knew it would take a propaganda beating by not announcing a test halt, the decision was made on grounds of vital military security, it is understood.

Two heights popular with sightseers overlook Rio de Janerio. One is the monolithic Sugar Loaf, and the other is Corcovado, whose name means "Hunchback."

LITTLE THEATRE

By DELL MOORE

The finishing touches are being made out at the Theatre on "Witness For the Prosecution." Remember the opening date will be the 18th of April and running through the 23rd, excluding Sunday, April 20th.

Here are a couple of items needed for the show: 6 high-back chairs that could be used for court room setting, and an English newspaper, preferably London.

Rehearsals ended Thursday night of this week to give the cast a few days off for the Easter holidays. Richard Holland journeyed to Helena, Ark., to spend Easter with his family.

Arriving today from New York is Ivan's sister, Audrey. We hope that you will have a most enjoyable visit with us, Audrey.

Mrs. J. B. (Katie) Thornhill is still down in New Orleans. We wish you a speedy recovery.

Coleen Dent and Jean Weil were out Wednesday night [illegible] hearsals. If you see either of these girls, ask [illegible] show. I know they will tell you it is a must on your date-book.

Try-outs will be next Saturday, April 12th, at 2 p.m. for "Light Up the Sky." Come on out and join the fun, or, if you aren't interested in participating in the try-outs, come on out anyway and watch. If you are bashful, we'll solve that, just give Ivan (Uttal FA 3-9614) or myself (FA 2-1996 after 6 p.m.) and we'll come by and get you. This play should really create some interest and enthusiasm among the theatre-bugs.

It's strictly satire and comedy—a real take-off on show-biz and show people. It has a cast of 11 (5 women and 6 men) aging from 20 on. . . . "Light Up the Sky" was written by Moss Hart, one and the same that directed the ever-popular "My Fair Lady," and others such as "You Can't Take It With You" and "Winged Victory."

So — Remember — we are looking for you 2 p.m. Saturday.

Dance Team Attraction On Schedule

CROSSETT (Special) — Feature attraction for the Crossett Community Concerts Association for 1958-59 will be the dance team, Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander, according to E. M. Godat, president of the organization.

Joseph Battista, pianist, and the Bel Canto Trio will present the remaining two concerts of the season.

Linn and Alexander with a company of 16 dancers, singers and musicians will present a program of American music from minstrel days to swingtime. The couple has appeared in television spectaculars for the past five years.

Battista — termed by critics as "one of the better American pianists" — played again in a New York Town Hall recital last summer.

The Bel Canto Trio composed of Joan Brainerd, soprano; Frank Porretta, tenor, and Robert Kirkham, baritone, will present a program of trios, duets and solos drawn from opera, theatre and the art songs.

A week-long drive for members in the Crossett Association was completed Saturday under the leadership of Mrs. R. Q. Conner, campaign chairman, and Mrs. Lillian Kilgariff, Community representative. Residents of Ashley County, Monticello and Bastrop assisted in the drive.

A reciprocal agreement with the Twin City Concerts Association of Monroe will afford the Crossett members the opportunity to attend concerts there next season.

Death Claims Felix B. Shipp

Felix Bertran Shipp, 51, died suddenly here yesterday afternoon from a heart attack he suffered at home.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete last night but will be under the direction of Hixon Funeral Home.

The body will lie in state at the funeral home where a rosary service will be held at 8 p.m. tonight. Final services will be in the St. Matthews Catholic Church with interment following in St. Matthews Cemetery.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Marie R. Shipp of Monroe, Mr. Shipp is survived by a son, William R. Shipp with the U. S. Navy in Alaska; a daughter, Mrs. P. V. Elder Jr., Monroe; two brothers, P. A. Shipp, Monroe, and Lewis B. Shipp, Miami; his mother, Mrs. Nell Shipp, Shreveport; and one grandson.

Mr. Shipp had been a warehouse salesman for W. J. Riley Company. His residence was at 705 Bres St.

DOG LEAVES MARK, DISAPPEARS — Three-year-old Patrick Schiro gets fresh bandage on knee nipped by a dog identified as Lady who has since disappeared from his New Orleans neighborhood. Applying bandage is his sister, Pamela Ann age 5. Patrick faces anti-rabies shots because of last Sunday's wound unless the dog can be found for observation. (AP Wirephoto)

4 Killed In Wreck In Miss.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — A three-car collision near here Friday night killed four men and injured three other persons, but five children in one of the vehicles were unhurt.

Dead are Jeffie Hankins, 33, of Jackson, O. B. McQueen, 26, of Taylorsville, Jack Anderson, 28, of Taylorsville, and Jean Speed Richardson 27, of Pensacola, Fla.

The injured are Mrs. Richardson, William A. Brown, 42, of Hattiesburg, and his 15-year-old daughter, Billie Mae.

Brown and six children were returning from a play at a nearby school, the highway patrol said, when the crash occurred. His two sons, Taswell, 13, and Wayne, 11, and three brothers, Sidney Earl Malone, 14, Bennie Ray Malone, 11, and Charles Wayne Malone, 10, escaped injury.

Richardson, a chemical engineer for Chemstrand Corp., at Pensacola, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H Richardson of Atlanta. Survivors also include two brothers, Joseph H. Richardson Jr., of Arabi, La., and James P. Richardson, of Augusta, Ga. Funeral arrangements were incomplete, but members of the family indicated burial would be in Atlanta.

Double funeral servies will be held for Hankins and Anderson, brothers-in-law, Monday in Laurel.

Funeral arrangements for McQueen were incomplete.

More Work On Defense Is Planned

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States decided against halting atomic tests primarily because the President and his advisers feel more work needs to be done to improve the West's nuclear defenses against Soviet attack.

President Eisenhower and the National Security Council, it is understood, agreed unanimously within the past two weeks or so that this country must continue testing to develop a more versatile supply of nuclear weapons, including anti-missile rockets.

Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles disclosed this week that the United States had considered and rejected a possible halt in nuclear testing to beat Russia to the propaganda punch.

Neither the President nor Dulles publicly spelled out the reasons behind the U.S. decision. The President said it was decided a test halt would not "be good for the United States at this time." He denounced the Soviet test suspension as a propaganda "gimmick."

Dulles said the United States believes it must go ahead and develop so-called "clean" nuclear defensive weapons until the Soviets agree to a cheat-proof inspection of a test ban and to some plan of cutting down and eventually eliminating nuclear weapons from international arsenals.

Although the United States knew it would take a propaganda beating by not announcing a test halt, the decision was made on grounds of vital military security, it is understood.

Two heights popular with sightseers overlook Rio de Janerio. One is the monolithic Sugar Loaf, and the other is Corcovado, whose name means "Hunchback."

LITTLE THEATRE

By DELL MOORE

The finishing touches are being made out at the Theatre on "Witness For the Prosecution." Remember the opening date will be the 18th of April and running through the 23rd, excluding Sunday, April 20th.

Here are a couple of items needed for the show: 6 high-back chairs that could be used for court room setting, and an English newspaper, preferably London.

Rehearsals ended Thursday night of this week to give the cast a few days off for the Easter holidays. Richard Holland journeyed to Helena, Ark., to spend Easter with his family.

Arriving today from New York is Ivan's sister, Audrey. We hope that you will have a most enjoyable visit with us, Audrey.

Mrs. J. B. (Katie) Thornhill is still down in New Orleans. We wish you a speedy recovery.

Coleen Dent and Jean Weil were out Wednesday night [illegible] rehearsals. If you see either of these girls, ask them [illegible] show. I know they will tell you it is a must on your date-book.

Try-outs will be next Saturday, April 12th, at 2 p.m. for "Light Up the Sky." Come on out and join the fun, or, if you aren't interested in participating in the try-outs, come on out anyway and watch. If you are bashful, we'll solve that, just give Ivan (Uttal FA 3-9814) or myself (FA 2-1996 after 6 p.m.) and we'll come by and get you. This play should really create some interest and enthusiasm among the theatre-bugs.

It's strictly satire and comedy—a real take-off on show-biz and show people. It has a cast of 11 (5 women and 6 men) aging from 20 on. . . . "Light Up the Sky" was written by Moss Hart, one and the same that directed the ever-popular "My Fair Lady," and others such as "You Can't Take It With You" and "Winged Victory."

So — Remember — we are looking for you 2 p.m. Saturday.

Dance Team Attraction On Schedule

CROSSETT (Special) — Feature attraction for the Crossett Community Concerts Association for 1958-59 will be the dance team, Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander, according to E. M. Godat, president of the organization.

Joseph Battista, pianist, and the Bel Canto Trio will present the remaining two concerts of the season.

Linn and Alexander with a company of 16 dancers, singers and musicians will present a program of American music from minstrel days to swingtime. The couple has appeared in television spectaculars for the past five years.

Battista — termed by critics as "one of the better American pianists" — played again in a New York Town Hall recital last summer.

The Bel Canto Trio composed of Joan Brainerd, soprano; Frank Porretta, tenor, and Robert Kirkham, baritone, will present a program of trios, duets and solos drawn from opera, theatre and the art songs.

A week-long drive for members in the Crossett Association was completed Saturday under the leadership of Mrs. R. Q. Conner, campaign chairman, and Mrs. Lillian Kilgariff, Community representative. Residents of Ashley County, Monticello and Bastrop assisted in the drive.

A reciprocal agreement with the Twin City Concerts Association of Monroe will afford the Crossett members the opportunity to attend concerts there next season.

Death Claims Felix B. Shipp

Felix Bertran Shipp, 51, died suddenly here yesterday afternoon from a heart attack he suffered at home.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete last night but will be under the direction of Hixon Funeral Home.

The body will lie in state at the funeral home where a rosary service will be held at 8 p.m. tonight. Final services will be in the St. Matthews Catholic Church with interment following in St. Matthews Cemetery.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Marie R. Shipp of Monroe, Mr. Shipp is survived by a son, William R. Shipp with the U. S. Navy in Alaska; a daughter, Mrs. P. V. Elder Jr., Monroe; two brothers, P. A. Shipp, Monroe, and Lewis B. Shipp, Miami; his mother, Mrs. Nell Shipp, Shreveport; and one grandson.

Mr. Shipp had been a warehouse salesman for W. J. Riley Company. His residence was at 705 Bres St.

Business Briefs

SERVICE PINS

Buddy N. Davis, manager of the Olla office of the Pineland (Southern Gas) Company, reports that seven employees recently received service pins. Davis, himself, is a 25-year man.

Those receiving the pins are Edgar Long, 30 years; Willie V. Henderson, 15 years; Elmer Etheridge, 15 years; Bruce Gough, 10 years; Earl Nugent, 10 years; W. M. Bearden, 10 years and Wilbur Manly, 10 years.

The Pineland (Southern Pine) Company includes LaSalle, Caldwell, Grant and Winn parishes. It began awarding service pins at five year intervals in 1948, to those having 10, 15, 20, 25 and 30 years of service.

BANK GAINS

The Franklin State Bank and Trust Company of Winnsboro which reported deposits of $4,836,-099 on December 31, gained 149 places in its standing among the 4,700 largest banks in the United States during 1957.

It now ranks as 4,668th largest in size compared with 4,817th place at the end of 1956.

This is revealed in the 1958 annual roll call of largest banks in the United States published Thursday by The Daily American Banker of New York which is the trade newspaper of the banking business.

There are 14,000 banks in the United States.

TELEPHONE EXPANSION

The Public Utilities Company of Crossett, Ark., has started a long range expansion program costing about $180,000 to extend telephone service to the rural areas around Crossett.

Manager R. D. Tucker said the work will be divided into two phases, the first of which is now under way and will be completed by midsummer. The second phase will be carried out within a "reasonable period of time."

The program is designed also to increase telephone capacity in some areas already designed.

In the first phase, telephone service will be extended north of Crossett to the Crossroads community, northeast on Highway 82 to the airport, east on Unity Road for about five miles and a half and south to the Frost Prairie community. This will serve 100 to 125 new customers, and will cost about $90,000.

SALES UP

The Crossett Company has issued its first quarterly financial report for 1958, showing that sales on all its products reached $9,500,-000 during the three month period as compared with $9,066,000.

All the increase was due, the report said to a 24 per cent better volume from the company's relatively new bleached food board mill. Earnings for the period were $1,005,000, compared with $838,000 in the first three months of 1957.

SHEEP SALE

The Central Louisiana Shepp Association is holding its spring sheep sale on Monday, April 14, at the W. H. Hodges Livestock Market in Alexandria.

In order to enable the sheep producers in Louisiana to buy high quality registered rams, the association also is sponsoring a pure bred ram sale. Included in this sale will be 15 Suffolks, 15 Hampshires, 14 Corriedales, and two Dorsets.

All of these rams will be ready for service and must be approved by a screening committee before they will be allowed to be sold. These rams will be on display at the auction barn from 7 a.m. until sale time at 12 noon.

The association sponsored three market sheep sales in 1957 and sold approximately 7,000 head.

MEETING DELEGATESS

Thomas O. Carpenter and Bermon E. Beckham, agency representatives for Life Insurance Company of Georgia in Monroe, have been designated delegates to the company's convention in the Sheraton - Park Hotel in Washington, D. C., April 23-26.

They earned this distinction through outstanding results in the sale of life insurance and service to policy holders during 1957. They are members of the President's Club, the top honr organization. Their wives will accompany them to the meeting.

Carpenter is a staff manager for Life of Georgia.

Corn Futures Prices Plod Steadily Ahead

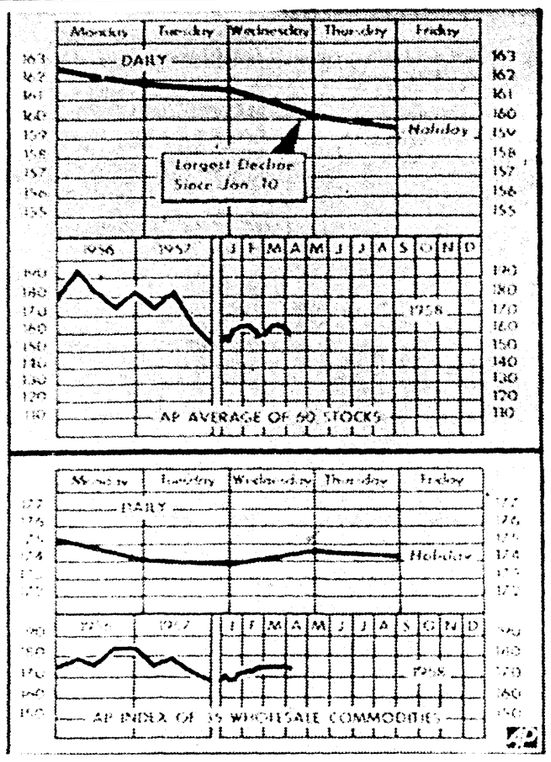
CHICAGO (AP) — Corn futures prices plodded steadily ahead every day this week on the Board of Trade, absorbing profit-taking along the way and pulling out of brief setbacks.

Other grain and soybean trading was primarily of a speculative character and without any strong influences either way.

Wheat finished the week 1½ cents a bushel higher for the May contract to 2¾ cents a bushel lower for the new crop deliveries, corn 2⅜-3 cents a bushel higher, oats ¼ higher to ⅜ lower, rye ½-2½ higher, soybeans 1⅜ higher to 1⅜ lower, and lard unchanged to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

JOBS FOR DISABLED

ALBANY, N. Y. — (UP) —The New York State Division of Employment found a record 34,000 jobs for disabled workers last year, according to Director Richard C. Brockway. Brockway said 2,200 of these jobs went to workers with major disabilities.



STOCK AVERAGE, COMMODITIES DECLINE — The Associated Press average of 60 stocks chalked up the sharpest weekly break of the year when it closed this week at 159.5 from 162.7 last week. The Commodity Index, led by nonferrous metals, declined for the third straight week, closing this week at 174.2 from 175.2 last week. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

PAST WEEK

Stock Loss Is Worst In 1958

NEW YORK (AP) — The Stock Market's loss this week was the worst of 1958.

An estimated four billion was knocked off the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, based on the fall in the Associated Press average.

This put the quoted value of listed stocks at roughly 197 billion dollars.

The AP 60-stock average dropped $3.20 to $159.50 to within hailing distance of the year's lowest closing figure of $156.60. That was on Jan. 2, first trading day of the year.

In other words, the decline has almost wiped out this year's gains made against a steady flow of poor business and economic news. The high was made Feb. 4.

The Dow Jones industrial average slumped to 440.50, not much above the closing low of the year of 436.89 reached Feb. 25.

The latest decline has stretched over eight consecutive sessions, including one day when prices were uneven. This week's big drop was accomplished in four trading days since the week was shortened by a Good Friday holiday. It was the second straight weekly fall.

Although Congress speeded anti-recession bills in participation of an Easter recess, it had no important effect on stock prices.

Of 1,367 issues traded 887 fell, 308 rose and 172 were unchanged.

The most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange were:

Lorillard, up 3¼ at 54¾ on 196,000 shares; Olin Mathieson, off 3 at 32⅞; Chrysler, off 2⅝ at 48½; U.S. Steel, off 1⅝ at 56⅞; and Bethlehem Steel, off 1⅝ at 37½.

U.S. government bonds advanced this week while corporate securities declined in the bond market.

MEETING SET

Adams Causey, royal vizier of the El Miro Temple No. 187, Knights of Khorossans, yesterday announced a meeting of the organization for tomorrow evening in Castle Hall. He urged all officers and dokeys to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 p.m. and to bring in all applications for membership.

The company, chartered under rigid Louisiana laws as an old line legal reserve company, is domiciled in Monroe. It is Monroe's only old line legal reserve company.

In it's annual report to stockholders the company management announced that all requirements have been met in an application to expand operations into Arkansas. "We expect final approval in the immediate future." President Mantrozos told the shareholders.

Business Picture Unclear

NEW YORK (AP) — Which way U.S. business in April?

For most Americans last week, the picture was anything but clear.

Job hunters could expect increased hiring in home building, road construction and projects connected with national defense.

But in most manufacturing industries—and in mining and transportation—the outlook was for layoffs and retrenchments beyond those already announced in March.

Taking the economy as a whole, signs of the usual spring upturn were conspicuous by their absence.

Here and there you could find exceptions.

With the railroads pulling in their horns all over the lot, the Milwaukee Road confidently placed a 12-million-dollar order for 1,150 new freight cars.

Caterpillar Tractor Co. reinstated a full five-day week at its plants in Peoria, Joliet, Milwaukee and San Leandro, Calif.

American Machine & Foundry Co. stepped up production of automatic pinspotters for bowling alleys from 600 to 300 a month.

These were isolated cases. Most of the key indicators at the start of April—described by Labor Secretary Mitchell as the month to watch—still pointed lower.

More than half the steel industry's productive capacity stood idle last week. Output was estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute at 1,298,000 ingot tons. Even allowing for absenteeism on Good Friday, this was the smallest for any strike-free week since 1949.

After chugging along in second gear for most of the winter, the auto industry shifted into low. New car production sagged to 66,-000, lowest for any normal operating week since 1952. In the same week last year Detroit rolled out more than 130,000 passenger models.

With sales sagging and costs pinching, some companies resorted to pay cuts. The Pennsylvania Railroad ordered a 10 per cent reduction in the pay of all employes earning more than $10,000 a year.

In Florida the rising tide of unemployment prompted the State Industrial Commission to add 10 million dollars to its estimate of jobless benefits for 1958.

The U.S. Congress, hurrying home for the Easter holidays, whipped a sheaf of antirecession bills through the legislative hopper. Ready for President Eisenhower's signature at week's end was a bill designed to pump $1,800,000,000 additional into the federal highway program. Other proposals getting rush treatment in Congress would step up the tempo of federal spending on procurement of civilian items and on public works. All are planned as a shot in the arm for business.

The population of the United States has been increasing at the rate of about 1.7 per cent a year since 1950.

BANK GAINS

The Franklin State Bank and Trust Company of Winnsboro which reported deposits of $4,836,099 on December 31, gained 149 places in its standing among the 4,700 largest banks in the United States during 1957.

It now ranks as 4,668th largest in size compared with 4,817th place at the end of 1956.

This is revealed in the 1958 annual roll call of largest banks in the United States published Thursday by The Daily American Banker of New York which is the trade newspaper of the banking business.

There are 14,000 banks in the United States.

TELEPHONE EXPANSION

The Public Utilities Company of Crossett, Ark., has started a long range expansion program costing about $180,000 to extend telephone service to the rural areas around Crossett.

Manager R. D. Tucker said the work will be divided into two phases, the first of which is now under way and will be completed by midsummer. The second phase will be carried out within a "reasonable period of time."

The program is designed also to increase telephone capacity in some areas already designed.

In the first phase, telephone service will be extended north of Crossett to the Crossroads community, northeast on Highway 82 to the airport, east on Unity Road for about five miles and a half and south to the Frost Prairie community. This will serve 100 to 125 new customers, and will cost about $90,000.

SALES UP

The Crossett Company has issued its first quarterly financial report for 1958, showing that sales on all its products reached $9,500,000 during the three month period as compared with $9,066,000.

All the increase was due, the report said to a 24 per cent better volume from the company's relatively new bleached food board mill. Earnings for the period were $1,005,000, compared with $838,000 in the first three months of 1957.

SHEEP SALE

The Central Louisiana Shepp Association is holding its spring sheep sale on Monday, April 14, at the W. H. Hodges Livestock Market in Alexandria.

In order to enable the sheep producers in Louisiana to buy high quality registered rams, the association also is sponsoring a pure bred ram sale. Included in this sale will be 15 Suffolks, 15 Hampshires, 14 Corriedales, and two Dorsets.

All of these rams will be ready for service and must be approved by a screening committee before they will be allowed to be sold. These rams will be on display at the auction barn from 7 a.m. until sale time at 12 noon.

The association sponsored three market sheep sales in 1957 and sold approximately 7,000 head.

MEETING DELEGATESS

Thomas O. Carpenter and Bermon E. Beckham, agency representatives for Life Insurance Company of Georgia in Monroe, have been designated delegates to the company's convention in the Sheraton - Park Hotel in Washington, D. C., April 23-26.

They earned this distinction through outstanding results in the sale of life insurance and service to policy holders during 1957. They are members of the President's Club, the top honr organization. Their wives will accompany them to the meeting.

Carpenter is a staff manager for Life of Georgia.

Corn Futures Prices Plod Steadily Ahead

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn futures prices plodded steadily ahead every day this week on the Board of Trade, absorbing profit-taking along the way and pulling out of brief setbacks.

Other grain and soybean trading was primarily of a speculative character and without any strong influences either way.

Wheat finished the week 1½ cents a bushel higher for the May contract to 2¾ cents a bushel lower for the new crop deliveries, corn 2⅜-3 cents a bushel higher, oats ¼ higher to ⅜ lower, rye ½-2½ higher, soybeans 1⅜ higher to 1⅜ lower, and lard unchanged to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

STOCK AVERAGE, COMMODITIES DECLINE — The Associated Press average of 60 stocks chalked up the sharpest weekly break of the year when it closed this week at 159.5 from 162.7 last week. The Commodity Index, led by nonferrous metals, declined for the third straight week, closing this week at 174.2 from 175.2 last week. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

PAST WEEK

Stock Loss Is Worst In 1958

NEW YORK (AP) — The Stock Market's loss this week was the worst of 1958.

An estimated four billion was knocked off the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, based on the fall in the Associated Press average.

This put the quoted value of listed stocks at roughly 197 billion dollars.

The AP 60-stock average dropped $3.20 to $159.50 to within hailing distance of the year's lowest closing figure of $156.60. That was on Jan. 2, first trading day of the year.

In other words, the decline has almost wiped out this year's gains made against a steady flow of poor business and economic news. The high was made Feb. 4.

The Dow Jones industrial average slumped to 440.50, not much above the closing low of the year of 436.89 reached Feb. 25.

The latest decline has stretched over eight consecutive sessions, including one day when prices were uneven. This week's big drop was accomplished in four trading days since the week was shortened by a Good Friday holiday. It was the second straight weekly fall.

Although Congress speeded anti-recession bills in participation of an Easter recess, it had no important effect on stock prices.

Of 1,367 issues traded 887 fell, 308 rose and 172 were unchanged.

The most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange were:

Lorillard, up 3¼ at 54¾ on 196,000 shares; Olin Mathieson, off 3 at 32⅞; Chrysler, off 2⅝ at 48½; U.S. Steel, off 1⅝ at 56⅞; and Bethlehem Steel, off 1⅝ at 37½.

U.S. government bonds advanced this week while corporate securities declined in the bond market.

MEETING SET

Adams Causey, royal vizier of the El Miro Temple No. 187, Knights of Khorossans, yesterday announced a meeting of the organization for tomorrow evening in Castle Hall. He urged all officers and dokeys to attend the meeting, which will begin at 8 p.m. and to bring in all applications for membership.

Here and there you could find exceptions.

With the railroads pulling in their horns all over the lot, the Milwaukee Road confidently placed a 12-million-dollar order for 1,150 new freight cars.

Caterpillar Tractor Co. reinstated a full five-day week at its plants in Peoria, Joliet, Milwaukee and San Leandro, Calif.

American Machine & Foundry Co. stepped up production of automatic pinspotters for bowling alleys from 600 to 800 a month.

These were isolated cases. Most of the key indicators at the start of April—described by Labor Secretary Mitchell as the month to watch—still pointed lower.

More than half the steel industry's productive capacity stood idle last week. Output was estimated by the American Iron & Steel Institute at 1,298,000 ingot tons. Even allowing for absenteeism on Good Friday, this was the smallest for any strike-free week since 1949.

After chugging along in second gear for most of the winter, the auto industry shifted into low. New car production sagged to 66,000, lowest for any normal operating week since 1952. In the same week last year Detroit rolled out more than 130,000 passenger models.

With sales sagging and costs pinching, some companies resorted to pay cuts. The Pennsylvania Railroad ordered a 10 per cent reduction in the pay of all employes earning more than $10,000 a year.

In Florida the rising tide of unemployment prompted the State Industrial Commission to add 10 million dollars to its estimate of jobless benefits for 1958.

The U.S. Congress, hurrying home for the Easter holidays, whipped a sheaf of antirecession bills through the legislative hopper. Ready for President Eisenhower's signature at week's end was a bill designed to pump $1,800,000,000 additional into the federal highway program. Other proposals getting rush treatment in Congress would step up the tempo of federal spending on procurement of civilian items and on public works. All are planned as a shot in the arm for business.

The population of the United States has been increasing at the rate of about 1.7 per cent a year since 1950.

Sometime late this month, Durward A. Young Jr. of Albuquerque, representing the paleface bowmen, will set in council and
